Roosevelt To Submit British Aid Plan Today

His Message May Ask Congress for $7,000,000,000 Lease-Loan Fund

By Cecil B. Dickson
International News Service Staff Writer

President Roosevelt will ask the new Seventy-seventh Congress today for "blank check" authority to handle a multi-billion dollar lease-loan British aid program, high officials disclosed last night.

The President will deliver his annual message before a joint session of Congress at 2 p. m. (E. S. T.) in the historic House chamber. It is about 3,000 words long, as finally whipped into shape yesterday.

Not since Woodrow Wilson went before Congress in April, 1917, to ask for a declaration of war against Germany, has a message from a President been awaited by Congress with such interest.

White House intimates revealed President Roosevelt would ask for a British aid program far in excess of any figure thus far speculated upon. It may, they intimated, forecast an outlay that eventually might total $7,000,000,000.

The address today will be supplemented by the annual budget message to be submitted Wednesday.

This budget will call for $10,000,000,000 for national defense, slashes in relief and other nondefense activities of the Government totaling $1,000,000,000, and will recommend enactment of new tax legislation to raise some $1,000,000,000 in revenue, it was learned.

In today's message, it was said, the

Davis, Unofficial 'Peace Envoy,' Asks Congressional Quiz

New York, Jan. 5 (AP).—William Rhodes Davis, international oil operator mentioned recently as a one-time bearer to the United States of a Nazi offer to negotiate an "honorable and just" peace with the Allies, said today he had asked a Congressional investigation of "charges and allegations made against me."

In his first press conference since he was identified by Verne Marshall, chairman of the No Foreign War Committee, as having met with official indifference in attempting to present a peace proposal shortly after the European war began, the 52-year-old Davis made public a letter to Senator Burton K. Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, asking an opportunity to appear before Wheeler's committee.

11 Navy Fliers Die in Crash; 4 Had Survived Earlier Wreck

Men Who Bailed Out of Bomber In Storm Thursday Killed as Transport Crashes Into Mountain in Heavy Rain

By the Associated Press

San Diego, Calif., Jan. 5.—Eleven Navy fliers, including four who parachuted from a storm-tossed bomber in Texas Thursday, perished last night in a flaming naval transport which crashed in a rainstorm on Mother Grundy Peak, 35 miles southeast of here.

The transport, a two-motored Douglas R3D-1, struck a boulder atop the 3,068-foot mountain about 6:30 p. m. Fire and explosion followed. The ship had left Big Spring, Tex., several hours earlier with the four fliers who had parachuted from the bomber near Lamesa, three officers named to investigate the accident, and four other fliers.

Police were informed all bodies were recovered and were en route to San Diego.

Ground crews reached the wreckage today, but were delayed removing the bodies while 50 CCC workers from Minnewawa camp attempted to cut a path through the brush that covered the mountain.

W. T. Preston, caretaker at Barrett Dam, near the peak, said a rancher near his home reported the underside of the plane appeared to be afire before the transport crashed, possibly while attempting a landing.

State forestry officers, however, said information they obtained at the scene indicated the fire did not start until after the crash.

The officers reported the pilot evidently realized the transport was about to crash and gave the craft full throttle in attempting to climb over the mountain.

Ranchers said the plane's motors hesitated just before the crash, and then roared with sudden power. Navy fliers said the motors always hesitate just before full throttle.

After crashing almost at the top of the peak the plane plunged down the slope, some of the wreckage being found a quarter mile from the summit.

Offer to Guarantee Against Stoppages, Call for Arbitration

An offer to call no strikes in defense industries if employers will arbitrate all disputes came yesterday from the Metal Trades division of the American Federation of Labor.

A second "speed-up" step in the national rearmament drive was taken in a War Department order decentralizing supervision of its huge emergency building program by creating nine construction zones, with a zone constructing quartermaster in charge of each.

And Matthew Woll, A. F. of L. vice president and head of the League of Human Rights, Freedom and Democracy, appealed to more than 100 national and international unions of the A. F. of L. to join in helping Great Britain "to our fullest capacity."

The no-strike offer, announced by John P. Frey, president of the metal trades division, covers 13 unions whose members range from general laborers to highly skilled machinists, engineers and draftsmen. Membership of the 13 unions exceeds 850,000. Shipbuilding, which is being vastly expanded, is an important defense field in which union metal tradesmen are operating.

In a statement announcing their decision, officers of the unions said:

"The question of international defense now involves the most speedy production of all goods, materials required for our own protection, and supplying munitions of war to Great Britain . . . There has developed a

5-Year Record Cold Swamps D. C. Garages

Yesterday's Low 22, And Forecast Is For Worse Today

Winter tightened its grip on Washington yesterday, holding the mercury to a high mark of 28 degrees and setting a five-year low temperature record of 22 degrees for January 5.

Subfreezing weather that put hundreds of automobiles out of commission will continue today, with a reading of 20 degrees or lower expected early this morning.

Garages yesterday were swamped with calls from motorists unable to start their cars. The American Automobile Association alone reported a 100 per cent increase in distress calls over the normal Sunday. More than 350 had been received at A. A. A. headquarters by nightfall.

Park police ordered fords in Rock Creek Park closed late in the afternoon when approaches froze, causing autos to skid. Firemen were called out frequently to extinguish chimney blazes caused by high furnace, stove and grate fires.

The 22-degree low temperature recorded in the early morning hours equaled the minimum of January 5, 1935, but was far from the all-time record for the date of 3 below zero, set in 1877.

The cold wave covered most of the Nation, bringing subfreezing temperatures even to the deep South. A blanket of deep snow covered much of the northern half of the country.

No Birthday Ball Needed

1940 Funds to Fight Paralysis Idle in Prince Georges Dispute

Prince Georges County not only has no plans for a President's Birthday Ball this month, but has yet to spend any part of the $1,200 collected in last year's fight against infantile paralysis, The Post learned last night.

Disagreement among members of the committee in charge of the funds is understood to be the main reason why the money was not spent.

Dr. James I. Boyd, committee chairman, said it was his understanding the money had to be spent exclusively for paralysis victims. The other committee members, Walter F. Mulligan and Mrs. Ralph J. Sheffer, expressed the opinion that the funds should be used for the prevention and correction of other bone-deformity cases among children when the money was not needed by poliomyelitis sufferers.

Prince Georges County last year raised about $2,400 in the paralysis drive—more than any county in the State. Of this amount, half went to the county and the other half to the national Foundation for the Victims of Infantile Paralysis.

The last meeting of the Prince Georges County Birthday Ball Committee was held shortly after the 1940 drive last winter. Dr. Boyd admitted yesterday there has been some dissension in the committee and that "things are in a very much upset state."

Disorders Mount In Bucharest, Germans Mass Near Bulgaria

By Robert B. Parker, jr.
Associated Press Staff Writer

Budapest, Hungary, Jan. 5.—Rumania was cut off completely from the outside world tonight as the Russian ministers to four southeastern European countries headed toward Moscow for a conference with Kremlin leaders on the establishment of Rumania as a Nazi military camp.

All international telephone communications with Rumania were banned. Even fast international trains stopped at the frontier.

Behind this wall of silence Germany's Balkan army was consolidating its position along the Danube River facing Bulgaria, along the entire Russia frontier, and in cities within a few miles of Yugoslavia.

Disorders in Rumania

Although the new communications ban affected even diplomatic telephone calls, reports brought across the Danube to the Bulgarian town of Russe said the German army is contending with mounting Rumanian disorders which began with widespread sabotage by railroad employes in the so-called "Communist wing" of the Rumanian Iron Guard.

While interest centered in the recall of the four Russian Ministers to Moscow for consultation over the Nazi penetration in the Balkans, it was reported in Soviet circles that the Kremlin already has warned Berlin against a "step which might seriously endanger good relations between the two countries."

The four ministers were the envoys to Bulgaria, Yugoslavia, Rumania and Hungary.

Before the communications edict went into effect, diplomatic reports from Bucharest said strong Nazi motorized columns had arrived at Giurgiu directly across the Danube from Russe with considerable bridge-building equipment and a large corps of engineers.

Danube Reported Mined

Rumanian railroad authorities were ordered by the Germans to keep the line from Bucharest to Constanta, Rumania's Black Sea port, in perfect condition for possible emergency use.

Bucharest diplomatic reports also said the Rumanians, under Nazi guidance, had mined the Danube at Galatza, which recently has been the scene of several frontier clashes between the Rumanians and Russians.

End of 20-Day Siege

'Bardia Pubs Open?' Ask Aussies; Radio Breaks 'Sad News' to Italy

By George C. Jordan
Associated Press Staff Writer

Rome, Jan. 5.—Giovanni Ansaldo, authoritative Fascist editor, broadcast to the nation today that the fall of Bardia could be expected at any time and this will be a "sad piece of news for us."

"Four hours are enough to decide the fate of Bardia," said Ansaldo. "While we are speaking to you, are (Gen. Annibale) Bergonzoli and his men still holding out against the English? It may be that they have given way before the preponderant masses of English mechanized forces."

For Gen. Bergonzoli, whom the British call "Gen. Electric Whiskers," and his men, Ansaldo voiced the highest praise.

The editor said the Italians had too much respect for themselves and their army to try to pretend that the loss of Bardia would be only a small victory for the British.

"The habit of minimizing every enemy success is one which we do not like," he said. "If Bardia has fallen, this will be a new British success, local if you like, but still a considerable one and a sad piece of news for us."

New York, Jan. 5.—The Italian short wave radio today asserted the British offensive in Libya had "proved a fiasco," because it had failed to shake Italian morale at home.

By Edward Kennedy
Associated Press Staff Writer

With British Forces in Bardia, Libya, Jan. 5.—Just before the final assault on the last pocket of Italian resistance in Bardia a company of Australian infantry was sprawled in a thin line along the base of a rocky hillock—waiting the attack order.

They were in high spirits and shouted:

"What time do the 'pubs' close in Bardia? We mean to get in there tonight."

A short time later the yelling shock troops, who came 7,000 miles for this great desert battle against Premier Mussolini's Blackshirts, triumphantly entered this gateway to Eastern Libya.

Theirs was the enthusiasm and pent-up energy of months of waiting in desert camps for real action, and they made the most of it.

They yelled and sang. Their favorite song was "We're Off to See the Wizard of Oz."

You could hear them singing this song even after the Italian artillery opened up against them.

Bayonet charges played an important part in the capture but the Australians said not many Italians fought it out.

The appearance of these gleaming blades usually resulted in surrender, they said.

Privates took as many as 30 prisoners indi-

Belgrade, Yugoslavia, Jan. 5.—German troop movements into Italy suddenly have been accelerated and if the present rate of transport is continued, there will be nearly 18 German divisions south of the Brenner pass on February 1, it was learned tonight.

War planes of the Reich are flying in steadily increasing numbers from Wiener Neustadt to Klagenfurt and Villach, and from these south Austrian bases to Gorizia and Campo Formio, then southward to Italian air bases near the Adriatic and Tyrrhenian coasts and to new Sicilian bases, it has been learned.

Information from the Yugoslav-Hungarian and Yugoslav-Rumanian frontiers, and from Budapest sources at the same time, provides proof that the mass movement of German troops into Rumania is being continued, and even intensified, with every passing day. Military sources at Belgrade estimate that this pres-

'We Want Some More'

London's Women, Boys Help Put Out Rain of Fire Bombs

By David Anderson

London (Monday), Jan. 6.—Fire fell on London again last night. For a time early in the evening it almost seemed as if the city were fated to undergo an attack comparable with that which wrecked so much in the ancient heart of the capital last Sunday, but the intensity of the attack fizzled. The air ministry appraised it as one of "middling" strength.

Antiaircraft artillery, heard before the sirens went, raised a barrage of such density and roar that it was difficult to know whether bombs were falling down or shells were flying up. A tell-tale reddish glow here and there indicated that a few buildings were in flames. However, they soon were brought into control.

"All clear" was given in London shortly after midnight. The enemy squadrons attacking the capital were not large. A great portion of the fires they started were put out swiftly. High explosives wrecked some homes in several residential areas, yet casualties were believed to have been light.

Women, Boys Douse Bombs

A highlight of the civil defense measures taken during the past week has been the organization of a widespread corps of "fire-bomb fighters." Last night they had their first real chance to demonstrate their work.

One district, on which were showered hundreds of small flaming bombs, produced a singular spectacle when as many men, women and youths as there were bombs ran out from doorways and extinguished the missiles, which weighed about 3 pounds, that plunked to earth around them.

Then the exultant Londoners began chanting "We want more," like an American crowd demanding a touchdown. The raiders did not disappoint them long, as a third wave for that area soon passed over, releasing incendiaries anew.

Earlier in the day the narrow streets of the old "City" were thronged with sightseers who gazed on the blackened walls and shells of famous churches, and the mounds of dust and masonry where engineers had been dynamiting.

Provinces Bombed

London bore the brunt of last night's enemy attack but other parts of the country fared worse than the capital during the morning and afternoon. A small number of people were reported to have been injured when two places in East Anglia were raided by single planes dropping scattered bombs.

The spearhead of a German air attack on Britain Saturday night was directed at West England and South Wales. The German radio announced that Avonmouth, which is the harbor town of Bristol, was the objective.

The Air Ministry said today a number of people were killed or injured when explosives and fire bombs were rained down, giving the town its longest raid of the war.

News comes from Bristol concerning the Nazi attack of Friday night, stating that hundreds of fires had been averted by the prompt application of the lessons learned from the "City of London" last Sunday. The residents "pounced on the incendiaries like terriers on rats."

Princeton Star Burned Trying Vainly to Save Mother in Fire

Allerdice Rescues Father, but Brother Perishes in Flames

By International News Service

Indianapolis, Ind., Jan. 5.—David Allerdice, jr., 22, Princeton University student and one of the Nation's leading football stars, today was seriously injured in a futile attempt to rescue his mother and 7-year-old brother from their burning home.

The mother, Cordelia, and brother, Tony, were dead when firemen arrived and forced Allerdice to leave the burning house. Firemen then removed the two bodies. Allerdice had previously rescued his father, David, sr., who was critically burned.

The football star, who last played in the East-West All-Star game for charity at San Francisco, returned home early today to find the house in flames. He rushed the front door, and broke it open with his shoulder.

Finding his father in a weakened condition, attempting to rescue the mother and son, the football star first carried the father to the front yard. He then rushed back into the house, and was almost overcome before firemen reached him.

Requisites for Marriage

Morals, Not 'Oomph,' Wanted In Mates, Church Group Says

The girls of Southeast Protestant churches won't marry "him" simply because he is "tall, dark and handsome." Nor will the boys propose because "she" is just blond and beautiful.

They want something more, they indicated last night in discussing "How to Choose a Mate" at the Institute on "Living in the Christian Family" at the Washington City Church of the Brethren, Fourth Street and North Carolina Avenue Southeast. They want mates with Christian personalities.

Mates with such personalities, some of them said in interviews at a tea before a youth mass meeting, would be considerate, thoughtful, kind, courteous, intelligent and understanding. These qualities would help make a happy home, they contended.

Miss Janet Wertz said the man she marries "must like church work," and be intelligent and neat. "Of course, I've got to love him," she quickly added. She is an active youth worker at Metropolitan Presbyterian Church and works in a downtown department store.

Howard Saltzman, 18, student at the Georgetown University Foreign Service School, said he wanted a

Breaking a Great Army

By Philip S. Taylor
United Press Staff Writer

Cairo, Jan. 5.—Italy's base of Bardia fell in shambles today to Britain's invasion of Libya, after 20 days of savage siege, and all its 25,000 defenders including the Fascist commander were taken prisoners in the first major British victory of the war on Italian soil.

The complete capture of Bardia at 1 p. m., after the rout of a suicidal force of about 5,000 Italian "Terribili" holding out in defense to the southeast, was announced in a communique of the British Middle East command tonight.

The hoisting of the Union Jack above the Bardia government house meant the complete shattering of Marshal Graziani's Italian army of invasion, which in September struck 75 miles across Egypt to Sidi Barrani, only to be thrown back in one of the most disastrous routs in military history.

80,000 Italians Lost

With the capture of Bardia, Italy's army for invading Egypt "no longer exists," British military sources said.

They estimated that Marshal Graziani now has lost about 80,000 of the 250,000 men he was believed to have had in North Africa.

Gen. Annibale Bergonzoli, handsome bearded commander who resisted valiantly within Bardia because Premier Mussolini had ordered the base defended "at all costs," surrendered to the British conquest, led by wildly-shouting Australian troops.

Tonight's communique said that Gen. Bergonzoli was captured along with a corps commander and four of his senior generals.

Thus, Britain's offensive has stripped Italy of at least 10 of its best fighting leaders in the past month, according to official accounts.

Bardia Falls, 25,000 Give Up With Generals

Anzacs Enter Town, A Flaming Shambles, Capture 50 Tanks

Not a single Italian soldier escaped death or capture in the taking of Bardia, it was stated, and the amount of war loot was enormous, including 50 tanks, 45 of them swift "Whippets."

Streets of Bardia were in flames —from incessant aerial, naval and artillery bombardment—when the British vanguard of Australian troops stormed in behind tanks and low-slung Bren Gun carts.

From all sides Italian soldiers swarmed out, raising their weapons above their hands in surrender, and there were only scattered points of resistance, dispatches to Cairo said.

British mechanized forces already are sweeping on past Bardia toward the Fascist base of Tobruk, 65 miles westward, where Marshal Graziani is struggling to reorganize the remnants of his forces for a strong stand in defense of Italy's richest African colony.

All Resistance Ceases

The extent of the Italian casualties within Bardia, under constant bombardment of British bombing planes, warships and artillery for the past three days was not disclosed in tonight's communique, which said:

"Libya: All resistance in Bardia ceased at 1 p. m. today. The town, with the total forces defending it and all stores and equipment now are in our hands.

"Gen. Bergonzoli, commanding the Italian forces in Bardia, another corps commander and four senior generals are prisoners of war.

"It is not yet possible to make a full count, but the prisoners so far captured exceed 25,000. Among other booty captured or destroyed were 45 light and 5 medium tanks.

Gen. Bergonzoli, who commanded Italian troops in the Spanish civil war, is known as "the general with the electric beard."

The British troops storming into Bardia—with the "Aussies" leading them behind plunging tanks—found the town a blazing, bombed-out shambles as result of the British siege.

The doom of Bardia, 15 miles across the Egyptian frontier, was sealed when "the whole northern sector" of the beleaguered town surrendered Saturday evening, an official communique of the British Middle East command said.

(In Belgrade, a newspaper dispatch from Berlin said that Graziani, fearful of a sudden British sweep upon Tobruk, 65 miles west of Bardia, had appealed for two German mechanized divisions to come to his rescue and that Adolf Hitler has decided that "now the Italians will get them.")

Escape Cut Off

Many thousands of the Italian prisoners were understood to have surrendered in the bomb-torn and fire-drenched northern part of Bardia where they were cut off from all rescue with their backs to the Mediterranean.

One of the most combined bombardments of warships, planes and big artillery of the war in the Near East broke the resistance of the Bardia garrison.

Throughout Saturday and last night the town was subjected to "incessant air attacks," the R. A. F. Middle East command reported.

Sir Andrew Brown-Cunningham, commander in chief of the British Mediterranean fleet, said that throughout Saturday his warships pounded shells into Bardia and its defenses, shattering Italian troops, tanks and transport vehicles.

The only British naval casualties were aboard the gunboat Aphis which was hit, presumably by the Italian shore guns, it was said.

Gen. Charles de Gaulle's headquarters in London announced that "Free French" marines, landed on the coast west of Bardia from war vessels, had aided the British troops in cutting the main road to Tobruk.)

(The British communique reporting the surrender of the northern part of Bardia also said that "on the Sudan frontier there is no change. On the northern frontier district in Kenya our patrols are continuing their activity."

Natives Scatter Italians

(Native Spahi troops of the "Free French" forces were said officially in London to have clashed with the Italians in the Sudan, "scattering them and killing many").

Today's Royal Air Force communique, described "incessant" bombings of Bardia, Italian airdromes across eastern Libya and the great Italian naval base of Tripoli.

On a reconnaissance flight over Tripoli on January 1, the communique said, it was disclosed that a 10,000-ton Italian motor vessel anchored in the middle harbor had been sunk in previous British aerial bombardments.

One British fighter plane was lost over the western desert.

Although Bardia, a town of about 2,400 normal population and a base for German U-boats in the early part of the World War, has been virtually reduced to rubble by the 20-day siege, its capture is of major strategic importance for Britain's counter-invasion of Libya.

It will provide an excellent springboard for the impending attack on the larger and more heavily fortified Italian naval and supply base of Tobruk,—an attack for which British mechanized units already are paving the way.

British military leaders, although conceding that the Italian garrison fought with gallantry in defense of Bardia, described the orders of Mussolini and the Fascist high command for a defense of the base "at all costs" as "criminal" because the situation of the garrison was hopeless from the start.

Woll Urges Unions To Help British

New York, Jan. 5 (AP).—An appeal to more than 100 union affiliates of the American Federation of Labor to aid British workers was made today by Matthew Woll, A. F. L. vice president and president of the League for Human Rights, Freedom and Democracy.

"We of organized labor have two important functions to perform," Woll wrote them. "One, to make of this country an 'arsenal of Democracy,' as the President put it; two, to rally America's workers to give every possible aid to the British workers, who, together with the rest of the civilian population, has suffered before."

Pope Pleads for 'Durable Peace And Ordered Tranquillity'

By the Associated Press

Vatican City, Jan. 5 (AP).—Pope Pius XII said today there could be no foretelling where the march of events would lead "but our longings, our prayer, our wish is just and durable peace and ordered tranquillity for the world."

The Pope spoke to nobles, among whom was his own Pacelli family, in an audience accorded them every Epiphany and his address was in answer to a discourse by Roman Prince Domenico Orsini, member of one of Rome's two oldest noble families and an attendant at the Papal throne.

Pope Pius congratulated them on their lineage and spiritual and material well-being.

"But," he added, "as every rich patrimony, this, too, bears strict duties . . . two especially: One, the duty of not dissipating such treasures but of transmitting them intact, even increased if possible, to those coming after; of resisting, therefore, the temptation of not seeing in them anything but the means of an easy life—more pleasant, more exquisite, more refined. Two, the duty of not keeping for one's self these goods but of making use of them largely for the advantage of those less favored by providence."

Referring briefly to the war, the Pope said that "in the present hour in which the heavens are disturbed by guarded, suspected nights, your spirit, while nobly observing the seriousness or rather the austerity of a life which excludes all lightheartedness and every frivolous pleasure incompatible for every gentle heart with the spectacle of so much suffering, feels ever deeper the impulse toward charitable work which impels you toward increasing and multiplying by your merits the release of human miseries and poverty."

ent rate of transport will have concentrated between 35 and 45 divisions in Rumania by the end of January.

German troops have landed at Durazzo, in Albania, and German dive-bombers, coastal patrol planes and reconnaissance machines are already operating in conjunction with Italian planes.

In the opinion of neutral military quarters and army circles here, it is now only a matter of days or weeks until the German army begins blitzkrieg operations on the Albanian front in an effort to end within three to five weeks' time what Germans here refer to as the "Italo-Greek episode."

Greeks Hurl Italians Back

Athens, Jan. 5 (AP).—Italian counter-attacks in Albania were hurled back by the Greeks today with heavy Fascist losses, and the Greeks have succeeded in capturing new coastal positions, a government spokesman reported tonight.

He said about 250 men and officers were seized in the day's actions.

The Italians, whose "stiff resistance" was overcome by the Greeks, fell back toward the important seaport of Valona, toward which the Greeks are driving, the spokesman added.

"The Italians abandoned in our hands about 100 prisoners, including a number of officers," the official said.

"Further northward, our units attacked, pushed their lines forward and occupied new positions.

"Among these was a height of considerable strategic importance."

"The enemy defended itself in this region stubbornly, but was overcome, and we took 150 men, 4 officers and war materials."

Churchill Hails 'Fine Feat of Arms' By Australians

London, Jan. 5.—Prime Minister Churchill sent the following message today to Prime Minister Robert Gordon Menzies of Australia:

"I send you heartiest congratulations from all your friends here upon the magnificent manner wherein the Australian offensive against Bardia was opened. The piercing of the western sector constitutes a fine feat of arms and I trust and believe it is the prelude to even greater success."

The Italians spent four years fortifying the Libyan seaport.

frontier, caused nervousness in Belgrade.

However, German quarters in Belgrade were said to admit openly that Yugoslavia would be treated as "another Sweden if she behaved."

With 40 troop-laden trains moving daily through Hungary toward Rumania, the summons to the Soviet ministers was the first concrete evidence of extraordinary Russian interest. The German movements have been under way on a large scale for the last week.

Linked to Nazi Moves

Soviet quarters in Belgrade declared the homegoing was linked with "new military developments in Rumania and Hungary and German troop movements toward Dobruja."

(Dobruja, a post-World War province of Rumania, lies on the Black Sea south of the Danube estuary, which forms its boundary with Bessarabia, former Rumanian territory now ceded to Russia. The southern part of Dobruja has been ceded to Bulgaria in an Axis-dictated settlement with Rumania.

The call to the four envoys was said to have come shortly after the Bulgarian Communist Party distributed leaflets in Sofia saying that "Soviet Russia will not allow a single German soldier to set foot on Bulgaria."

(Bulgaria is a potential avenue for offense action either against the Dardanelles and Turkey or against Greece.)

Diplomatic dispatches from Bucharest said all Rumanian towns on the Danube facing Bulgaria in the 250-mile stretch between Turnu-Severin and Giurgiu had been emptied to permit billeting of German troops.

A connection was also seen between the journeys of the envoy and the current visit to Vienna of Bulgaria's premier, Bogdan Philoff, ostensibly to consult an eminent physician. King Boris of Bulgaria was also reported to be on his way to Germany.

Philoff, who was accompanied by the German Minister to Bulgaria was said in Bulgarian circles to have gone to Vienna upon "invitation" from Berlin.

Turkey Uneasy

Bulgarians feel that their country has been given a choice between permitting passage of German troops to Greece and Turkey or facing a full-dress invasion by Nazi troops.

Bulgaria is reported making unspecified military preparations but the odds are that she would permit German passage after protest.

From all other Balkan capitals came reports of military preparations, including news from Ankara that Turkey expects to hold her conscripts under arms another year because of "exceptional circumstances."

Advices from Salonika said Greece was calling more men to the army.

It was reported from Yugoslavia that reserve officers there were being held beyond their scheduled demobilization time.

Other reports said the Rumanian army would have 300,000 men under arms by January 20, under orders of German army commanders.

The Soviet Minister to Yugoslavia arrived at Budapest this morning from Belgrade to join the Russian Minister to Hungary for the rail trip to Moscow by way of Berlin.

The Soviet Minister to Rumania was understood to have flown to Sofia, where he and his companion Minister to Bulgaria were to board a Soviet plane for Moscow.

There have been conflicting reports regarding the German-Russian relations over the Nazi move into Rumania and to the Bulgarian frontier.

One current report was that Germany asked for a free hand to move troops through Bulgaria against Greece and Turkey, promising Russia to negotiate for the Soviets to take over Rumanian Moldavia.

Other reports said Germany, planning to go through Bulgaria to Turkey and Greece, but not sure of Russian intentions, would have the Rumanian and Hungarian armies on guard on the Russian frontier.

The massive German military transport continued across Hungary into Rumania. It was reported the Germans virtually have taken over administration of Rumanian railways. In Hungary they occupy part of the railway headquarters.

Black German bridge builders are reported quartered at strategic places along the Danube and at some places along the river Nazi troops are living in trains on railway sidings.

Diplomatic dispatches from Rumania told of Jewish schools being taken over as barracks for German soldiers.

German soldiers and officers also are billeted at private homes in Bucharest and in towns and villages throughout the country.

Eight Bucharest hotels are occupied exclusively by German staff officers.

A German establishment called the "expeditionary force headquarters" was reported set up in Bucharest, with 350 new high-ranking officers there.

All airports, civil and military, have been taken over by the Nazis in Rumania and dispatches told of airplanes and tanks being concentrated at Roman, one of the largest towns in Moldavia and close to the Russian frontier.

Communists Arrested

Copyright by New York Times

Russe, Bulgaria, Jan. 5.—News arrived here from Rumania today that the government still is definitely in control, but that Communist demonstrations are increasing and a number of Communists were arrested yesterday and today.

The opposition to the Iron Guard is increasing its numbers at the expense of the government supporters. The government is steadily taking measures against the Communists, but without much success. German troops are openly helping the government to retain its position but the results are negative.

The increasing cost of living adds to the internal difficulties. Some prices are four times higher than they were two months ago.

German troops are being moved partly toward the Russian border, partly toward the Black Sea in northern Dobruja and partly toward the Yugoslav frontier. Competent observers here express the opinion that if Germany should try to go through the Balkans it would be via Yugoslavia which, following the River Vardar, provides the shortest route to Greece.

Now is the Time to Beware of Contagious Colds!

At a treacherous time like this, with contagious colds all around you, what you do today may save you and your family a lot of sickness, worry and trouble later.

Follow these simple rules of health: Live normally. Avoid excesses. Eat simple food. Drink plenty of water. Keep elimination regular. Take some exercise daily—preferably outdoors. Get plenty of rest and sleep.

Then use these two time-tested treatments when needed.

AT THE FIRST SNIFFLE, SNEEZE OR SIGN OF NASAL IRRITATION . . . put a few drops of Vicks Va-tro-nol up each nostril right away. This helps to prevent many colds from developing, because Va-tro-nol is expressly designed to help Nature's own defenses against colds. (If a head cold causes stuffiness, you'll find that a few drops of Va-tro-nol helps clear the clogging mucus and makes breathing freer and easier.)

IF A CHEST COLD OR COUGHING COLD DEVELOPS (some colds get by all precautions) depend on Vicks VapoRub to relieve miseries. Rub VapoRub on throat, chest and back and cover with a warmed cloth. VapoRub acts to bring relief 2 ways at once. It stimulates surface of chest and back like a warming poultice. At the same time it releases helpful medicinal vapors that are breathed direct into the irritated air passages.

Both Va-tro-nol and VapoRub have been tested through years of use in millions of homes. When you use these two medicines you are not experimenting, you are not taking needless chances. Remember: If the condition of the cold fails to respond quickly to treatment—or if more serious trouble is indicated—call your family physician right away. In the meantime be prepared! Get a bottle of Vicks Va-tro-nol and a jar of Vicks VapoRub today—have them handy, ready to use.

ESCAPE Washday COLDS and HEAVY IRONING, too

Phone Manhattan. Avoid colds and chapped hands that come from leaving a steaming tub to hang clothes outdoors in wintry weather. Avoid the weariness of ironing heavy linens. It costs so little.

9 pounds for only 63c

That low price includes Manhattan's famous "Net Bag" washing—in 10 changes of water—which means cleaner clothes, whiter whites, brighter colors, longer wear. And it includes all heavy ironing, too.

All Flatwork Ironed

Sheets, table linens and all other flatwork beautifully finished, ready to use. Clothes returned in waxed paper—just damp enough for easy ironing. All work of perfect Manhattan quality. Try this service this week. Phone now.

An Open Letter to Congress

WE, the undersigned, address you as private citizens, anxious for the safety of our institutions and our country in a world overfull of hostile aggression. We speak for no one but ourselves, but we speak not only to put before you our thoughts, but in the hope that we may perhaps stimulate others to do likewise, in order that you, whose duty it will be to make decisions, may be able truly to represent the will of the people.

We believe that the Axis Powers—Germany, Italy and Japan—have clearly demonstrated that it is their purpose not merely to defeat their present enemies, but to conquer and dominate the world and to impose upon the peoples of the world a form of physical, mental, and spiritual slavery designed solely to perpetuate the mastery of the Axis dictators.

We believe that the outcome of the present war will determine whether human dignity and freedom are to perish throughout the world for generations to come, or whether the challenge of lawless lust for power shall be met and the would-be rulers of the world defeated and destroyed.

We believe that a victory of the Axis tyrannies in Europe and Asia would place our country in an extremely precarious position, both militarily and economically—a position in which its independence could be maintained only at great cost and sacrifice—if indeed it could be maintained at all.

We believe that it is foolish and dangerous to assume in the face of so much recent evidence that the Axis Powers, if victorious over the nations now resisting them, would have no designs upon this Hemisphere. Once they were victorious, the decision would be theirs, not ours.

We believe that it is an illusion skillfully propagated by Axis agents and their dupes to think that we, as a free people, could ever "come to terms" with the victorious Axis tyrants.

We believe that only wilful blindness to fact permits the assertion that this country would be in no danger if it had to face a hostile sea power in the Atlantic as well as another hostile sea power in the Pacific.

We believe that many of those who say that it is too late, that the Axis Powers can no longer be defeated even with our help, do not want in their hearts to have them defeated.

We believe that the Axis Powers can be defeated. We have seen what British airmen can do against German airmen five times their number. We have seen what a few British divisions can do against twice their own force of Fascist legions. We have seen what the Greek army can do, and the Chinese army against a foe with every advantage of equipment save the indomitable courage of free men.

We believe that the Axis Powers will be defeated, if we, the people of the United States, do our part—if we give prompt and effective aid to those countries which are now holding the Axis tyrants at bay. This does not mean selling them war materials so long as they can pay for them and so long as it is convenient and profitable for us to produce them. It means turning our whole productive resources and ingenuity wholeheartedly over to one single-minded purpose. It means subordinating our ordinary needs to this one greater need of building ships and planes and tanks and guns. It means giving these things to those who are fighting the battle. It means the mobilization of America for war—a war in which we may be fortunate enough not to sacrifice our blood only if we do sacrifice freely of our wealth, and work with unflagging energy.

We believe that a vast majority of the American people know these things and are ready to make the sacrifice. We believe they are eager for prompt and determined leadership.

We cannot express an opinion as to the specific measures to be taken. We do not know all the facts upon which to base an opinion. We do not know, for example, whether it is necessary to use our Navy to help keep open the lines of supply between America and the British Isles. We do know that those lines of supply must be kept open if the Axis Powers are to be defeated. We do know they must be defeated. We do know that neither fear nor excessive caution should stand in the way of our giving whatever aid is needed to bring about their defeat.

Whether we do this or not, war may be declared against us. But neither the threats of the Axis Powers nor our own dread of becoming involved as a belligerent must be permitted to hinder our prompt and effective action.

We say to you, our representatives in Congress:

This is where we stand. We are mindful of the risks involved. We believe that these risks must be taken in order to avoid the far greater danger of an Axis victory. The President has clearly and courageously defined the issue. We ask you to act fearlessly and swiftly, so that our country may continue to be free and our children may receive from us a heritage of freedom even greater than that which was handed down to us by our fathers.

D. C. to Share In New Defense Housing Outlay

Roosevelt Authorizes Federal Construction For 6,446 Families

President Roosevelt has authorized Government construction of defense housing for 6,446 families in 11 areas, including the District, where, he ruled, acute housing shortages cannot be met by private enterprise without impeding the National rearmament program.

Announcement of the President's action was made last night by the National Defense Advisory Commission. The move was recommended by C. F. Palmer, defense housing coordinator, the commission reported.

In the District area Federal agencies are authorized to provide housing at once for approximately 200 families at the Navy Yard and the Naval Air Station, 70 at the Army Medical Center at Walter Reed Hospital, 35 for the families of enlisted men at Arlington Cantonment, Va., and 20 units at the Army War College.

In making a detailed analysis of the Capital's housing facilities, the coordinator's report observed that while approximately 10,000 family units are available in the District area, they do not meet immediate and specific needs because rents either are higher than enlisted personnel can afford to pay or the units are not suitably located.

In addition, the report declared, many of the thousands of recently built units in the District are for sale, rather than for rent. Privately constructed housing in the District is further eliminated from the defense picture, the study stated, because a part of the need for housing of civilian employes of the Navy "is of such uncertain duration that the risk involved is greater than private enterprise can afford to take."

The Alley Dwelling Authority, with 2,930 dwelling units either in operation or contemplated, "has not wished to designate any of its projects as defense projects, as it believes that they should be open to any low-income family which can qualify under the requirements for admission," the report said.

Private enterprise is expected to supply civilian defense housing for 300 families in connection with the Navy Torpedo Plant at Alexandria, Va., 200 units for workers at the Naval Air Station and 40 units at the War College. Monthly rents will range from $25 to $50.

Government agencies, in addition, have under construction contract 900 housing units for civilian and enlisted personnel of the Torpedo Station, the Air Station and the Navy Yard.

Emphasizing that the program for the District area deals with specific defense housing needs, the report revealed that the Capital's "larger" defense housing needs will be handled in a subsequent study.

The President's authorization also will provide needed housing at Newport, R. I.; Portsmouth, N. H.; the Panama Canal Zone; Ponce, Puerto Rico; Fort Knox, Ky.; Yorktown, Va.; Columbia, S. C.; Corpus Christie, Tex.; Charleston, S. C., and Hawaii.

Palmer said that 27,700 Federally-financed dwelling units were under way at the end of 1940, of which the Navy is building 15,800.

With new housing projects being completed daily, by both public and private agencies, Palmer said the first 50,000 units would be ready for occupany in the early part of the new year.

Greeks Celebrate Bardia's Fall; Britons Are Feted

Athens, Jan. 5 (INS).—Greece tonight greeted the news of the British capture of Bardia with jubilant acclaim.

Parades were formed in Athens streets when the news was announced, all of them converging on the British consulate, where a great demonstration was staged.

British soldiers were carried on the shoulders of admirers in the parades and were the guests of honor at innumerable celebration parties in Athens cafes and hotels.

Davison to Testify In Vote Probe

F. Trubee Davison, of New York, Assistant Secretary of War in the Hoover Administration, will be among 16 prominent witnesses before the special grand jury on election offenses here this week.

Other witnesses announced by Assistant District Attorney William S. Tarver were:

Kenneth R. King, Chicago, assistant treasurer, Republican National Committee; Ernest T. Weir, finance committee chairman; Oscar Ewing, New York lawyer; Wayne Johnson, New York lawyer and finance committee chairman; Ross Harris, of the John Price Jones Co., New York.

Also David Niles, Carlton Hotel, of the Independent Voters for Roosevelt and Wallace; the unnamed manager of the St. John Letter Co., Inc., New York; W. H. Settle, chairman of the National Committee on Agriculture; Morris P. Davidson, New York; Mrs. Thomas P. McCallister, Alexandria, Va., director of the Democratic Women's Division.

Also Charles E. Meyer, treasurer of the Business Men's League for Roosevelt; Marshall Field 3d, New York, chairman of the Business Men's League for Roosevelt; Vance McCormick, Harrisburg, Pa., of the Democrats for Willkie; William R. Siemans, Baltimore, of the Willkie Clubs of Maryland, and Harry W. Harrison, Philadelphia, one of the organizers of the People's Committee to Defend Life Insurance and Savings.

wife with both a practical and cultural background, one "who would be willing to share our problems." He said he wasn't as much interested in "her" beauty as in a wholesome, Christian personality. Salzman is Sunday school secretary and Youth Fellowship vice president at Fifteenth Street Christian Church.

Miss Catherine Pyne, also of that church and employed as secretary with a real estate firm, said her future mate must have a Christian background. She objected to a man's smoking on moral, physical and economic grounds.

"Christian personality" came first with Miss Wilma Arnold in considering choice of a mate. She is president of the Brethren B. Y. P. Her friend, Wayne Buckle, president of the Young Men's Class of the congregation, said he expects a woman of "comparable education" as future life partner.

Mrs. Garry Cleveland Myers, associate editor of the magazine, Children's Activities, emphasized in her address that if she were a young person today and planning to get married, she would ask such questions as:

"What does he do when things don't go well? Is he willing to face marriage realistically? Is he thoughtful and considerate?"

Dr. Myers, her husband, and editor of the magazine, as well as an authority on parent-child problems, spoke at the church school and worship rites, and last night delivered an address at a parents' mass meeting on "Who Is Grown Up?"

The institute ends tonight.

Swope to Be Nominated For Leahy Post

The name of Guy J. Swope, former Congressman from Meckville, Pa., and auditor for Puerto Rico since November, 1939, will be sent up today or tomorrow to the Senate for nomination as Governor of Puerto Rico in succession to Admiral Leahy, who has been appointed Ambassador to Vichy.

Senator Guffey, of Pennsylvania, nominated Mr. Swope for his auditorial position. He also is understood to have been recommended by Admiral Leahy as his successor.

Davis Denies He Urged Peace On Hitler Terms

'Mystery Man' of Oil Declares He Worked For Just Solution

By International News Service

New York, Jan. 5.—Denying that he is trying to end the European war "on Hitler's terms," W. R. Davis, "mystery man" of international oil manipulations, emerged for the first time into the full glare of publicity tonight to demand Congressional investigation of himself and his activities.

Davis was hurled into the forefront of public notice last week when he was named by Verne Marshall, chairman of the No Foreign War Committee, as having brought a peace conference proposal from the German government to Washington in 1939.

"In view of the stigma that has been attached to my name during the past week," Davis said tonight at a press conference, "I have requested the Congress to undertake a complete investigation into the charges and allegations made against me."

"True, Loyal American"

"I am, I always have been, and I always will be a true and loyal American citizen," he asserted. "I never expected the day would ever come when I should have to proclaim it publicly; nevertheless, I do.

"I want this war to end, it is true. But I do not want the war to end 'on Hitler's terms,' as has been so loosely flung at me. I want this war to end by negotiation—before the men, women and children of the world are debauched and demoralized; before the wealth and treasures of the world are destroyed, and before human rights and liberties are lost forever."

He declared emphatically he was not a backer of the No Foreign War Committee, although he said he favored "all these organizations . . . that have the same idea of world tranquillity that I have."

Davis quoted a statement accredited to Senator Lee (Democrat), of Oklahoma, in which Davis was described as having a "great financial stake" in a "complete Nazi victory" and as "attempting to promote a phony peace through the White House to pull Nazi Germany's chestnuts out of the fire."

Denies Seeking Cabinet Job

All such reports, he said, "are utterly false."

Davis seemed to flush with apparent anger when he was asked about a statement that in 1937 he expected to receive a Cabinet post in return for large contributions to the Democratic National Committee. Instead of that he got an autographed photograph of the President inscribed, "Your friend, Franklin D. Roosevelt."

"I never hoped or expected to be offered a Cabinet position," Davis snapped, "and I wouldn't accept the offer if it was made."

Asked about his own petroleum cracking plant in Hamburg, Germany, one of the largest in the world, Davis said:

"The German government confiscated it at the outbreak of war, to operate it for war purposes. I have heard indirectly it was bombed by British raiders."

Davis said he had not shipped any Mexican oil to Germany since the war started, and had made only "a few" shipments prior to the war.

Asked if he had any interest in Mexican oil now, he replied: "Certainly. One of my companies owns 70 per cent of another company operating in the Poza Rica field (in Mexico)."

Sketch Tells of Life

A background sketch of Davis prepared for the press, said that others of his holdings included an oil storage terminal at Malmo, Sweden, and distributing facilities throughout Sweden, Norway and Denmark; and oil storage and distributing facilities in Finland serving Lithuania, Esthonia and Latva.

The statement said the operation of the Scandinavian and Finnish holdings had been either greatly restricted or practically terminated since the war.

Davis, a native of Montgomery, Ala., is a direct descendant on his mother's side of Cecil Rhodes and of Jefferson Davis on his father's side.

Hitler Fights Christianity, Otto Asserts

Hapsburg Pretender Declares There Can Be 'No Compromise'

A frail, hollow-cheeked royal pretender, the Archduke Otto of Austria, told the Washington Town Hall last night that Europe is fighting a religious war, with Christianity aligned against the neo-paganism of Adolf Hitler.

Opening the Town Hall forum series before an audience of 1,000 in the Shoreham ballroom, the 28-year-old Hapsburg heir declared that there "can be no compromise between Christianity and naziism."

Under the "new German religion," he said, not God, but the Nordic Race is the source of all inspiration and value; men are redeemed through the purity of Nordic blood instead of the blood of Christ, and immortality belongs, not to the soul, but to the race.

"Must Clash"

"It is clear," he declared, "that if the State claims total jurisdiction over the body and soul of the individual, the Catholic and Evangelist religions must clash with Naziism."

As he expounded the principles of Christianity and detailed the conflict between the two philosophical outlooks, the slender, brown-haired archduke appeared more like a student of theology than a descendant of the royal line that ruled central Europe with an iron hand for six centuries.

Naziism, the archduke declared, denies "the basic Christian doctrine of the absolute equality of man before God" by raising the Nordic race to a position of superiority over other peoples.

In Germany, he said, a new form of persecution has developed. Churches are closed, churchgoers are intimidated, and priests and ministers are imprisoned by hundreds. But this is not all.

Clashes With Albanian

A new technique of persecution—capturing the faith and intellect of the German youth—has been developed to a high degree of efficiency, he said.

In the open forum that followed the Archduke's lecture, he clashed with Rifat Tirana, an Albanian and a Moslem, who formerly was assistant secretary of the financial committee of the League of Nations.

Tirana pointed out that Hitler's first international treaty was the concordat signed with the Vatican. He recalled that Catholic bishops had blessed Fascist troops in Abyssinia and Spain. He added that the dictators of Spain and Portugal claim to be "Christian Fascists."

"Why," he asked, "did the Vatican become aware of the danger of Fascism so late in the season?"

The Archduke explained that the Vatican believed in the early days of Naziism that Hitler could be kept in the political sphere, leaving the spiritual lives of the German people to the church. This attempt on the part of the church failed, he admitted, but he added that it was worth trying.

Roper Joins in Debate

In answer to a question from former Commerce Secretary Daniel C. Roper, who rose from the audience to join the debate, the Archduke said he did not believe that either European or world federation would be possible after the present war.

He advocated the construction of federations of small states in Europe alongside the major powers, and he added that sometime in the future, after a great deal of education, it might be possible to construct a world order.

Herbert B. Elliston, associate editor of The Post, questioned the Archduke's emphasis upon the anti-Christian nature of naziism and said that he believed bolshevism to be a much greater threat to Christianity. Both the Nazi and Communist attacks upon Christianity stem from Marxist materialism, Elliston said.

To this the Archduke replied that he considered naziism a more dynamic doctrine than communism, one that appeals to sections of the lower, middle and upper classes, while the appeal of communism, he said, is purely to the proletariat.

Clarence Streit, author of "Union Now," was also a member of the forum panel, and Huston Thompson, president of the Town Hall's board of trustees, presided.

Smith's Boss of U. S. Budget, But Wife Is Banker at Home

Mrs. Smith Even Signs All Checks For Household

By the Associated Press

President Roosevelt and nearly everyone else in official Washington looks to Harold D. Smith for budget advice—but not Mrs. Smith.

Smith, a one-time Kansas farm boy, is director of the Federal budget and has just turned out a $17,000,000,000 job for the President. It will go to Congress Wednesday.

But when asked yesterday about his personal budget, he referred interviewers to Mrs. Smith. She's from Kansas, too, and not only runs the family budget but even writes the checks. Her husband said he couldn't remember signing one for years. Furthermore, he had no complaints to make.

Smith is 42 years old. After getting degrees from the University of Kansas and the University of Michigan, he taught at the latter, then was budget director for the Michigan State government between 1937 and 1939.

He's been budgeting the Federal Government since 1939. When the deficits look too big and the appropriation seekers get too hungry, he goes home and carves wood or builds furniture.

This summer, while his office was rocked with one $1,000,000,000 defense appropriation after another, he relaxed by helping his 11-year-old son, Lawrence Byron Smith, build a boat.

MRS. HAROLD D. SMITH

Smith has shied from the public spotlight. He has too many secrets to keep to make public appearances.

Mr. Roosevelt, spying Smith and his assistant, Jack Blandford, advancing with a stack of budget estimates, greets them with:

"Oh, Lord, here come the heavenly twins."

Husband Kills Estranged Wife in Michigan Cathedral

By the Associated Press

Grand Rapids, Mich., Jan. 5.—Before the eyes of horrified worshipers, a 32-year-old woman was slain today in St. Andrew's Catholic Cathedral by a man who held off the congregation with a shotgun so that he could make his escape.

The dead woman, felled by the second of two shotgun blasts as she ran screaming down a church aisle, was Mrs. Mary Jane McCarthy.

Prosecutor Menso Belt said Willis McCarthy, 34, a Detroit salesman and the woman's estranged husband, admitted killing his wife because she had spurned his attempts at a reconciliation.

Police Capt. Matthew Fritzen, who was attending services at the time, said McCarthy's first shot missed his wife as she was about to enter the cathedral with her sister and niece.

McCarthy, Fritzen said, then pursued her into the church, shot her as she ran down the aisle, reloaded the gun, and ran to the altar where he stood off parishoners until he could escape.

Conrad Hoogerhyde, a passerby, said he became suspicious when he saw a man leaving the church carrying a shotgun and gave chase. He finally captured McCarthy.

McCarthy and his wife separated seven weeks ago and a divorce action was pending. They had been married seven years.

The shooting occurred at 9:50 a. m. before several hundred parishers. Before continuing with other masses, the church, which, under Catholic law, had been desecrated, was blessed after permission had been obtained from the diocesan bishop.

600 of D. C. Guard Become Full-Time Soldiers Today

Six hundred National Guardsmen of the Washington area will become full-time soldiers at dawn today when the 260th Coast Artillery is inducted into Federal service.

The men will report at 6:45 a. m. to the National Guard Armory, Pennsylvania Avenue and Sixth Street Northwest, and at the Coast Artillery Armory, Main Avenue and O Street Southwest, for physical examinations.

Then they will be in the Army—for an "indefinite period." On January 16 they will leave for their post at Fort Bliss, Tex.

Parley Set To Block Rise In Wool Prices

Henderson to Meet With Manufacturers' Agents Tomorrow

Prevention of "an upward spiral of prices" in woolen goods will be sought at a conference tomorrow which Leon Henderson, defense commissioner in charge of price stabilization, has called with representatives of the wool manufacturing industry.

"Buyers of woolen goods have complained to the Defense Commission of sharply advanced prices on fall lines and of high-pressure sales methods by some sellers which tend to create an unnecessary rush to cover requirements at higher prices," said a commission statement.

"It is reported that less than half of the increase in prices now being quoted can be explained on the basis of higher raw wool prices. Such unjustified increases in the cost of piece goods would inevitably be reflected in an increase in the price of retail clothing.

"It is hoped that this conference will draw the attention of the industry to the importance of preventing an upward spiral in prices and will result in a reconsideration of any contemplated price advances at this time when buyers are covering their fall requirements."

The conference also will discuss such questions as development of an orderly, long-range procurement plan to meet Government requirements in woolen goods. The statement credited the recent stable conditions in the raw wool markets to removal of uncertainties about Government needs and convenient delivery dates allowed in large Government orders placed in December.

French-Siamese Fighting Renewed

Bangkok, Thailand, Jan. 5 (AP).—Intense aerial warfare and border skirmishes flared anew today between French Indo-Chinese and Thailand (Siamese) forces, and the Thai high command said Thai bombers, during retaliatory bombings against the Indo-Chinese destroyed several grounded French aircraft.

'Bardia Pubs Open?' Shout Australians

Anzacs in High Spirits Awaiting Attack Order

dually by merely whirling their bayonets, they related.

These troops had an eerie appearance to observers with their knitted cowls protecting them against sand storms, and as in the last great war they didn't consider it enough to obtain objectives set for them, but usually charged on to gain additional ground.

Italian resistance, the British said, mostly was lackadaisical, but there were some instances of unusual valor.

One Fascist officer kept shooting his revolver, they said, until it was shot from his hand. Others resisted to the end.

I came across one group of exhausted Australians sprawled on the sand and rocks of the Wadi fortress which they had taken. They had been told to get a rest there.

They grunted and grinned and asked:

"What do you think of the way we fight?"

Others chimed in with: "Don't forget those British tanks. When you begin to doubt your own confidence, those tanks give you a lift."

Australians were not the only soldiers given to song. I watched singing Italian prisoners marching miles to truck depots where they were to be taken to concentration camps. Neapolitan airs in the Libyan Desert!

Several fires were blazing when I entered Bardia. Volleys of gunfire also echoed in the gulleys to the north where other prisoners and snipers were being rounded up. There was no sniping in the town itself.

Half of the little white buildings in the town were wrecked. The Fascist headquarters was in ruins, but the government house was only slightly damaged.

Only a small British company held the town. Most of the tanks already were rumbling out of the city to make ready for new operations to shatter Premier Mussolini's African empire.

The Australians, long itching for this action, fully lived up to the reputation of their shock troop fathers in the World War, British officers said.

I watched the first Australian units and tanks fight their way into Bardia at sunset Saturday night.

From a cliff outside the port town I could see the minaret of Bardia's mosque and attacking units working toward it like a procession of toy soldiers.

Thousands of Italians entrenched in gulleys surrounding the town fired on them, and the explosions of Fascist artillery at times screened the creeping fighters from view.

I could see the flashes from the Italian batteries, but the British tanks and Australians kept moving.

When they got near the batteries I saw the Italians leave—some in flight, some to surrender.

Those manning the Italian batteries near Bardia's rock walls scaled the walls and ran down the streets of the town.

They surrendered later—"under safer circumstances"—as a British officer put it.

I entered the town only a half hour after this twilight assault—also in safety.

A brilliant sunset bathed the ancient African town and thousands of prisoners in long lines marched to the rear as fast as they were rounded up by the Anzacs.

Here were the same resigned faces and gray-green uniformed columns of men that I saw in Egypt three weeks ago. They have become a familiar sight in the desert since the British counteroffensive began less than a month ago.

There was the usual precaution of one sentry to about 500 prisoners. None tried to escape.

Five hundred Italians were rooted from one gulch redoubt. Some had sought refuge in natural caves. I saw 2,000 leave one cave, ordered to march by a single Australian officer armed with a revolver and five infantrymen armed with rifles and only one bren gun.

Immediately on entering Bardia, the British used Italian munitions and guns they had captured to complement their own weapons against the Fascists.

Australians already were carrying dispatches to the rear on Italian motorcycles, moving supplies in Italian trucks, camping in Italian dugouts, eating Italian food, and even wearing Italian clothes.

These shouting troops from "Down Under" also had time to load themselves up with Italian souvenirs—revolvers, binoculars, sabers and military decorations picked up from the battlefield.

British militarists said the victory was due to meticulous preparations made during the 18 days before the final assault.

Australian sappers did vital work before the final assault launched at dawn Friday by their infantry.

Night after night they slipped through the darkness to locate antitank traps and mines. They blew up the sides of tank traps in order to fill them in, and exploded the land mines to open the way for the tank charge.

Two great gaps made in the outer Italian defense lines allowed free passage for British mechanized units led by a famous Hussar regiment.

Running interference for the Australian infantrymen they rushed through the holes. The mechanized units wheeled around inside Italian front line positions and put them out of action from the rear.

The British said the Italians put up a desperate fight in this first stage, and most of the British casualties occurred on this first break-through.

The British, however, said their total casualties for the 2-day assault were slight.

By the end of the first day Australian brigades had penetrated the outer ring of fortresses to a depth of nearly two miles on a six-mile front.

British mechanized units went much further the first night.

Total prisoners captured was about 6,000 at this stage. They included the Italian brigade commander, Nardinucchi, and an Italian intelligence officer named Maj. Baringo.

One Italian baker who was taken said he baked for as many as 40,000 men, but the British admitted he may have been excited.

Nevertheless the garrison defending the city exceeded the reported 20,000.

As proved by the garrison's final collapse, more than 25,000 prisoners were taken. But the extent of Italian casualties was not known immediately.

Italian artillery fire grew heavy just before dawn Saturday, the British said, and Australian troops waiting for another charge were only 700 yards from the first Italian positions.

Hard fighting throughout Saturday rolled back the Italians and resulted in the capture of additional thousands, front dispatches said. Again the Australians did the major part in land charges and in cleaning up machine-gun nests.

Every type of fighting occurred, hand-to-hand bayonet battles, tank collisions and machine-gun duels. Throughout this din, the British said, the fleet offshore laid down a withering barrage on Italian positions ahead of the advancing British, while the R. A. F. fought off Italian bombers overhead and divebombed the Fascists.

The British believed that their R. A. F. prevented the escape of Gen. Bergonzoli, known as "Gen. Electric Whiskers" because of his fiery beard, and other Italian officers Friday night when five Italian planes landed at Bardia Airfield.

Those planes never took off again, front dispatches said, because British fighter planes swooped and riddled them with machinegun fire.

By dawn Sunday, the British command declared, more than 15,000 prisoners had been taken and a remnant of Italians was holding only a small corner of Bardia's shattered defenses.

The jubilant Australians already had fought their way into Bardia proper, and again formed the spearhead to riddle the last semblance of Italian resistance.

The main advantages to Britain of Bardia's capture, the spokesman said, would be that another small port would be available for the British Navy's use, simplifying the problem of supply for advancing British forces.

Salum, another port on the Egyptian side of the frontier, he added, thus would be freed from shelling from Bardia. The British, furthermore, expect to procure better water supplies at Bardia than at any point along the coast between there and Mersa Matruh.

Bardia, being the easternmost port in Libya—only about 10 miles by air from the Egyptian frontier—was an important Italian supply base.

Its well-protected port, which was much used by German submarines before 1918 when the Italians occupied the town, can accommodate medium-sized ships. Located there are an airfield, gasoline storage depot, wireless station and machine shops.

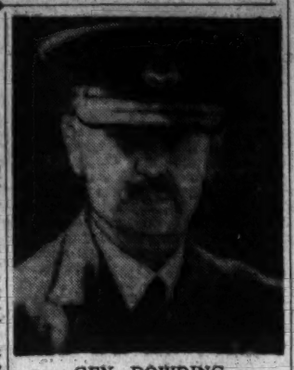
Air Marshal Dowding Arrives For Plane-Production Talks

Sir Hugh to Confer With Morgenthau, Army, Navy Officials

Air Marshal Sir Hugh Dowding, former chief of Britain's sky defenses, arrived in Washington yesterday to confer with Treasury Secretary Morgenthau and officials of the Army and Navy on plans for intergration of American plane production with England's supply needs.

Sir Hugh, the tall, thin World War pilot whose genius for organization and understanding of plane design is credited with developing Britain's valiant air defense, declined to see reporters until after his conference with Morgenthau.

He said as yet no appointment had been made for him to see the Treasury chief, but Brtish Embassy sources said the conference probably would be held tomorrow. He is expected to spend about a week with officials of the British Purchasing Commission here and afterward to visit several American plane factories.



GEN. DOWDING

"On Tuesday at 3 p. m. after my visit with Morgenthau I expect to grant a kind of general interview and, perhaps, to answer some questions," Sir Hugh promised.

5th Battalion Ready To Quit Quantico, Perhaps for Cuba

The 500 Washington officers and men of the Fifth Battalion Marine Corps Reserve, now stationed at Quantico, Va., have received standby orders, and are ready to leave for a new station at a moment's notice, the Post learned last night.

While definite orders to move had not been issued the reserves last night, all battalions were ordered to close accounts effective yesterday. This means they will operate on a day-to-day basis until further notice.

It is reported the Fifth Battalion and others now at Quantico, may be sent to Guantanamo Bay, Cuba, to take the place of the Fleet Marine Force which may be transferred to Pacific Coast points.

R.A.F. Pounds Destroyer In Brest Port

Scores Hits on 2 Nazi Supply Ships; Showers Bombs on Hamburg

By the Associated Press

London, Jan. 5.—Two Nazi vessels off the southwest coast of Norway and a destroyer in the Harbor of Brest, France, were hit by British bombs yesterday, the air ministry said today in a communique describing R. A. F. activities, which included a raid on Hamburg, biggest seaport in continental Europe.

Three bombs crashed on the destroyer in the attack which took place at dusk. In a later attack during the night a fourth bomb exploded on the ship's stern, the air ministry news service declared.

Fires were observed in Hamburg after the British raid there, the communique said. In the first attack on Brest, a British plane was lost while a Nazi fighter was destroyed in the air.

The air ministry news service, describing the raid on Brest, said the destroyer used her full array of antiaircraft guns on the raiding planes, but that before the raid was over the ship was shrouded in smoke and her guns were silent.

The same source said six bombs hit one of the German supply ships off the Norwegian coast, and at least three, and probably five, hit the other ship. The attacks were made in the face of German shore batteries at Lister and Obrestad, and the British pilots noted heavy explosions and smoke as they flew homeward.

Eire Prejudices British Aims, Belfast Told

Neutrality Injures Prospects of Success, Party Council Says

By the Associated Press

Belfast, Northern Ireland, Jan. 5. The Ulster Unionist Council, which stands for continued union with the British crown, declared that Southern Ireland's (Eire's) neutrality is "deliberately prejudicing Britain's prospects of success in a struggle which means as much for one country as the other."

The declaration came in a report to be submitted Thursday to a meeting of the Unionist party.

Eire, which has refused Britain use of bases on her territory, was attacked from the air several times last week and has protested to Germany on the grounds that some of the bombs, incendiary and explosive, and the magnetic mines dropped on her soil were of German origin.

The report added, in part:

"Our political opponents, despite the life and death struggle in which the empire is engaged, have seized every opportunity to urge expulsion of Ulster (Northern Ireland) from the United Kingdom and its inclusion in Eire in the belief that Northern Ireland would be declared neutral and unable to help Great Britain."

The report recalls an offer by the late Lord Craigavon, governor general of Northern Ireland, to enter into closest cooperation with Eire for defense purposes on condition that Eire take a stand on the side of Britain and not raise any constitutional issue during the war.

Eire's prime minister, Eamon de Valera, replied he had not the slightest intention of abandoning neutrality.

The Eire constitution envisages a union of all Ireland with the same sovereign freedom that now is Eire's. Ulster or Northern Ireland with its six counties and Eire with its 27 counties make up all of the island.

British Air Power to Equal Axis' in 1942, Wright Predicts

By Devon Francis
Associated Press Aviation Editor

New York, Jan. 5.—T. P. Wright, one of the country's leading aircraft production engineers, estimates that by the spring of 1942 England, with 40,000 warplanes, will achieve parity in the air with the Axis powers.

Moreover, he writes in the aeronautical publication, Aviation, the United States will have parity with the Axis in air strength by the close of 1942, even though it continues to supply the British with planes.

It was Wright, consultant to the National Defense Advisory Commission and vice president of the Curtiss-Wright Corporation, who last June warned that boosting American warplane production to 50,000 a year was a five-year job.

He fixes the rate of increase of American airplane production, starting with January, 1941, as greater "than at any period for either England or Germany."

Warns of Rash Statements

He warns, at the same time, against "rash statements on '1,000 per day' airplane production rates, as these are unattainable by great motor car producers or anyone else."

These are the figures Wright believes will prove out in the next 24 months:

Axis warplanes available January, 1941—41,000; England, 25,000; United States, 6,000.

Relative strengths, mid-1941—Axis, 46,000; England, 32,000; United States, 10,000.

Relative strengths January, 1942—Axis, 49,000; England, 45,000; United States, 16,000.

Relative strengths, mid-1942—Axis, 49,000; England, 55,000; United States, 28,000.

Relative strengths at the close of 1942—Axis, 48,000; England, 58,000; United States, 48,000.

He emphasizes that Germany's plane losses in the war were three times those of England in September, 1940, and although they are being reduced, would remain twice those of England in July, 1942. Wright estimates American warplane production in 1941 at 19,500.

The United States is behind its schedule warplane output, he says, pointing out:

"Instead of completing the construction of approximately 40,000 planes (15,000 for the British) by the spring of 1942, the date will be in the summer of that year, and instead of attaining an industrial capacity by that time of 40,000 planes a year, it will be about 30,000."

He estimates that the scheduled production of 50,000 planes a year will require a supervisory and shop personnel force of 300,000 persons.

To speed American warplane production Wright advocates reducing the 30 present models of military planes being made for the Army, the Navy and the British to fewer than 20, and establishment of a secretariat of national defense and an air force under a separate administrative head.

Five Victims In Navy Crash Served Here

Lieut. Comdr. Cooke Passed for Promotion Only Last Week

Five of the 11 Navy fliers killed Saturday night in the California crash of a naval transport plane were widely acquainted in service quarters here.

Lieut. Comdr. Stephen Bland Cooke, graduated from the Naval Academy in 1921, served from 1837 to 1939 with the maintenance division of the Bureau of Aeronautics, Navy Department, Washington. His wife, Mrs. Dorothea Dyer Cooke, is a daughter of Mrs. Alice B. Carrick, of 1803 Biltmore Street Northwest. She was visiting her mother when she received word of the crash.

Only last week Cooke's selection for promotion to a full commander was approved by President Roosevelt. He held the World War Victory Medal, and as special qualifications, the Navy Department listed him as qualified to command submarines and as a naval aviator. He was a native of Fort Smith, Ark.

Lieut. Comdr. Joseph Henry Gowan served at the Naval Air Station at Anacostia in 1919. Born in Leadhill, Ark., he rose to the rank of lieutenant commander from that of gunner, to which he was appointed in 1917. He held the Mexican Campaign Medal, the World War Victory Medal and the Yangtze Medal.

Lieut. Victor Salomon Gaulin, graduate of the Naval Academy with the class of 1930, attended the Post Graduate School at Annapolis from 1937 to 1940. He was a native of Lowell, Mass.

Lieut. James Cyril Flemming, a native of Philadelphia, attended the Naval Medical School here in 1936 and afterwards served a short tour of duty at the Naval Hospital here.

Aviation Chief Machinist's Mate Harold Ernest Neff served two tours of duty at Anacostia.

the plane, most of them being found within 150 ayrds of the mountain top.

Lieut. Comdr. Joseph Henry Gowan, 54, pilot, Lead Hill, Ark.

Lieut. Comdr. Stephen Bland Cooke, 42, commander patrol squadron 13, Harrison, Ark.

Lieut. Victor S. Gaulin, 34, attached to patrol squadron 14, Lowell, Mass.

Lieut. James Cyril Flemming, 36, attached to patrol wing 1, Reading, Pa.

David Everett Ferguson, 33, copilot, Neponset, W. Va.

Marvin Magee, 32, machinist's mate, Long Branch, N. J.

Frank Richard Naylor, 25, radioman, Dayton, Ky.

H. E. Neff, 34, machinist's mate, San Diego.

Frank Recke, jr., 30, machinist's mate, National City, Calif.

A. M. Parry, 31, radio man, Los Angeles.

L. J. Hughes, 30, radio man, Grand Rapids, Mich.

Inquiry Ordered

In their official announcement of the crash and identification of the victims, naval authorities had no further details, pending an investigation.

Pary, Neff, Hughes and Recke were the four who bailed out from the storm-tossed bomber near Big Spring, Tex. The fifth man to take to a parachute, W. F. Perchich, Friday Harbor, Wash., was killed in the jump.

The bomber, piloted by Lieut. Murray Hanson, 30, and Ensign Robert B. Clark, 25, landed hours later with minor damage in a shallow lagoon near Falfurrias, Tex.

Three of the officers aboard the transport, Commander Cooke and Lieuts. Gaulin and Flemming, were members of a board of inquiry sent to Texas to investigate the forced landing of the bomber.

2 Hurt in Forced Plane Landing En Route to D. C.

Pittsburgh, Jan. 5 (AP).—Forced down by motor trouble, two Cleveland contractors were injured, one seriously, today when they made a forced landing in their two-passenger airplane in suburban Bethel township.

The two, James Dipple, 40, and Roy Brown, 40, the pilot, were en route to Washington, D. C., on a business trip. Dipple suffered a broken right arm and Brown was in a hospital with severe head injuries.

R. A. F. Will Wear Armor, Nazis Say

New York, Jan. 5 (AP).—The German radio declared today that to curtail "heavy losses" in R. A. F. personnel, the London Air Ministry had ordered through an American firm "thousands of armor-plated uniforms . . . which will increase the average weight of the crew by at least 120 pounds per head."

This, the German broadcaster noted, would reduce potential bomb loads. The broadcast was heard by C. B. S.

Bridgeport Ship Fire Kills Captain

Bridgeport, Conn., Jan. 5 (AP).—Capt. John Simmons, 81, of Baltimore, master of the collier S. S. Armistead, burned to death last night in the engine room of his craft where he was testing a repaired bilge pump.

pressing necessity for a unification of policy and methods in industry which will provide the speediest production of which Americans are capable."

Under the "no strike" program, Frey said, the metal division would "carry out a long-time policy to have all departments of the metal trades negotiate one agreement in an area for one industry."

For example, he said, single agreements would be sought for each of the four major shipbuilding regions —the Pacific Coast, Great Lakes, Gulf and Atlantic Coasts. These, he added, would be sought first.

As stated by the union leaders the plan would provide:

"Without loss of time those who produce for national defense—management and labor—meet at the conference table for the purpose of negotiating working rules agreements, the intent and effect of which will be to unify and stablize industrial relations, and the terms of employment in such districts. Such agreements must contain provision for voluntary arbitration, and that there shall be no stoppage of work. The entering into such agreements are the guarantee that there will be neither strikes nor lockouts.

"Thorough-going cooperation must be established between management and labor through direct contact between their chosen representatives.

"Where their efforts fail to bring adjustment of questions which may arise, the services of the division of conciliation, department of labor, must be speedily secured. Should this conciliation not establish prompt results, then arbitration must be applied."

Overtime Payment

In his talk with reporters, Frey said that during the "present emergency" the metal trade unions would not attempt to limit the hours of labor, adding that "our protection over the eight-hour day and 40-hour week shall be the overtime payment."

Quartermaster Called Here

The decentralizing of supervision of the Army construction program followed recent revelations that building of cantonments was behind schedule.

The nine zones correspond geographically with the Army corps areas in the continental United States. The nine zone quartermasters were called to a conference here Wednesday by Maj. Gen. Edmund B. Gregory, Quartermaster General, at which Col. Brehon B. Somervell, in charge of construction, will discuss their duties.

Maj. J. H. Burgheim, with headquarters at Baltimore, was named construction quartermaster for the zone embracing Maryland, the District, Virginia and Pennsylvania.

Jewels on Hand

Meanwhile, large increases in importations of industrial jewels for use in defense industries were said to have assured this country of about one year's supply of such stones. The figures were given by R. R. Sayers, director of the Bureau of Mines, in a report to Secretary of the Interior Ickes.

From a valuation of $913,000 in 1939, industrial jewel imports in 1940 rose to $1,500,000 during the first ten months of the year. The jewels are used principally as bearings in aviation instruments, fire control apparatus, watches, chronometers and other such precision instruments, fire control apparatus, watches, chronometers and other such precision instruments.

Experts Fear Shipbuilding Labor Shortage

Warn of Bottleneck In Program to Turn Out 200 Vessels

By the Associated Press

Shipping experts said yesterday that avoiding a bottleneck in skilled labor would be a major problem in carrying out President Roosevelt's program for building an emergency fleet of 200 cargo carriers.

At least three means of quickly augmenting the supply of shipbuilding artisans probably will be used, these sources said.

The first is the apprentice system. The existing big shipyards, already under the pressure of contracts, have been expanding their apprentice schools for more than a year.

Another method is the "upgrading" system advocated by Sidney Hillman, a director of the national defense program. His plan works out something like this: A highly skilled mechanic, capable of doing eight different types of work, takes over eight unskilled workers, training each of them in one of his eight skills.

A third method is the distribution to various yards of a nucleus of supervisory personnel, drawn from long-established shipyards. Experts commented, however, that the supply of supervisory personnel already was "drawn pretty thin."

Tells of Shortage

Worker shortage was the most vital problem when the United States set out to build a "bridge of ships" to Europe in World War days, L. S. Baier, inspector of floating equipment for the corps of Army engineers, said in a recent issue of the magazine, "The Military Engineer," that "this shortage was evident all down the line, from the superintendents to the lowest classification of labor."

The fact that more shipyards are in operation today than when this country undertook mass production of ships at Hog Island and her yards in World War days should help, Baier said. Writing his article before Mr. Roosevelt's proposal for the new emergency program, Baier said:

"Out of these existing yards could be selected the nucleus of a trained personnel that would be available, in time of emergency, to supervise construction and to train other men in specialized tasks.

Cautions on Pitfalls

"Mass production of ships could be made comparable with mass production of automobiles, but of course not on such an elaborate or quite as efficient basis."

Baier cautioned, however, of some of the pitfalls into which mass production shipbuilders of 1917-1918 fell.

While many of those who applied for jobs were mechanics in other trades and easily adapted themselves to shipbuilding technique, Baier said, "some were musicians, bank clerks, medical students et cetera, whose previous training was of little help to them."

"As it was," Baier commented, "they were the cause of many headaches for foremen until they had been properly instructed. The injury and death rate was exceptionally high because of this condition."

Plane Crash Kills Detroit Auto Man

St. Louis, Jan. 5 (AP).—Alvin O. Kempp, Detroit automobile dealer, was killed today in a crash which demolished a new Culver Cadet monoplane he was flying home from Wichita, Kans.

Kempp, widely known in the automobile distributing field, was wearing a wrist watch given him by Edsel Ford.

Roosevelt to Ask 'Blank Check' Today

President will point out to Congress the difficulties involved in writing legislation covering aid to the British, in asking for "blank check" authority for the executive branch to handle the program.

It is known that he has had under consideration the creation of a new Government corporation to handle the British Aid Program, especially the financial phases and details dealing with contracts and shipment of planes and materials. Some Democratic leaders said yesterday that such an agency could be created under "blank check" authority to relieve the President of much detail in dealing with the British purchasing mission.

Besides recommending new taxes and economies on relief and other nondefense activities, the President will devote a portion of his message to other domestic problems, including increases in old-age pensions, a boost in the public debt limit and aid to the farmers who have been hit by Europe's war, Democratic leaders said.

Apathy On The Air

Despite a flood of advance and current ballyhoo, the battle between champ ASCAP and challenger BMI has inspired few cheers or boos outside the ring. Neville Miller, president of the National Association of Broadcasters, reports that a poll of 125 stations—apparently covering the first two days of 1941—disclosed only 113 telephone calls and thirty-four letters and postcards complaining about the lack of music formerly furnished by the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers.

Mr. Miller also declares that the stations received many compliments on the "freshness and adequacy" of music purveyed by the broadcasters' own supply house, Broadcast Music, Inc. Maybe there were a lot of these. However, John J. Paine, general manager of ASCAP, reports that many young people have asked him how to form clubs to boycott the radio. Maybe there were a lot of these, too. (Of course, Mr. Paine refused to sponsor such clubs.)

Anyway, Washington stations report little public interest in the controversy. From the stroke of New Year's through Saturday night WJSV, which appears to have kept the most careful account, had thirty-two calls commenting on the situation. These, the management says, were equally divided between kicks and compliments.

From this apathy one may draw almost any conclusion his interest demands. It is quite possible that the great majority of the radio-listening public doesn't even notice what it's hearing, as long as there's a noise going on. So far as the "popular" tunes are concerned, most of them are played to death and forgotten in a month, and new ones take their places. In this category the shift from ASCAP to BMI can only mean a temporary relief from boring repetition. Perhaps when the public finally realizes it is being starved of Victor Herbert and Irving Berlin, it will feel some resentment toward parties unknown. But in the meantime, it is to be hoped, the Justice Department will have fixed the responsibility and restored order to the world of music.

Chivalric Manner

So one of these phantom sea raiders which have been playing the devil with shipping in the Pacific is commanded by nobody other than our old friend, the clever and charming Count von Luckner! To be sure, the proof of this is as yet merely circumstantial. It seems that an American correspondent in Germany called von Luckner's telephone number only to be told by a servant that "it is not permitted" to give any information concerning him. The call was put in because of a strangely reminiscent incident in the Pacific. Survivors of a Norwegian crew, passing through Hongkong on their way to somewhere else, were said to have spoken of the magnanimous treatment aboard a ship identified as the former S. S. Glengarry, which was captured from the British last spring when the Germans entered Copenhagen. The Norwegians were taken aboard this vessel after a sea-battle in which nine of their comrades were killed, and the skipper provided them with cigars, cigarettes and playing cards and even with a notebook in which to enter complaints. It all sounded like the von Luckner of World War fame.

In this other World War Count von Luckner endeared himself to the whole race of armchair adventurers not only by his exploits in sinking 25 merchant ships without any loss of life, but for his kindness and hospitality toward his prisoners. In fact, it was this magnanimity, and his subsequent lecture tours in behalf of peace and world brotherhood, that lent so much plausibility to the report (circulated in London by our other old friend, Capt. von Rintelen) that Luckner had got himself into the toils of the Gestapo by his too open expression of how repugnant the Nazis were to him. By Joe, he seemed just about the sort of fellow that would be clapped into Dachau!

But it just about the time that the British began to suspect that possibly Capt. von Rintelen himself might not be quite as rabidly anti-Nazi as he professed to be, a report came from Australia of a discovery that von Luckner had been engaged on an espionage mission there for the Nazis. Thus the notion of such a dashing and gallant fellow as von Luckner doing his bit to Hitlerize the world is incongruous but not altogether incredible. As to his kindness, perhaps that's just an old habit he has not been able to slough off. Or perhaps it is merely a prudent instinct for publicity. You never can tell how a war is going to end, by Joe! And, if the worst comes to the worst, there's nothing like having a good build-up in advance for another lecture tour.

Fall Of Bardia

It was on December 19 that the onward-rushing forces belonging to Britain's Army of the Nile reached the fortified Libyan town of Porto Bardia after, in the previous ten days, having recaptured Sidi Barrani, taken tens of thousands of prisoners and great quantities of war material, and driven the Italians out of western Egypt.

A glance at the map shows the strategic importance of Bardia. About 10 miles from the Egyptian border, it is the most easterly Libyan port, and at the same time commands the coastal road running west to the Italian military, naval and air base at Tobruk. As long as it was held by the Italians, Bardia automatically barred any possibility of a major British advance on Tobruk.

When the British arrived at Bardia, Marshal Graziani was forced to make an important decision. He had to choose between reinforcing the Italian garrison there, evacuating it, or leaving it to its own devices in the hope that through its resistance time would be given him to rally his forces and strengthen Libya's interior defenses. He chose the last course. And the 25,000 Italian troops garrisoned in Bardia were instructed to fight a last ditch action at whatever cost.

Bardia held out for two weeks, a testimony to the courage and fortitude of its defenders. For it was not long after the siege began that the city was entirely cut off from all access to the Libyan interior and began to suffer a shortage of water and other supplies. At the same time it was subjected to continuous bombardment by artillery, bombing planes and battleships. Indeed, in this action British land, sea and air forces appear to have achieved an exceptionally high degree of coordination.

The fight put up by the Bardia garrison may have given Graziani a valuable breathing spell. Unless the demoralization in Italian ranks has gone further than is generally assumed, it is not unlikely that a further British advance into Libya will be bitterly contested, particularly since the Italians may now have the assistance of the German Luftwaffe. Yet the very circumstance that Italy is now compelled to wage defensive war in Africa, and with a not inconsiderable part of its original forces now prisoners of the British, shows how seriously deflated is Mussolini's dream of mastery over the Mediterranean and the Suez Canal.

Making The Mode

Change is an economic law. New products, markets and centers take the place of old; industries are born, expand, and pass away; out of the laboratory flow new processes for making things; fresh resources of materials and foodstuffs open up; consumer tastes assume new forms with the passing of the years; and so on. But in normal times the changes are so slow as to be almost imperceptible till they come out of the chrysalis stage. It is only when such abnormalities as war occur that economic change is speeded up and rendered obvious.

For instance, there is the sudden prospect arising out of the cloud over France that New York might displace Paris as the center of style for womankind. Style somehow doesn't go with any ism but individualism, and our country is the only nonbelligerent individualist with the facilities left for the cultivation of style. Taking advantage of the opportunity, New York this week will stage the first of a series of Fashion Futures, and there will be five hundred models on parade, all eager to demonstrate, in the words of the announcement, "what America can do without benefit of Paris leadership in fashion." It is an exciting prospect. And, in anticipation, the magic legend America Makes the Mode, in hats, frocks, gloves and the rest of the feminine finery, has already been flashed across the front pages of all the fashion magazines.

There is a daring in the legend as well as a romance. For so long has Paris been the fount of style that no other capital has ever dared to contest French leadership. London, to be sure, has made a kind of challenge in sports costumes, and Hollywood styles have taken on, in a way; but London has been content to remain a specialist in a branch of dressmaking, while Hollywood has been too bizarre to attract much of a following. Perhaps the ascendancy of Paris had been undermined even before necessity thrust the Parisian role upon New York. Of that a mere male couldn't venture to be authoritative. All he knows is that up till the beginning of the war shiploads of American buyers used to go to Paris for the French openings, and came back to clothe our womenfolk. Even if American women were regarded as the best dressed, and American models had been introduced into the Paris salons, the design triumphant remained French. American designers didn't even take advantage of the chance afforded by the World's Fair to make a bid for world leadership in feminine styles.

Opportunity is mythically represented as a man with a forelock but without any hair at all on the back of his head. Evidently the opportunity of being the world's style center has been seized with both hands by New York. How it will turn out is anybody's guess. Perhaps one of these days France will be free again, and the designer-run couturiers once more able to function without restraint, but this France wouldn't be without competition, judging from the initiative reported in New York. At any rate, Mayor LaGuardia is alive to the economic possibilities of New York as a fashion center. In his administration he has seen his city demoted as a financial center, and has lost revenue thereby; and a twist in the whirligig of change to restore some kind of business wouldn't be unwelcome at city hall.

Labor Is Willing

The latest Gallup poll indicates that an overwhelming majority of Americans are convinced that we must work harder to speed up production for defense. Of those questioned 89 per cent emphatically approved putting defense industries on a 24-hour per day working basis of three shifts. However, the response in this case merely showed that a representative cross section of the voting public had become convinced of the need for an accelerated defense effort. Much more significant were the replies received from employed persons who signified their willingness to work longer hours without increases in hourly rates of pay. Not only did three-fourths of all those polled take this position, but a separate inquiry, addressed exclusively to defense workers, showed 76 per cent willing to forego time and a half payments for overtime.

Although public sentiment is apparently strongly favorable to the removal of hampering restrictions upon hours and conditions of work as a defense measure, official spokesmen for the Administration still oppose any relaxation of standards on the ground that there is as yet no need for such action. Typical of this obstructionist, or at any rate skeptical, attitude are the opinions expressed by Secretary of Labor Perkins. In her annual report, just made public, Miss Perkins stresses the importance of maintaining existing wage-hour standards under the Fair Labor Standards Act and the Walsh-Healey Public Contracts Act. She also defends the Walsh-Healey Act against charges of being unduly rigid.

While it is true that the Secretary of Labor has extensive discretionary power to authorize longer hours of work on Government contracts and modify rates of pay in the public interest, time and a half payment for overtime remains mandatory under the law. As a result of the higher unit production costs entailed by increased payments for overtime, moreover, many employers undoubtedly are reluctant to seek extensions of the 40-hour working week. Hence the fact that the Secretary's power to make exceptions to the statutory hours rules has not been exercised is by no means proof that industry is not handicapped by the short working day and week. On the contrary, evidence accumulates to show that labor shortages are developing which can only be relieved by lengthening working hours.

Cactus Jack

If the Washington Monument and the Capitol dome can be said to have had any real rival in the way of an ancient and conspicuous landmark, it would be the two, five or ten gallon hat of the incumbent Vice President, or, to speak more familiarly, Cactus Jack Garner. Anyway, since the hat and Mr. Garner inside it vanished abruptly from our midst last fall, Washington, to many of us, has scarcely seemed the same city.

Thus most of us, including, no doubt, Mr. Roosevelt himself, feel a good deal more comfortable and at ease now that the hat and Mr. Garner have returned and are to remain at least until after the inauguration. And if it is really true, as some appear to think, that Mr. Garner intends to retire at last from politics, let us hope he can be persuaded to remain in the role of an elder statesman. But if he insists on returning to the quiet and seclusion of Uvalde, to live out his remaining years, surely he will leave us the hat as a keepsake and a memorial.

For the hat, like the log cabin in which he was born, is an historical symbol. Mr. Garner is one of the last of those great virtuosi for whom politics, and especially parliamentary politics, are, like the game of poker, a fine art, demanding native genius, lifelong apprenticeship, and, above all, the sense of what is and what is not possible. That Mr. Garner is one of the great masters of the art needs no further proof than the fact that he has been with us throughout these thirty years of change, crisis and cataclysm. And if in his latter years in the role of "Silent Jack," when mild rumbles of thunder were sometimes mistaken for an echo of his snorts, he still could not help attracting to himself such epithets as "salty," "homespun," "picturesque," why, that is how it usually is with genius.

A HEART IS NOTHING ONE WOULD KNOW

It is proud, that hurt;
That reticence, that discontent;
Outside snowy palaces
It rears its wolfish tent.
And here where light is music,
And company merriest,
Like a bat, the bitter heart,
Is midnight's honored guest.
There it skims, and whistles low,
Describing its doomed arc.
A heart is nothing one would know.
It hungers in the dark.

Dismissal Policy

The Federal Diary of The Post January 2 gave an outline of the procedure for dismissal of several thousand employes of the Census Bureau whose work is nearing its end.

It appears that Census Director Austin appointed a committee of three to "work up a dismissal policy." The committee "formula," as announced in The Post, provides that "employes with efficiency ratings below 70 are being released first."

In other words, these employes are turned loose to look for other jobs plastered by advance publicity that they are poor workers. This method of branding employes is unfair labor practice.

Laws And Happiness

The heart of the world grows sadder and more dejected as the years go by because it is a fact well known that when there are too few laws of restraint, the shrewd and cunning brain of man drives millions into slavery and misery. When there are too many laws of restraint, however, the whole world is cast into chains and hopelessness by those to whom it was given to deal out justice.

On Losing A War By Propaganda

The air is full of rumors insisting that the Government is about to set up a department of propaganda or public information. In spite of recurrent denials, quite a few men are reported to be in favor of it. Public demand is also often heard. In view of all this discussion, let's consider the experience in the last war. The committee of public information, headed by George Creel, was certainly not essential to winning the war. The war would without a doubt have been won if there never had been any such committee.

Our Committee of Public Information has been the inspiration of the propaganda activities of the totalitarian powers. Particularly the Nazis are known to have copied it extensively. If you believe in freedom of expression, the deeds of the committee, in spite of Mr. George Creel's evident personal integrity, do not make attractive reading. Mr. Creel, himself, recognized the failure. Creel was forced to stand by helplessly while the fundamental idea that the CPI had tried to sell the world—a Wilsonian peace—was crushed beyond recognition.

In the light of these two facts: (1) that the Committee of Information was not necessary for America's victory, and (2) that such a department has become an institution of the totalitarian systems, it may well be asked whether the establishment today of any such committee or department is desirable, even if America should become involved in this war, let alone as long as we are not. Furthermore, we have developed Government public relations work in all important services. We should coordinate these in order to eliminate contradictory statements. The President's Committee on Administrative Management reporting in 1937 recommended "the correlation and coordination of the administrative policies of the several departments in the operation of their informational services." It is generally agreed that divergent reports upset public morale. But let us not have a single agency for information, but a setup by which the head of each information service can know what is going to be released. Such a coordinated setup, unimaginable in 1917, is quite conceivable today, since the chief informational officers of the several departments and services know each other well and constitute a working fraternity with a definite code of workmanship.

Assuming that such coordination will be achieved, it clearly obviates one urgent reason for the Committee of Public Information which existed in 1917: The need for effectively informing the people concerning the Government's work.

But what about the other two tasks: Building and maintaining American popular morale, and carrying on propaganda abroad? As for the second, the creation of a special unit, headed by Nelson Rockefeller, to deal with Latin America, constitutes an important beginning. In spite of certain administrative obstacles, the work of this unit seems to be developing rapidly. It may well be desirable to establish similar units to deal with Europe and Asia, respectively. In each area, the task is quite distinctive. The most urgent thing is to keep in mind that Government propaganda abroad has to be carried on with considerable regard for the local condition. The records of the Committee of Public Information in the last war would suggest that there is a very definite danger that our views may have a boomerang effect. George Creel set forth his views and accomplishments in an autobiographical book entitled "How We Advertised America." Such a job, if well done, is today more important even than in 1917. The fact that democracy is on the defensive all over the globe makes it very urgent that we effectively demonstrate our faith in its future. But this cannot be done in the smug, self-satisfied manner of 1917. Democracy is on trial, and its friends will have to take a bold and yet a more cautious stand than in 1917. There can be little doubt that the oversanguine expectations raised by the too effective work of American propaganda led to the utter despair of the mass of Europeans in 1919. In a sense the cradle of Hitlerism is to be seen in those exaggerated hopes caused by a false sense of security concerning the achievements possible for democracy.

The most difficult problems arise, however, when we come to the domestic field. The whole record of the Committee of Public Information shows pretty clearly that the self-satisfied smugness concerning democracy and America, coupled with the indiscriminate condemnation of all things German, laid the foundation for that cynical trend in American letters toward all things smacking of "propaganda." The celebrated phrase, "Let's make the world safe for democracy," became the occasion for derision and sardonic abuse; it well epitomizes the general reaction. As a further consequence, the American public developed an exaggerated allergy toward all political idealism. It was and is seen as a species of propaganda. There can be little doubt that a good deal of this reaction is traceable to the work of the Committee of Public Information. Being unduly concerned over the "winning" of the war in the purely military sense, they can be said to have laid the foundation for that loss of the war which the repudiation of President Wilson's program, both abroad and at home, amounted to.

Looking Ahead

President Roosevelt's chat brightened the prospect for an early peace by negotiation and the war should end swiftly if he is as bold or bolder in his message to the new Congress. Hitler will have an incentive to offer tolerable terms to Britain.

He has not that incentive now. Beyond reasonable doubt he is winning the war of attrition and is under no pressure to gamble on an invasion of Britain. An invasion would be costly and might fail. Also, it might succeed, but that's our worry. Hitler will estimate the chances capably; thus far in his sinister and amazing career, he is the man who has never been wrong.

If peace by negotiation is not had, we will enter the war, if there still is an England.

We may lose the war, though by default rather than by military decision. Following the conquest of Britain, the war should languish, as Germany could conceivably want nothing of us, as she can conceivably want nothing now but our trade and our gold, and for her to compete for the one and borrow the other there must be peace. With the gun of which the President spoke pointed at our heads, we will finance the new Europe.

We may win the war, after few or many years, but it is unlikely that the peace will realize our present dreams of a partitioned and permanently crippled Germany. The prospect is that the beaten and de-Hitlerized Germany will go Communist, and with German genius and energy driving Russia's multimillions, the next war, more probably disastrous to us, will be coming our way. To head it off we will reconstitute Germany, finance her, finance exhausted Europe, with the gun of which the President spoke—now a Russo-German gun—pointed at our heads.

Add it up in any way and it comes to the same thing, cheap now, costly later. As Diogenes in his tub said to the visiting Alexander, "You will sit down and rest after you have conquered the world? But you can do that now." Alexander went to his peace the hard way, as the few among us who dominate the many would have us go. With magical words such as "civilization," "religion," "all we hold dear," filling the air, it is hard to hear the voice of reason and humanity saying, "Prepare for war, prepare for all aid to Britain, and name terms of peace." DO IT NOW.

On Quoting Hitler

The suggestion of F. N. Pilling in your issue of January 2 that we drop "the bad habit of quoting Hitler," is a good one. Why pay attention to Hitler's words, in view of the fact that he uses them as smoke screens? Take his pledged word to Poland and his serving of an ultimatum on that unfortunate land, whose peoples he is now systematically exterminating, two hours after the invasion had begun. Take the official assurance of the German Minister to the Norwegian government that the German fleet, whose movement had been detected, was on its way to attack Scotland, the night of that treacherous surprise. Or take the case of Holland, which woke up to find Nazi sky-troopers in the guise of Dutch soldiers, peasants, civilians and even priests. So why waste time on the words of a man who thinks honoring one's word is the sign of a fool? Let's drop the bad habit of quoting Hitler.

The Post Impressionist

Business As Usual

IT SEEMED like a good idea at the time, but perhaps the undercurrent of persuasive urgency that sweeps through a toy shop just before Christmas had lowered our sales resistance.

I must admit, however, that the grocery store had its own selling points. Almost as tall as my husband, it towered over the other play houses like a skyscraper in Lilliput, with bricks painted over its cardboard walls and gaudy striped awnings shading its windows. Inside, we saw advertising banners that pictured fruit of incomparable succulence, and neat stacks of dummy cartons of lard and butter and cereals and chewing gum. Educational, we decided, not realizing at the time just who was to be educated.

It was delivered collapsed in a large flat carton and hidden behind the piano until Christmas. Our difficulties began Christmas Eve when we surveyed the living room and observed that a tree and village, toys large and small, a table of packages and a half-dozen guests left little room for this store, which now appeared to possess super-colossal proportions. But we agreed that at Christmas the children's interests came first, and decided that if necessary we would use the last square inch of space.

The crowding was less acute during the actual construction, but that was because one guest was inside the store. As he put on the finishing touches, an occasional arm thrust out of the window suggested Alice in the White Rabbit's house, and from behind the tree someone piped, "Mary Ann! Mary Ann! Fetch me my gloves this moment!" No one remembered what came next, so my husband took down the "Adventures" from the bookshelf to look it up. Alice, stiff and weary, lifted a corner of the building and emerged, brushing excelsior from his trousers.

From a juvenile standpoint, the effect was perfect, but to our jaded adult eyes this house within a house was too much, and after the children's grand awakening would be moved out to the unused portion of the double garage.

Christmas morning the store stole the show by its very bulk, and when it left the living room, the children followed. Through the kitchen window I saw a steady procession of tricycles and baby buggies going in and out of the driveway, and for some reason I was filled with a vague misgiving. Of course I should have investigated, but the turkey demanded my attention.

In the late afternoon I was surprised to see Donnie come in with a shining new pair of roller skates over his shoulder, and wondered how I failed to notice them among the gifts under the tree. Before we could settle the matter, Mary opened the door, carrying an enormous Dinah doll wearing a large white apron over a bright bandanna dress. Forestalling any questions, she announced that Carol had given it to her. I remembered Mary's modest present of a pinafore, and hoped that the gift had been measured by the spirit.

That evening Carol's mother telephoned to find whether her daughter had left a doll at our house. "I honestly don't believe she knows what belongs to her and what doesn't. She came home tonight with a doll's high chair, and I can't imagine where she got it. She says she can't remember." I asked if it were pink, with a wooden tray that would swing up over the doll's head. It was.

Matters were no clearer when, a half hour later, I began to make a list of thank-you notes. I went to the study to look through the pile of Christmas books to see who had sent Donnie the beautifully illustrated copy of Dickens' "Christmas Carol," but could not find it. A search revealed no trace, but inside my son's bed I saw a large new paper-backed book recounting the exploits of the Lone Ranger. I eyed my sleeping cherub wrathfully and turned off the light.

Of course, as Donnie argued the next morning, we did have three copies of the "Christmas Carol" already, not counting the one that came out in The Post the Sunday before Christmas. And Mary, with a martyr's sigh that made me shudder for my future son-in-law, said that she had wanted a maid to help her with her babies, but she guessed she would have to take Dinah back.

The doorbell rang, heralding a disillusioned Jimmie from down the street. He had exchanged a wind-up truck for the carton of chewing gum, under the impression that it was real. The truck and carton changed hands, and good feeling prevailed. Jimmie said that when the store was opened he wanted to bring a drum and swap it for an airplane. "Drums are kid stuff," he announced. Then he looked at Mary speculatively. "You might like it. Whacha got to trade?"

The three of them sat for a little while, looking at the lights twinkling on the tree. Donnie stroked the truck, a large red toy with a pulley attachment that tilted the body for unloading. Mary thumped her hands on a book, beating a rat-tat-tat, and probably thinking that a drum might be fun, at that. An idea took hold of me, and I clutched it like a drowning man.

"Children," I suggested, "why don't you trade the store for the drum and truck?" The caller's eyes lit up, but Donnie was dubious. "Throw in your pistol and holster!" he countered. Jimmie nodded rapturously.

Business, like peace, is wonderful.

Coherent Pattern

By Barnet Nover

Bardia, The Balkans And Eire

ASIDE FROM continuing her aerial assault on British cities and her aerial and U-boat attack on British shipping, Germany has, during recent days, been busily engaged in (1) reinforcing her garrisons in Rumania; (2) putting pressure on Bulgaria, whose premier, Bogdan Philoff, visited Vienna and Salzburg last week; (3) sending an air force to help the hard-pressed Italians in Albania and Libya, and (4) carrying out token raids on neutral Eire.

These developments seem at first glance to be unrelated. They are not unrelated. They form part of a coherent and easily discernible pattern. In one way or another, each of these moves is indicative of a German decision to carry out a major offensive against Great Britain in the not-too-distant future.

GERMAN troop movement across Hungary into Rumania have aroused widespread speculation and no little concern in such countries as Bulgaria, Yugoslavia and Turkey. Those nations are now uncomfortably close to the firing line. They must reckon with the possibility that the force which Germany has assembled in Rumania may be sent across their borders perhaps as part of a German move to help the Italians in Albania or one having for its ultimate objective German domination of Asia Minor. In other words, Hitler may be reverting to the plan he appeared to be considering after the failure of his aerial blitzkrieg against Great Britain in August and September, of moving south and east rather than west.

Insofar as a German move into Yugoslavia, or across Bulgaria to Greece or Turkey or both would add to the number of Hitler's enemies—and this at a time when weather conditions do not favor blitzkrieg tactics—these rumors of an impending large-scale action by the Reich in the Balkans are subject to discount.

It is more likely that Germany's Balkan activities are at this time only preparatory and, in a real sense, defensive. If and when an all-out attack on Great Britain is launched, and that may not be far off, Germany must make certain that her rear is safe. A large garrison in Rumania would insure safety. There may be some measure of truth in the theory of the Turkish newspaper, Vakit of Istanbul, that the discussions which Premier Philoff of Bulgaria has been having with the Nazis is on the subject of "how to prevent a British attack, rather than how to carry out a German attack in the Balkans." For were Italy knocked out of the war such a development would release British military, naval and air power that might be used in an assault on the German flank and rear.

IT IS CERTAINLY not in the German interest to have Italy knocked out. On the other hand, Germany may be unwilling to risk the men and planes that might conceivably turn the threatened Italian defeat into a victory. And, with British sea power dominant in the Mediterranean and threatening to control the Adriatic as well, it might take a considerable German force to bring about a real change in the tide of battle both in Albania and Africa.

The fact that Hitler would not vouchsafe his ally sufficient air power to make possible the continued defense of Bardia is revealing. Yet there is no reason to doubt that German planes and fliers are being placed at the disposal of the Italians. For that air force need not be so large as to weaken Germany's preparations for the coming assault on Great Britain yet may be sufficient to keep the Italians in the war at least long enough to make it impossible for Great Britain to transfer in time any large number of men, ships and planes from Africa to another theater of war.

THE TOWN raids on Ireland fall into the same category of moves preparatory to an all-out attack on Great Britain. British shipping losses have declined somewhat during recent weeks. But they remain considerable, and unless new ways and means can be found by the British to fight the submarine and bombing plane menace their position may become parlous before very long.

Under existing circumstances it would be very much to Britain's advantage to have the use of Irish bases. But to the extent that this is true it is to Germany's interest to keep these bases from being turned over. It is easy to see the reason for the raids. Their purpose was pure intimidation, a warning to the Dublin government of what is in store for Eire if Germany's desires and interests are flouted. But even if Eire knuckles down to this campaign of intimidation, that would hardly guarantee her against invasion and German aerial raids in the future. How little Hitler respects neutral rights has been revealed in what has happened to Denmark, Norway, Belgium and the Netherlands.

Surplus Facilities

By Ernest K. Lindley

A Way To Harness Them

THE REUTHER PLAN to make 500 planes a day by using the surplus facilities and skilled men of the automobile industry has caught hold in Washington. It has caught hold too firmly to be dislodged by generalities. It must be knocked off, if it can be, only by detailed refutation of the mass of technical data and opinion mustered in its support.

The plan is now in the hands of William S. Knudsen, newly named Director of Production Management. Mr. Knudsen is reputed to be not only a genius at production but the outstanding authority on the resources of the automobile industry. Yet the union leaders who are sponsors of this plan are so confident of its soundness that they have offered to put their experts on the witness stand to defend it against any testimony which may be offered against it.

Their experts—the union experts—are master mechanics in the automobile industry, whose word as to what is feasible and what is not usually is accepted by company managers. At least, the backers of the Reuther plan so assert.

Some of the general criticisms of the plan, or serious questions about it, have been set forth in an earlier column.

IT SUPPOSED that pursuit planes were the most pressing need. They are not. The greatest need is for bombers. This is the same kind of mistake Henry Ford made in talking airily about producing 5,000 planes a week. (Whatever may be said of Reuther and the United Automobile Workers, they have been more modest than Ford and have supported their boast with specific data, which Ford never has done and probably never could do).

If larger bombing planes were substituted for the pursuit planes the Reuther estimates of production would be reduced. But even a hundred bombers a day would be higher than any production schedule that is now in view.

The resources of the automobile industry already are being called upon to make airplane engines. And Knudsen has been working with the manufacturers on a program to make parts for 12,000 bombers to be assembled in new, specially built plants.

Reuther asserts that this program will not absorb more than 5 or 10 per cent of the idle capacity of the automobile industry. He asserts, further, that it is not being pushed; that manufacturers are merely being asked to choose parts they could and would like to make.

THERE IS NOT enough aluminum, for the present, to make 500 or even 100 planes a day. This is a real obstacle. But it does not invalidate the Reuther thesis that the manufacturing facilities are available in the automobile industry.

In good time, Knudsen probably will point to other errors in the calculations of the Reuther plan. But he will have to cite chapter and verse. For the union leaders act as if they were sure of their ground and seem eager to defend it.

Whatever the fate of this plan in detail, it has already served three valuable purposes.

It has driven home the fact that there are immense resources in the automobile industry — machines, buildings and skilled men —which have not been harnessed for the paramount task of national defense.

Secondly, it has indicated a lack of adequate inventory-taking and planning for the defense effort. The Army's industrial surveys and allocation of production for defense purposes were useful within limits. But the Army fell down on two vital fronts: inventory-taking of skilled labor and of existing machine tools. These defects have been only partially remedied since the National Defense Advisory Commission was set up.

The third useful purpose of the Reuther plan is to demonstrate organized labor's interest in expediting national defense production. Whatever its defects, it reveals an imagination and over-all idea of planning superior to anything which has been forthcoming from industrial ownership and management since the national defense effort began.

The fact that this plan originated with labor counts heavily against it among some representatives of industry. Unfortunately they can be found in the NDAC, along with some industrialists who are less impregnated with antilabor prejudices.

But the plan cannot be pricked by prejudice. It must be answered in detail, to the extent that it can be answered.

Fair Enough

The Wagner Act

THE MOST important recommendation of the Smith committee of the House of Representatives which investigated the Labor Board and the Wagner Act was the one which proposed a Congressional study of the whole question of labor relations. Of course, events may rush upon us in a storm and prevent orderly consideration, but I am assuming, for the moment, that it will be possible to poke along in a deliberate and surefooted way. If that is done Congress is sure to cure its mind of a great many superstitions concerning the structure and practice of unions, and amendments to the Wagner Act naturally will follow.

It would be just as well to admit that the Wagner Act, as originally passed, was an emotional item of legislation which recorded or revealed great ignorance of the subject of unions. Surely Congress would not have passed this law had the fact been known that professional criminals were operating important unions of the American Federation of Labor and were represented in its executive council, and that this big parent organization disclaimed both the power and the duty to clean house. Congress would not have taken the responsibility for driving hundreds of thousands of workers into unions against their will, thus subjecting many of them to the rule of gangsters and of Communist conspirators.

IT IS impossible to believe that, even in those emotional days, Congress knowingly would have become a party to a deal by which unions were given the power to intimidate workers in public elections, and even to shake down workers and employers as well for political party funds. These are some of the discoveries that have been made since the Wagner Act was hailed as labor's Magna Charta, the law which was supposed only to guarantee the right of collective bargaining, but which created abuses as bad as those which it was intended to correct. A calm inquiry would show that in the union of Sidney Hillman himself voters were coerced in the last election in a manner which, invoked by an employer, would have landed the rascal in jail. It would show that a local of David Dubinsky's union ordered its members to attend a political rally for Senator Mead, of New York, under penalty for failure, and, of course, it would prove that the Wagner Act established a legal basis for the operation of rackets at the expense of the workers, industry, the National Defense and workable relations between labor and industry.

TO RECAPTURE the mood of the time when the Wagner Act was passed it may be recalled that the American Federation of Labor was commonly and carelessly regarded as a great, voluntary organization of workers standing together, against abuses by the employers, but still in need of Federal backing to thwart the bosses at their dirty practices. But that was just a general impression which made the employers, as a class, appear to be a bad lot and the unions innocent and noble groups.

Now it is plain that the employers were not all cruel and greedy and that there were some very bad men in control of the unions, including some clever rough-and-tumble swindlers who held their power by the methods of the grafting political boss and lacked criminal records only because tradition warned the public prosecutors to lay off the unions.

There are plenty of honest union leaders who would testify, if placed under oath, to the perfidy of other union leaders, and it would take no squealer to reveal, under intelligent questioning, that the two big organizations—A. F. of L. and C. I. O.—are enormous private governments with all the ills and faults of public government, but in exaggerated form because they have been practically immune from public inspection and governmental restraint.

ONCE THE FACTS were revealed Congress would be bound to adopt amendments to the Wagner Act or other legislation to abolish, rather than license, union abuses. This need not be a dramatic or corny investigation of the midget-on-lap type. A few individual workers could be used as witnesses to prove various forms of oppression by unions, but the union powers and practices could be learned by examination of their constitutions and their history. A union which has not held a convention in 30 years, for example, cannot be said to represent the will of the workers.

Senator Wagner himself should be deflated to his actual size, and he would be deflated by such an inquiry, along with the law which bears his name. He is still bouncing aloft, buoyant with the gas of emotional publicity which praised his name, long after the defects of his Magna Charta began to reveal themselves.

Feuding Over Defense

THE AUSPICES were far from favorable at the inauguration of the new defense setup. When the fall of France created the defense emergency last spring a truce followed in the old war between the conservative and New Deal factions in the Administration. Restrained by their wiser leaders, even the most hot-headed New Dealers hardly grumbled when the President handed over management of the defense program to businessmen and industrialists recruited outside the Government.

The truce was broken for the first time last week in a bitter row over the character of the Office of Production Management, the four-man supreme council to which the President has now confided the task of pushing the defense program forward. The issue was the relationship between Messrs. William S. Knudsen and Sidney Hillman, the representatives of industry and labor on the new council. For a time the controversy seemed likely to spread into every important Administration group, and to bring back the old conservative-New Deal warfare as permanent governmental phenomenon.

Fortunately, Knudsen and Hillman themselves had no part in the hostilities. Even the New Dealers most inclined to blame Knudsen's aides for "plotting" to capture supreme authority for their chief, place no blame on Knudsen himself. Hillman was laid up with a bad attack of grippe throughout the proceedings, and he, too, is absolved by the conservatives. Nevertheless, the row was a symptom of an inner sickness which ought to be treated at once, and in the most drastic possible manner.

The row had its origin in the extreme vagueness of the President's description of the respective positions of Knudsen and Hillman in the proposed Office of Production Management. Knudsen, he said, was to be director, while Hillman was to be associate director. As to which was to be top man, he said nothing, although it was generally assumed Knudsen would reign supreme over production problems, while labor problems would be the domain of Hillman.

THE TASK of reducing the President's plan to an Executive order fell to the Budget Bureau. Budget Director Harold Smith and his assistants naturally felt that the final authority ought to be fixed. Behind the President's announcement of the OPM, an impressive record suggested the final authority ought to be fixed on Knudsen. No doubt the Budget Bureau officials were encouraged to single Knudsen out when they consulted Knudsen's counsel, Frederick Eaton. Thus, in the first draft of the Executive order the basic administrative powers were largely concentrated in Knudsen's hands.

Unhappily, the Budget Bureau failed to consult Hillman's counsel, Maxwell Brandwen, until after the Executive order was in draft form. This naturally aroused the suspicions of Brandwen, and of others insistent on the need for giving "labor a voice at the council table." The order itself, which could be interpreted as allowing Knudsen a say in Hillman's own field of labor relations, was even more disturbing to Brandwen and the New Deal group. The Budget Bureau made some changes in the order to meet Brandwen's objections, but when the final draft was circulated to the War and Navy Departments and Hillman's and Knudsen's offices, it was still substantially the same as at the start.

A tremendous ruckus thereupon was raised over the "effort to make Knudsen the czar." While the conservative faction looked on furiously the Hillmanites and New Dealers appealed to the Justice Department and, through men close to him, to the President himself.

It was stated that the draft Executive order did not conform to the President's wishes, and that Hillman was being shoved aside in Knudsen's favor. Much was made of the President's press conference statement on the OPM that no one would be the boss. Eventually the President decided the issue by having the order redrafted to give Hillman additional authority and to leave the fixing of final authority still vague, to be worked out within the OPM.

THE ROW has left an unpleasant legacy of bad feeling and suspicion. There will be an inclination to blame this side or that for playing havoc with the defense program from self-interested motives. Yet it ought to be clearly understood that the row arose, not from self-interest, but from the failure of either faction to understand the other.

Hillman was given an important position in the OPM in the first instance for a perfectly sensible reason. The extremists in the labor movement, led by John L. Lewis, are doing their best to undermine him. If they succeed the labor movement will be handed over to men for some of whom sabotaging defense is the party line. The loudest cry of the extremists is that Hillman is a "stooge" unable to make labor's needs felt. Thus frank subordination of Hillman to Knudsen, even with respect to labor problems, was exceedingly unwise. Had this been recognized at the beginning, when the first drafts of the Executive order were being made, the whole difficulty might have been avoided.

On the other hand, it is clearly impracticable to share the administrative authority of the OPM between Hillman and Knudsen, without adequate delimitation of their functions. Because of what was regarded as the original aggression against Hillman in the first drafts of the Executive order, no such delimination was attempted in the conferences following appeal to the White House. Fortunately, Knudsen and Hillman themselves are perfectly capable of dividing the work between them, with the help of the other two members of the OPM, Secretaries of War and Navy Henry Stimson and Frank Knox. If their friends are not too anxious to involve them in their feuds, Knudsen and Hillman can still do the job between them.

19th Century Bedtime Story

By Dorothy Thompson

On Rereading George Moore

THE OTHER NIGHT, for refuge from the travail of these days, I pulled a book out of my library, with which to read myself to sleep. It was George Moore's "Confessions of a Young Man;" vaguely I remembered that in my youth I had been fascinated by his accounts of the salons and ateliers of the Paris of the fin de siecle; anyway it would be pleasant, and somnolent relief from the evening papers and from speculations about what their reports might really mean.

THUS I STUMBLED upon passages like these:

"Gautier . . . taught me that our boasted progress is but a pitfall into which the race is falling . . . and I accepted the plain, simple conscience of the pagan world as the perfect solution of the problem that had vexed me so long; I cried 'ave' to it all: lust, cruelty, slavery, and I would have held down my thumbs in the Colosseum that a hundred gladiators might die and wash me free of my Christian soul, with their blood."

And, commenting bitterly on the fact that a sharp decrease in income from his rents had forced him to leave Paris, he writes:

"That some wretched farmers and miners should refuse to starve that I may not be deprived of my demitasse at Tortoni's—monstrous! And these wretched creatures will find support in England; they will find pity! Pity, that most vile of all vile virtues, has never been known to me. The great pagan world I love knew it not. Now the world proposes to interrupt the terrible, austere laws of nature which ordain that the weak shall be trampled on, shall be ground to death and dust, that the strong shall be really strong . . . glorious, sublime.

"Hither the world has been drifting since the coming of the pale Socialist of Galilee; and this is why I hate Him and deny His divinity! . . . Come to me who are weak! . . . terrible, disastrous word, and before it fell the ancient gods and the vices that they represent and I revere . . . Injustice I worship; all that lifts us out of the miseries of life is the sublime fruit of injustice. Every immortal deed was an act of fearful injustice; the world of grandeur, of triumph, of courage, of lofty aspiration, was built up on injustice. Hail, therefore, to the thrice glorious virtue, injustice!

"Oh, for excess, for crime! . . . We are weary of pity, weary of being good . . . strangely enigmatic is the soul of the antique world, the bare, barbarous soul of beauty and of might!"

"OH, FOR EXCESS, for crime!" "What care I," wrote the young and fastidious George Moore, "that some millions of Israelites died under Pharaoh's lash! It was well that they died that I might have the Pyramids to look on. The knowledge that a wrong was done is an added pleasure."

At the end of the nineteenth century a great many young men in Europe were writing in this vein, passionately advocating the transvaluation of all values, the return to the pagan world, the virtues of vice, the beauty of cruelty. They considered themselves an "elite;" they scorned the "masses;" they went in for black magic and satanism. The epoch of prosperity and peace supported them—on the efforts of Mr. Moore's "wretched miners"—and they indulged their fantasies in dreams of "the silence of marble courts . . . the shadow of great pillars . . . the reticulated canopies of lilies."

The glory of youth and violence was being preached in the most brilliant manner in Germany by an authentic genius: Friedrich Nietzsche, and his words, parroted and paraphrased, were in the mouths of German youth, while English youth translated Charles Darwin's researches into the Origin of Species into a justification of the Social Doctrine of the Survival of the Fittest.

None of them did anything about it. They worshiped the art created by the Great Injustices from extremely comfortable salons; Friedrich Nietzsche enjoyed the bourgeoise amenities of his house in Weimar while he hailed the coming of the superman, whose qualities were recorded in Mr. Moore's "Confessions," which young ladies like myself read with titillations of mental excitement.

I REGRET that Mr. Moore, though he lived long, did not live long enough to see the age he yearned for—the age of the "bare, barbarous soul of beauty" rise up in its Caesarean might east of the Rhine.

He would have lived to see the poems that he thought the quintessence of this pagan soul—"I would give many lives for one sonnet of Baudelaire, for 'A la tres chere, a la tres belle'"—burned by the Supermen as decadent trash. He would have lived to read that a great Rubens, cut from its frame, is put on a roller to be used as a screen for the private motion picture theater of the Hero, Field Marshal Goering.

He would have lived to see the chromo-water colors of one Adolf Hitler hung side by side with the treasures of the Renaissance, and to have read a treatise on Art by the All-Highest who thinks that "any one who sees the sky green ought to be sterilized."

"Oh, for excess, for Crime!" The bare beauty of the Immortal Justice sweeps forward conquering and to conquer, and the "Elite," from the heavens 30,000 feet above the earth, scatter lovely red roses of fire upon stones that stood when Chaucer wrote; upon the airy lace of Perpendicular churches; upon the formal and serene reticence of eighteenth-century spires. And the "wretched little men" whom pity kept alive, run grinning with time-bombs in their arms, risking death in a million bits of contemptible flesh to save the ample grandeur of St. Paul's!

"THESE WRETCHED creatures will find moral support in England . . . they will find Pity."

In Germany, a race of Young Men emerges. The super-elite among them live in palaces, where they are trained as "Fuehrerschaft." They are biologically selected — for strength, height, stance, race. Their marriages are supervised. They are systematically trained for cruelty and hardness, for lusty joy in the racks and the steel whip, the sight of blood. The torture barracks and the steel whip, the concentration camp and the pogrom are their schooling. Tops among them are the airmen—oh, gay, insouciant, heroic soul who machine-gunned to death on a football field the 12-year-old boy, whom I saw in Alsace on his peasant bier, a beautiful rose of blood upon his wretched little chest. Maybe he was a poet, George Moore. Maybe he was a painter— another Van Gogh, the great pitier, who spent his days among the Belgian miners!

DID YOU EVER dream, there in Paris, among young pretty women who sat for Manet's portraits, that the new barbaric beauty might come marching in masses—the masses you despised—into the Paris you adored—and that the lust and glut of the New Rome would be expressed in goose steps down the Champs Elysee? Alas, the blood is not even gloriously spilled in the amphitheater! The lions do not publicly tear their prey before the gleeful cry "Thumbs down!" The persecutions are secretive—let them die slowly and emaciatedly behind barbed wire, perish in a wretched welter of soggy bedding on roadsides and in stalls, cough and spit themselves to death on the decks and in the holds of fugitive ships for whom there is no port. The new and beautiful barbarism explodes the sewers and gas mains. The Arena of Caeser in the Twentieth Century reeks of human sweat. It has become too large, too vast, to sweep and strew with cleansing sand.

WHO WOULD you be for, George Moore, had you lived to see your dream come true? Where would you find the heroic beauty for which you panted—on a silken couch in Paris, in the late eighties? What cry would move you now?

Thumbs down?

Or the cry of the Defenders of Pity: Thumbs up!

Police Boys Club Looks To Capital for 1941 Funds

By Gerald G. Gross
Post Staff Writer

SIX dollars will give a Washington boy a full year's use of Metropolitan Police Boys' Club facilities.

Boosters and directors of the organization founded nearly seven years ago by Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police, think that is pretty cheap, which accounts for their confidence that the 1941 funds campaign will go over the top.

Sergt. Forrest L. Binswanger, director of the Police Boys' Club, pointed out yesterday that with $100,000 as the goal and 16,500 youths enrolled as members, the average cost is only a few cents over $6 a year.

CHARLES B. DULCAN, Sr., is chairman of the campaign, which is scheduled to begin on February 15 and close on March 13. Morris Cafritz is president of the club, whose five branches are situated in those sections of the city where they are needed most.

First of the chapters, in order of establishment, is that in the basement of the Fifth Precinct Police Station at Fifth and E Streets Southeast. Club No. 4, the number referring to the police precinct, is at 472 I Street Southwest and formerly served as a day nursery. The one at Kenilworth Avenue and Ord Street serves the northeast section.

THE fourth is in Pierce Hall, Fifteenth and Harvard Streets Northwest, and the colored boys' club is at 1200 U Street Northwest. All except the Pierce Hall club, which is open on Mondays and Thursdays, operate six days a week.

Keeping youngsters off dangerous streets, reducing delinquency, teaching boys sportsmanship and clean living, providing them with athletic equipment and supplies which would not be available to underprivileged children otherwise—the clubs have been widely praised for their achievements, in other cities as well as locally.

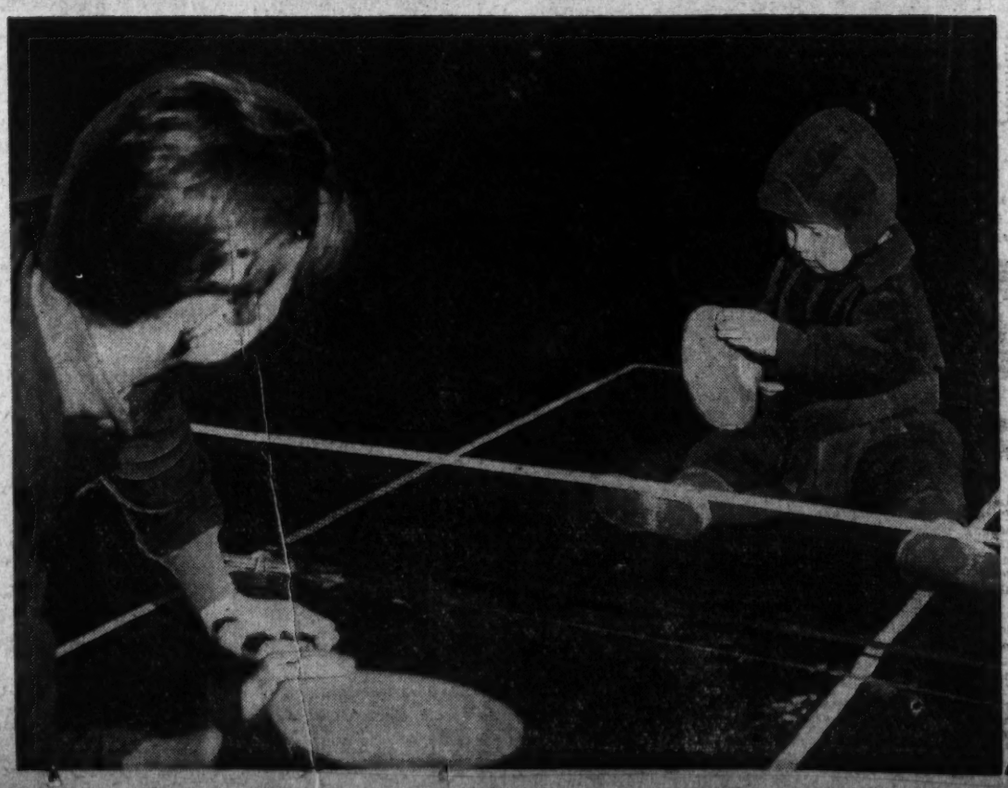
PUZZZLING—Six or 16, there's plenty of things for members to do. Ronald Burns, 8; "Sonny Boy" Thomas, 6, and Joseph Santaiti, 7, collaborate on a jigsaw puzzle



THE SOUTHWEST club hasn't turned out any prodigies yet—but it has hopes. These seven pencil wielders (above) are trying their best to copy a sketch of the Washington Monument. At right—They start 'em young in Club No. 5. Edward Watts, the tumbling instructor, teaches his 18-month-old son George when to ping and when to pong

A WAY TO TRAVEL—To transport boys to games and parties, there is the trusty station wagon, shown loaded with southwest club members

Nelson B. Bell About the Showshops

Benny Goodman Band Is Signed for Birthday Balls

Famous Maestro and Specialists Here Jan. 30; Unique Film Next Attraction at Columbia; This, That and the Other About the Theater

SINCE THERE IS still such a thing as newspaper ethics, believe it or not, and our three-day-old copy of Entertainment Chairman Andrew R. Kelley's announcement was plainly stenciled "RELEASE MONDAY," this seems to be the appointed time to break into print with the official statement that Benny Goodman will bring his caravan of musicmakers to Washington for the President's Birthday Celebrations on Thursday, January 30.

BELL

While Maestro Goodman is the reigning favorite of those who like to dance in the aisles, he has made musical history since last appearing in the Capital. The signposts marking his eminence as one of contemporary music's foremost clarinetists are numerous. He has, for example, given a "swing concert" in that famous shrine of classic and standard music, Carnegie Hall, in New York; he has appeared as clarinet soloist with the Rochester Civic Orchestra; in early December, he played Mozart and Debussy with the New York Philharmonic Orchestra and with the Budapesth Quartet, for clarinet and strings, in New York's Town Hall.

Furthermore, there is a persistent rumor still afloat on the refrigerated breezes that Benny was in town recently to add the zest of his tootling to the New Year's festivities at the White House. In fact, Chicago called this desk that night in an effort to put the finger on the Goodman, who seemed particularly elusive that evening.

In coming to the National Capital for the 1941 Birthday Celebrations, Goodman is perpetuating a noble tradition of "top bands" for this effulgent annual event—a tradition to which Paul Whiteman, Kay Kyser and numerous others of the first flight recently have contributed. Featured with the Goodman band will be such specialists as Helen Forrest, Cootie Williams, Georgie Auld and the famous Benny Goodman Septet.

A unique screen offering will be the next attraction at Loew's Columbia Theater. It is "Land of Liberty," compiled by Cecil B. DeMille from something like 125 motion pictures, dealing with the highlights in the growth of the United States into a world power, that have been made over the past quarter-century. The symposium was assembled as a special and significant exhibit of unusual timeliness for the New York and San Francisco World's Fairs. Not a single new foot of celluloid was exposed in its preparation, which ought to give Mr. DeMille a clear claim to the honor of being the Horace Greeley, Charles A. Dana, or something of comparable note among the cinema's editors-in-chief. The first Washington screening of "Land of Liberty" was held in the Columbia Saturday morning before an audience of the District's patriotic, civic, church and women's organizations.

Those still palpitant to the pigskin pyrotechnics of the post-season gridiron classics, will find a gelatin dessert to their liking in the pictures of the Georgetown-Mississippi State Bowl game now on the screens at the Earle, Palace, Trans-Lux, Metropolitan and Ambassador Theaters. The two teams may have been pals after the game, but you'd never know it from the shots caught by the cameras.

The Speech and Drama Department of Catholic University, having found two satisfactory pairs of twins for the leading roles, this week is resuming rehearsals of Shakespeare's "Comedy of Errors," to open in the University Theater on January 15 as the first Harlequins production of 1941. James Graham will play the gentleman from Ephesus, who looks so confusingly like Stan Nagoski, the gentleman from Syracuse. Lionel Booth will appear as one Dramio, opposite his double, Leo Brady, who also looks surprisingly like the author of "Brother Orchid." The remainder of the cast look like nobody else so much as excellent choices for their respective roles.

It was fun Friday night sitting around with Joe Penner, Cass Daley and others of the "Yokel Boy" company, at the National, all immersed in the bewilderments and perplexities of breaking in a new show. After three tightening-up days in Baltimore, "Yokel Boy" seemed to be going great guns, until all of those mechanical collapses caused a bit of wonderment on both sides of the footlights at the National Monday night. Happily, they played a strictly one-night stand. Friday night's performance was a honey, with new "gags," curtain lines, bits of business and dances scattered throughout the two acts and 16 scenes. You wouldn't have known the kid. Joe and Cass are getting a prodigious bang out of their first production. "Yokel Boy," on the strength of the Washington weekend, should be good for a full season of high box-office on the road. And its stars, as must have been suspected before this, are swell people. But they certainly keep you up late—or vice versa, as the case may be!

So once again our sanity was impugned for having declared Elmer Rice's "Flight to the West" a smash hit on its recent opening on E Street, prior to New York. It was too wordy, lacked action, etc., etc. In the light of subsequent events, we are abashed only by our unconscious predilection for understatement. The New York critical "death watch" began practically where we left off. "Flight to the West," at New York's Guild Theater, leaped immediately into the hit class, along with Miss Barrymore's "The Corn Is Green," as the second dramatic work of the season to break the stranglehold of musical and light comedies on the affections of the critics and the public. Not that it matters.

Two-on-the-Nose-and-Forget-the-Rest Note

VIVIEN LEIGH AND LAURENCE OLIVIER

as the most beautiful woman of her day and Lord Nelson, hero of the British navy (left, center and center), are honored by the Neapolitan court, following the victories of Admiral Nelson at the Battle of the Nile. This is in "Lady Hamilton," the Alexander Korda production soon to be released by United Artists.

'Year of War' Review Tops Trans-Lux Bill

Raymond Gram Swing's narration makes Pathe's slightly belated "1940 a Year of War" the outstanding feature of the current program at the Trans-Lux Theater and sets a new high standard for newsreel narrators to emulate. The sensational camera shots of 1940 are well worth seeing again under the spell of his illuminating explanations. Also M-G-M's superior film recording of the Tacoma Bridge collapse, with Prof. Farquaharson's accompanying description, fully warrants the repeat showing of this unique spectacle.

March of Time's issue "Labor and Defense—1941" is no small part of the show, either. It tells the story of labor organization, dramatically, without sparing it, but in the main favorably, with its leaders getting due appreciation.

The News Section also carriers the first pictures of Canadian Troops manning guns along the British coast against Nazi invasion, and the President making his thrilling appeal for the utmost aid to Britain; British child evacuees, talking by telephone with their parents at home; the Cuban tornado and California's coastal tidal wave.

Sport fans have a feast this week with full coverage of the Georgetown-Mississippi football game, in the Orange Bowl, and highlights of the Sugar and Cotton Bowl contests. "Yankee Dandy" is seen winning the Santa Anita opener and Universal presents its "Review of 1940" sport thrills.

"Violin" is an informative film about the art of making this instrument, and "The Wise Owl" an amusing color cartoon.

Gayety

Rosita Royce, No. 1 attraction at the New York World's Fair, is the star of this week's revue at the Gayety Theater.

Miss Royce's speciality is one of the most unusual seen on this or any other stage. Briefly, Rosita, a dark-eyed and stunning brunette, appears on the stage and, after an introductory bow to the audience, holds up her shapely arms and, as if by magic, seven doves appear out of the wings and perch themselves upon her shoulders and head. This is followed by one of the most novel and daring dances seen here in seasons.

Max Furman and Mac Dennison headline in the laughs department. Both lads are working with fine comedy material. With the able assistance of Murray Briscoe, one of the circuit's better straightmen and best dressers, the revue unwinds more than its share of laughs.

On the distaff side are such sirens as Princess Aloha, Helen Colby, Lee Curdy and Alma Maiben. Miss Maiben proves to be an excellent "talking woman," while the acrobatic dancing of Miss Curdy is far above par.

Two of the outstanding hits of the bill are the dancing of sepian Ralph Brown and the whistling of Von Suppe's "Poet and Peasant" by Murray and Erwin. The musical specialties of the Sixteen Smart Steppers add color and gayety to the entertainment. ART JOHN.

The New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons

New York, Jan. 5.

FASHIONS DEPARTMENT: Mrs. Stanley Smith, daughter of the Grand Vizier of Turkey, arrived from England on December 31. She was asked: "What's your last impression of London? Which is the memory that lingers most" . . . "Dancing in the Dorchester, shortly before I left," she replied. "The hotel shook, because of the bombardment, but we all ignored it completely. Then, on our way out, some people invited us to dine with them the next day. The doors of the trembling Dorchester were open, and we couldn't hear what our host was shouting after us. Then, while the antiaircraft guns were stilled for a moment, we heard him call, "Don't forget—white tie."

LYONS

SOCIAL NOTES: George Jessel flew from Miami Beach to Hollywood. In Ciro's he met Herb Stein, of the Hollywood Reporter, and told him that he had seen the Duke of Windsor during his visit to Miami . . . "I didn't know that you were acquainted with him," said Stein. "Do you know the Duke of Windsor well?" . . . "Do I know him?" said Jessel, waving his hand. "I knew him when."

MOVIES DEPARTMENT: George Bernard Shaw, who made a trailer for his new movie, "Major Barbara," has entered upon a new career—at the age of 84. Although Shaw has appeared before the camera many times—in newsreels, etc.—he makes his first appearance as an actor in a feature film in "Major Barbara" . . . The bearded playwright will be recognizable as a member of the audience in the scene showing a Salvation Army meeting.

MUSIC DEPARTMENT: The first lawsuit arising out of ASCAP's dispute with the broadcasting chains was announced last night—an infringement suit based upon the fact that the "Wintergreen for President" music, written by George Gershwin, had been used during the Fred Allen program . . . This melody was composed nine years ago for the Kaufman-Ryskind show, "Of Thee I Sing," which won the Pulitzer Prize for 1932. But the Pulitzer awards were given only to Kaufman, Ryskind, Ira Gershwin, and none to George—whose music from that show is so enduring that it now becomes the basis for the first test case in behalf of the most noted authors and composers of America.

THEATER DEPARTMENT: Albert Einstein saw the Princeton tryout of Elmer Rice's new hit, "Flight to the West." He sat silently observing the dramatization of the clash between democratic and Nazi ideologies . . . "If this play does not succeed," said Einstein, "it is not the fault of the players nor the fault of the play—but the fault of America."

DRAMA DEPARTMENT: Arturo Toscanini attended the New York premiere of the Rice play, and sat in the rear seat of the orchestra. He stayed up until 4 a. m. to get the drama reviews and then phoned a member of the cast to offer his congratulations . . . "That's what I call a play," said the venerable maestro, "because I could hear every word in the back."

BUSINESS DEPARTMENT: Raymond Massey visited Cafe Society last night, where an interviewer approached his table to ask one question: "What is your idea of success?" "I'll consider myself a success," he replied, "when I don't have to make any plans" . . . Massey then congratulated Hazel Scott, the pianist there. "Mr. Massey and I have one thing in common," said the accomplished colored entertainer later. "We're both glad that there once was a Lincoln."

WAR DEPARTMENT: Charlie Stanley, the former vaudeville acrobat who is married to Countess Pattera, used to annoy their London neighbors by comparing every phase of British life with that of America and giving his native country the best of it . . . Stanley now has an American machine gun mounted on his bomb shelter. During every raid he sits atop that shelter, firing the gun at the bombers he thinks are within range . . . But he still annoys those neighbors by shouting during each air raid, "You think this is something? You should've been in Chicago during prohibition."

Louella O. Parsons'

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, Jan. 5 (INS).—Hollywood, my town and yours, will always put the velvet carpet down for a football hero. Our movie stars may be heroes to the world at large, but let a Harmon, a Tilden, a Babe Ruth or a Dempsey come here and he'll be as much of a hero to the movie crowd and as much sought after as the stars are by Mr. and Mrs. John Public. That's why everyone at Paramount was aflutter today when Tom Harmon, the All-American football favorite was tested for a role in "Las Vegas Nights."

PARSONS

Ralph Murphy persuaded the football wizard to play a part in this movie now being produced on the lot and it is hard to say whether the movie folk or the studios were more excited over having the handsome gridiron hero in their midst.

The talk that Phil Regan may be starred in the life of Chauncey Olcott, the famous Irish actor, recalls to mind how kind both Mr. and Mrs. Olcott were to me many years ago when I met them in Missoula, Mont., where I went to spend the summer. They were also vacationing and motoring through the Northwest. Y. Frank Freeman is now reading "Song In My Heart," a story based on the life of Olcott. Mrs. Olcott believes that Phil is the one who should play the role and it is more than likely that it will be made sometime this year.

Myrna Loy has won the respect and admiration of everyone in Hollywood following the break-up of her marriage. I cannot begin to tell you the way Hollywood feels about the manner in which Myrna has conducted herself. There have been no sob stories or no implications that Hollywood was responsible for the rift. Not once, since her dignified explanation that she and Arthur Hornblow were parting, has Myrna appeared in a night club. Instead, she has taken a very small house and only her most intimate friends are invited to visit or dine with her.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Peggy Moran, who used to be Joe Pasternak's heartbeat, dining at the Little Hungary with John Pasternak, Joe's brother. Well, that's keeping Peggy in the family; Betty Compson, looking incredibly young, at the Gotham; Warren William and his wife have gone on a fishing jaunt all by themselves off the coast of Mexico; well, I just can't keep up with Tony Martin. After saying goodbye forever to Lana Turner, they were at the Scheherazade acting as if they'd never had a battle.

Shirley Temple was one of the guests at young Lord Furness' party at the Beverly Hills Brown Derby this afternoon. He is the son of Thelma Furness; John Considine, jr., celebrated his sixth birthday today and it was all stag, without even his sister among those present; Bill Haines is redecorating Joan Crawford's house again. Whenever Joan gets bored she has her house done over. Most of us gals settle for a new hat; Tyrone Power has been told by his boss, Darryl Zanuck, that he cannot do any more skiing until he finishes "Blood and Sand." Just a year ago Ty had a narrow escape and hunt his leg so badly they had to postpone his picture.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

In Hollywood

—With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Jan. 5.

Well, it's a New Year and anything can happen. But let's take a look over our shoulder at the old.

HOPPER

In 1940 Metro discovered Hedy Lamarr could act, but it took Clark Gable and an action picture, "Comrade X," to prove it. Kay Kyser broke down that old glamour bugaboo and became the talk of the county. Dottie Lamour was about to be let go at Paramount, when she took off her sarong, put on a sweater (torn in the right places), and became a new personality in "Johnny Apollo." And now I'll be darned if she isn't No. 5 at the box office.

Some of those who might like to find more poison at the box office are Katharine Hepburn, who'll probably get an award for her "Philadelphia Story;" Joan Crawford, who's stronger than ever; Eddie Arnold, who hasn't had an idle day in 1940, and Marlene Dietrich, who rode in on "Destry" to a smash hit.

"The Blue Bird" turned Shirley Temple's career green. Maybe with Judy Garland and Mickey it will turn blue again in 1941.

Wampas baby stars were revived, but so far you only hear of one—Joan Leslie.

Dennis O'Keefe, a bit player, went places with Kyser. Jack Oakie, Charlotte Greenwood and Marjorie Rambeau came into their own. The town became conscious of Marjorie Main after Damon Runyon devoted a whole column to her. Mark Hellinger still hasn't had a failure. The Martins have it—they've been kicked around plenty. I mean Mary and Tony—no relation. Only two years ago Hollywood turned its back on Tony, whose talent wasn't recognized, and they never let him sing. He was used only in prison and sport roles. He went to New York a sadder young man and wowed them. From $350 weekly, he blossomed in $6,000. Now you'll see him in "The Ziegfeld Girl," and hear him in a new radio show.

Garbo laughed. She'll probably have the last one in 1941. Paul Muni developed sex appeal. Orson Welles cut off his beard. Charles Boyer became a man without a country, but he's still first in the hearts of our countrywomen. When he served in the French army, he did it as a private—asked no favors.

Our famous divorces, which include such favorites as Luise Rainer, now almost forgotten here; Martha Raye, Greer Garson, Hedy Lamarr, Lana Turner, Ginger Rogers, Myrna Loy, Alice Faye, Gail Patrick, Helen Vinson, Jimmy Durante, Dick Foran, Eddie Lowe, Ricardo Cortez, are still fewer than our marriages, and I mean happy marriages.

And my list of directors who, after all, are the real picture-makers—Sam Wood, Mitch Leisen, Preston Sturges, Eddie Goulding, Willie Wyler, Garson Kanin, Alfred Hitchcock, John Ford, Bob Leonard, Mike Curtiz, Buzz Berkeley, Ernst Lubitsch, George Stevens, Hank Potter, George Marshall, Henry Koster, Frank Capra, Dorothy Arzner, Bill Seiter, Lewis Milestone, Victor Fleming, Norman Taurog, Clarence Brown, Mervy LeRoy, Irving Cummings, George Cukor, King Vidor, Raoul Walsh, Anatole Litvak.

As for the producers, they can take care of themselves—they always have. 1941 will be no exception. And may all your problems be little ones.

Mrs. Morrow Honored At Rublees' Tea Party

Tells of Work on Behalf of Ginling College in China, an Institution Aided By Alumnae of Smith College

By Dudley Harmon

Mrs. Dwight Morrow is a woman of many interests. After serving for a strenuous year as acting president of Smith College, she has by no means settled down into a do-nothing role. Her current activity centers about serving as honorary chairman of the committee on the Twenty-fifth Anniversary of Ginling College in China.

Yesterday, at the tea given in her honor by Mr. and Mrs. George Rublee, the wife of the late ambassador told something of her work in this direction. Ginling College, incidentally, is a project in which Smith alumnae and students have long been interested.

"I feel," said Mrs. Morrow, "that China is a bulwark against Japan. And as long as China keeps Japan occupied, the latter country will not be free to work for Germany."

daughter, Mrs. Morgan, the former Constance Morrow, who was a classmate of mine at Smith.

Leading Officials At Party

Mrs. Morrow was the center of attraction at the party given yesterday by Mr. and Mrs. Rublee. She chatted with Arthur Krock, Mr. and Mrs. Brooke Lee (Mrs. Lee is head of the Montgomery County Chapter of Bundles for Britain) and Norman H. Davis, chairman of the American Red Cross.

The Rublees live on Broad Branch Road, an address which was the cause of some bewilderment among several of the guests invited who had never been there before. Overlooking Rock Creek Park, the house is rather off the beaten track.

So, from her home in Englewood, N. J., Mrs. Morrow has followed with interest the drive to raise, in addition to the regular Smith gift annually to Ginling, an extra present to aid the college in China to carry on.

There is a remarkable family resemblance among the Morrows. Mrs. Morrow not only looks exactly like her daughter, Mrs. Charles Lindbergh, but also strongly resembles another

Among those invited to meet Mrs. Morrow were:

Justice and Mrs. William O. Douglas, she in a gray caracul coat and looking just under 20 (Mrs. Douglas is the youngest of the Supreme Court wives) . . . Chinese Ambassador Dr. Hu-Shih, who chatted about Ginling with the guest of honor . . . The popular Minister of Norway and Mme. Munthe de Morgenstierne, the latter wearing a fur piece and hat to match with her black outfit.

Justice Stanley Reed chatted with Dean Acheson while Mrs. Reed made the polite round of handshaking . . . The Librarian of Congress and Mrs. Archibald MacLeish were both present . . . John Foster of the British Embassy said they expected Lord Halifax in about ten days, he thought . . . Arthur Krock chatted with Mrs. Morrow while Mrs. Krock held forth on a sofa . . . Mr. and Mrs. J. Fred Essary were other members of the press there.

Diplomats Among Guests

The United States Ambassador to Brazil, Jefferson Caffery, was accompanied by his wife. They will sail January 24 to return to Rio . . . Another present from the diplomatic circle was Mrs. Raymond Lee, whose husband is military attache at our London Embassy.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Burling were there, both just back from a skiing trip to Vermont. They dismally reported rain, just rain.

The Minister of Sweden and Mme. Bostrom dropped in for a while . . . The Finnish Minister was accompanied by Mme. Procope. And others glimpsed were Robert Lincoln O'Brien, Mr. and Mrs. John Laylin, Sir Willmot and Lady Lewis, Alan Wilcox, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Hinton, Lucius Wilmerding, without Mrs. Wilmerding, who is getting over 'flu; Mrs. William Chapin Huntington (she's a trustee of Smith), Mr. Huntington and many more.

(And, oh, ye—Mrs. Rublee wore red with gold embroidery, and the tea table was centered with red roses and baby's breath.)

Miss McCrory To Be Wed

At a tea yesterday afternoon at his home, Samuel H. McCrory, of Washington, announced the engagement of his daughter, Miss

Ruth Roberta McCrory, to Lieut. Thomas A. Rice, U. S. A.

The bride-to-be was graduated from the University of Iowa and her fiance is an alumnus of the University of California. The wedding will take place in March.

Assistants at the tea yesterday were Mrs. J. P. Wenchel, sr., Mrs. Thomas Forbes O'Haire 3d, and Mrs. Marc L. Severe, of Paris. The sister of the hostess, Miss Dorothy McCrory, of Cincinnati, also assisted.

Wessels Hosts At Home Cocktail Party

The Military Attache of the Swedish Legation and Mme. Wessel were hosts at a cocktail party yesterday afternoon at their residence, 2311 Connecticut Avenue.

The attractive hostess, who wore black with a draped slit skirt, will leave this week for New York, whence she will embark on a cruise. But the end of January will see her back in Washington again.

Among those who dropped in yesterday were the Swedish Minister and Mme. Bostrom, the Counselor and Mme. Wennerberg, Dr. and Mrs. R. H. van Houton and Dr. and Mrs. H. N. Boon, of the Netherlands Legation; the Charge d'Affaires of Rumania and Mme. Coste, Col. William Shipp and Edward Van Devanter.

Vandenbergs Hosts At Oyster Supper

Senator and Mrs. Arthur Vandenberg were hosts at their annual oyster supper last night in their apartment at the Wardman Park.

Their guests included diplomats, members of Congress, and a scattering from residential society.

Miss Bistline Engaged

Mr. and Mrs. George P. Bistline, of Emporium, Pa., announce the engagement of their daughter, Julia, to William Blumenauer, son of Mr. and Mrs. T. W. Blumenauer, of this city. The wedding will take place in May.

The Hunt Country

By Nina Carter Tabb

FOXHUNTING has been at its best during the holidays, with all packs going out regularly, and plenty of foxes.

When Warrenton Hunt met the other day at Lewis Strauss' Brandy Rock Farm, Dicky Wallach was acting master in the absence of Amory Carhart, M. F. H. He led his field into a large wood cover and two foxes broke immediately, splitting the pack. Harry Pool, a former master of the Hunt, followed one half until wire prevented his going further, and he saw nine hounds romping off toward Brandy Station. He then joined the others, who had made a big loop of Mr. Strauss' 2,300-acre farm, where they put the fox to ground on the banks of Muddy Run.

BYWATERS, the huntsman, lifting his hounds across the run, cast them into Robert Stark's pines; a fox broke, carrying the field at a fast clip across North Cliff, Mr. and Mrs. Melville Church's place; circling to R. J. Haught's, back to Mr. Stark's, across Carol Coons, then back to North Cliff, where they denned by the Hazel River.

The riders were tired and hungry, as they had been out from 11 till 3. Everyone was asked to an impromptu hunt breakfast by Mr. and Mrs. Melville Church 2d, and they did full justice to the delicious hot food. Among those hunting were Mr. and Mrs. Church, Mrs. James Sinclair, Albert Hinckley and Arnold Scruten.

WHEN Loudon Hunt, with J. R. H. Alexander, M. F. H., met at Big Spring recently with John Kincaid as joint master, they drew the farm of former Gov. Westmoreland Davis. They soon started a big red fox for a thrilling run over lovely open country, where the fox was viewed by the riders and the many following in automobiles. On Mile Hill Farm the Harrison family estate, they killed, and Miss Mary Rust, first lady in at the finish, was presented with the brush. They drew again, started the second fox, having another run lasting an hour and a half between Broad Run and Big Spring.

Those hunting included Miss Anna Hedrick, Mrs. Albert White, Mrs. Robert Pickens, Miss Betsy Rust, Miss Jane Rust, Mrs. Hebe Waters Alexander, Sam Alexander, Stanley Greene, Charles Castleman, Fred Malone, Stirling Harrison, Robert Riticor, David N. Rust, Jack Thayer, Joseph Kincaid, Hunton Atwell, Daniel Chamblin, John Alexander and David Rust, jr.

MISS BETSY RUST, of Leesburg bought a fine thoroughbred yearling at the Loudoun Livestock Market, in Leesburg, last week. She bought her hunter prospect from the consignment of C. Fenton Connor, who put four thoroughbred yearlings, a half-bred yearling and a brood mare on the block that day.

MRS. MELVILLE CHURCH 2d, the former Miss Emily King, of Warrenton, and one of the outstanding young horsewomen of the country, has at her farm near Warrenton a hunter prospect in which many are interested. His name is Rough Passage, by Bull Dog, out of Wildwaters, by Wildair. This young horse's chief claim to fame at present is that he was next to topping the yearling sale at Saratoga in 1938 by being bought by Milky Way Stables for $21,000. Top price at this sale was William H. Lipscomb's yearling by Ksar-Durtion, which sold for $22,000, to Mrs. Isabel Dodge Sloane.

Mrs. Church has great hopes of making Rough Passage a brilliant show horse—as his conformation and manners are beautiful—or a brush horse, as he takes to turfs and jumps like a duck to water. Many horsemen have their eyes on him and predict a great future for the animal, which will be 4 years old this year.

AMONG THE many young people returning to colleges and schools today will be the Misses Mary and Eleanor Rust, Helen Lipscomb, Sally Marshall, Mary Lil Bailey, Betty Honicon, Elizabeth Saunders, Jane Pickens, Cornelia Pickens, Nancy Iselin, Barbara Iselin, Florence di Zerega, Bobby Hopkins, Sam Marshall, William L. Jamison, Franklin Hiden, Sam Carter, Winston Frost, George M. Kernan, jr., Ross Rowland and Toby Biddle.

Miss Fairchild's Marriage Comes As Surprise Here

Announcement has been made by Mrs. McChord Boyle of the marriage of her daughter, Josephine Fairchild, to Horace Neilson, on Friday, January 3.

The news will come as a surprise to Capital society, as no announcement of the engagement had been made. Mr. Neilson is associated with a Government department. His bride has been for several years a popular member of the younger set.

Flash Bulbs, Ermine Open Town Hall

Season of Lectures Begins With Otto, Of Hapsburgs, as Star

In a flurry of flashlight bulbs (from that well known picture magazine), and a flutter of ladies in ermine coats, the Town Hall of Washington opened another season of lectures last evening.

Drawing card was Prince Otto, pretender to the throne of the Austro-Hungarian Empire. Diplomats, officials and residents thronged the brand-new ballroom of the Shoreham to hear him, and some of them met him later at a party given by Mrs. Howell Moorhead.

Dressed in black lace, with a velvet wrap, Mrs. Moorhead was accompanied to the lecture by her daughter, Anne. The latter is studying at the Katherine Gibbs School in New York and will return there today after having spent the holidays with her mother.

Panel Members Among Guests

Those at Mrs. Moorhead's party afterward included Clarence Streit and Herbert Elliston, members of the panel which questioned Prince Otto after his lecture; Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Meyer, Mrs. Richard V. Oulahan, director of the Town Hall; Mrs. Frank Bohn, associate director; Dr. Bohn, Mr. and Mrs. Wilbur Carr, the Assistant Attorney General and Mrs. Thurman Arnold; Mr. and Mrs. Huston Thompson—he is chairman of the trustees and introduced the speaker; Mr. and Mrs. Alfred R. Glancy, Rabbi and Mrs. Norman Gerstenfeld, Reifat Tirana, also a panel member, and his wife.

The Counselor of the Belgian Embassy and Baroness de Gruben (she's a Hungarian) were among the diplomats seen at the lecture. Also there were the Charge d'Affaires of Luxemburg and Mme. Le Gallais, who dined earlier with Mrs. Truxtun Beale. George T. Summerlin, Chief of Protocol of the State Department, completed the foursome.

Mrs. Gould Early Arrival

Mrs. Frederick Mitchell Gould, wearing an ermine wrap over her frock, arrived with Miss Elizabeth Howry.

The Dominican Minister and Senora de Pastoriza were in the audience. So was Mrs. Emil Hurja, who took part in a broadcast preceding the lecture. Mr. and Mrs. George Maurice Morris were early arrivals, she wearing black crepe with the jacket edged in gold. Mr. and Mrs. Morris will give a dinner and a reception for Prince Otto later this month, when he returns to Washington to visit them.

The Misses Randolph arrived together. Maj. and Mrs. Parker West and Mr. and Mrs. Homer Hendricks followed closely after. Mrs. Wilson Compton found her place, as did Mrs. Ollie James. Mr. and Mrs. Wilbur Hubbard—she is Mrs. Morris' mother—were others in the audience.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Willard, Miss Dorothea Villard, escorted by a beau; Miss Craig McGeachy and Mrs. Clarence Norton Goodwin, accompanied by Lady Monson, were others in the large audience. Mrs. Bruce Smith, who was with Mr. Smith, wore a long black velvet cloak over her frock.

Robert Sherrods Entertain at Tea

As a pre-chistening party, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Sherrod entertained at tea yesterday. Guest of honor was Mrs. Lois Maddox Miller, the well-known magazine writer, who will stand as godmother today when the two Sherrod boys, John Hudson and Robert Lee, are baptized.

Also godparents of the boys will be former Representative and Mrs. John J. Dempsey, who were at the party. The function was held at the Sherrods' home on Volta Place in Georgetown. The hostess wore a floor length frock of white chiffon with rhinestone beading around the waist. Mrs. Miller had chosen beige and a veiled hat.

Among those who dropped in were Senator and Mrs. Joseph O'Mahoney, Representative and Mrs. Charles A. Halleck, Mr. and Mrs. Leon Henderson, Miss Craig McGeachy, in a dark red ensemble, Mr. and Mrs. James Wright and Mr. and Mrs. Carlisle Bargeron.

CAPITAL WHIRL

by Sally Swift

MRS. Waggaman Pulver gave a very pleasant and unusual party yesterday when she asked friends in to her apartment in Georgetown for "Sunday breakfast." Some of the guests admitted that they had shuddered at the thought of having Sunday breakfast with friends after a late Saturday night. But "breakfast" turned out to be a delectable meal which was served about 1 o'clock out of steaming silver chafing dishes by deft servants. The only effort required of one was to sit on a comfortable sofa in front of the open fire and eat the scrambled eggs and sausage, the kidney stew and waffles.

Very glad of the agreeable respite were the First Secretary of the British Embassy and Mrs. Christopher Bramwell, who had just crammed the last lid down on the last trunk in preparation for their forthcoming departure for England, where Mr. Bramwell will be stationed at the Foreign Office. Judging by their description, the Bramwells' luggage is filled almost entirely with American gadgets dear to their hearts, exercising machines, a gramophone and records, and Christopher's movie camera and equipment being among them.

ALSO enjoying Mrs. Pulver's fireside breakfast were Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Krock. Arthur was receiving sympathy because his energetic Martha had directed a recent fit of health-consciousness toward him. She had suggested that he rise one hour earlier than is his habit, take a cold shower, walk the dog for 25 miles, and finish with a really big breakfast. Arthur, hoping that Martha's idea wouldn't start this form of torture in other families, had replied that he would far rather be dead. And there the matter rests.

Others breakfasting at Mrs. Pulver's were Mrs. Anthony Crossley, Dr. Roberto de Mendoza, who said that he will be going home to Cuba for a month's leave in the near future; Johnny Gallicher, and several more.

When Commander Anthony Coleby, Assistant Naval Attache of British Embassy, returns to the British Isles for sea duty he will probably find the atmosphere rather more restful for him there than here. Clearing out his desk, arranging to move his wife and children from their present house to the apartment which they have taken at the Highlands, and those famous Washington farewell parties make life on the ocean wave seem simple by comparison.

Naval warfare is looked forward to by the tall commander, who is smiling more often than usual since he has been ordered to sea. He received his baptism of fire at the battle of Jutland as a 16-year-old midshipman, and, though he says he is very sad to be leaving his family and friends in Washington, he is obviously in high spirits at the prospect of getting into action.

Mrs. Robert T. Pell asked friends in the other afternoon to begin the good-byes to Commander Coleby. She was looking very smart in a simple beige frock and was explaining that her husband regretted having to be in New York instead of attending the party. It seems, however, that farewells can't be delayed as Commander Coleby may dash off any day after next Tuesday.

Among Mrs. Pell's guests that afternoon were Mr. and Mrs. George Howe, she wearing a new fur coat—a Christmas present—and a tiny hat in lipstick red. Mrs. Anthony Rumbold, Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Cumming, jr., Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Krock, her hat was becomingly big and turned off the face; Mrs. Waggaman Pulver and Rebecca Wellington. Also Mrs. Derek Hoyer Millar, Roberto de Mendoza, Sam Reber, Stephan Morris, Dennis Smith and a number of others.

Capt. Romero to Talk On Peruvian Folklore

Capt. Fernando Romero, distinguished Peruvian sociologist and writer, will lecture in Spanish on the folklore of Peru at the Pan American Union tonight at 8:30 p. m.

Invitations to the lecture have been issued by the Director General and Assistant Director of the Pan American Union, Dr. L. S. Rowe, and Dr. Pedro de Alba.

Capt. Romero is in this country on the special invitation of the United States Government. On leave of absence from his duties with the Peruvian Navy, Capt. Romero will remain several months in the United States. He will lecture in several cities.

Marion Jones Engaged to Wed

Mrs. William Jones, of Bronxville, N. Y., announces the engagement of her daughter, Miss Marion Barr Jones, to Frederick Roccofort Gibbs, of Washington, son of Mrs. Mary E. Gibbs, of this city and the late W. Frank Gibbs, of Knoxville, Tenn.

The prospective bride was born in New York. For a number of years she was connected with the American Embassy in Paris. She returned to this country before the war to continue her duties at the State Department.

Mr. Gibbs is a graduate of Georgetown University and its law school. He served as a captain of Infantry in the last World War and is now a member of the law firm of Pope, Ballard and Loos.

No date has been set for the wedding.

Smiths Entertain For Misses Wright And Ferrandou

Mr. and Mrs. John Lewis Smith entertained at dinner at the Chevy Chase Club on Saturday in honor of Miss Eugenia Wright, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Norris Wright, of Newark, Del., and Miss Mary Ann Ferrandou, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred H. Ferrandou. Miss Wright, who is a Smith College student, spent the week-end here.

Guests included the Misses Suzanne Slingluff, Catherine Hill, Nancy Strong, Marion and Peter Norris, Kitty Claude, Claire Cotter, Suzanne Cissel, Gloria de Quevedo, and Audrey Cowan. Also Britton Browne, Long Ellis, Sidney Kent, Harland Crowell, Charles Grant, Warren Fales, Stewart Labat, John McNeilley, of Seaford, Del.; John Mendin Hall and David Harris, of Wilmington; William Stillwell, of Philadelphia; Alfred Baer, Frank Holcomb, Robert W. Fleming, Raphael de Quevedo, Mr. and Mrs. John Lewis Smith, jr., and Dr. and Mrs. Robert Coffey.

Brins Visit in N. Y. Before Coming Here

Carlos Brin, newly appointed Ambassador from Panama, and Senora de Brin arrived in New York Saturday aboard the S. S. Ancon and are spending a few days there before coming to Washington.

Senor Brin succeeds Dr. Jorge Boyd who, with his wife and family, recently returned to Panama.

Mrs. Denegre Fetes Leading Democrats

Speaker Rayburn, His Sister, W. O. Douglases, Jacksons Among Them

High ranking Democrats were in the majority at the dinner given last nigh by Mrs. Walter Denegre at her residence here. Guests of honor were he Speaker of the House, Sam Rayburn, and his sister, Miss Lucinda Rayburn.

Jackson, Senator and Mrs. Alben Barkley, Representative Ewing Thomason, of Texas; Representative Patrick Boland, Representative and Mrs. E. E. Cox, Federal Security Administrator and Mrs. Paul V. McNutt and Rear Admiral and Mrs. Emory S. Land.

The Governor of New Jersey and Mrs. Charles Edison were in the party, as were Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Wood Robert, jr., and Mrs. Lionel Atwill, who are just back from Florida. Others included Mr. and Mrs. Max Gardner, Oliver J. Barnes, Clarence Hewes, Mrs. Mitchell Palmer, Edward Browning, of the National Defense Commission; Mrs. Demarest Lloyd, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Trent, Mrs. Alice Preston, of England, and Arthur Bradley Campbell.

Youth Forum On Air Tonight

A series of round table discussions on subjects pertinent to problems of youth will be started tonight at 6 o'clock over Station WRC by the National Congress of Parents and Teachers in cooperation with the National Broadcasting Co. The series will continue each Monday at the same hour through March 31, and is entitled "Citizens, All."

Dean Ernest C. Melby, of Northwestern University, will be coordinator and speakers will include officers of the National Congress, and specialists in the particular educational and social areas affecting the welfare of American youth.

Mrs. William Kletzer, national president, will open the forum this evening, when the subject to be discussed by Mrs. William A. Hastings, first vice president, and Carleton Washburne, superintendent of schools, Winnetka, Ill., will be "Youth in a Confused World."

On January 13 Mrs. M. D. Wilkinson, regional vice president, and Ralph H. Ojemann, associate professor of psychology and parent education in the Iowa Child Welfare Research Station, will discuss "Is Youth Prepared for Family Life?"

"There Are No Outsiders in Education" is the topic chosen by Mrs. James K. Lytle, treasurer, and C. O. Arndt, assistant professor of education, Northwestern University, and director of the new school, Evanston, Ill., for January 20.

On January 27 Mrs. Charles D. Center, secretary of the National Congress, and Chris, L. Christensen, dean, college of agriculture and director of the agricultural experiment station and extension service, University of Wisconsin, will speak on "New Frontiers in Community Life."

Mary Haworth's Mail

College Youth, 19, Asks How to Regain Girl's Love and Trust, Which He Ruined by Momentary Aggression; She Forgave Him, but Fears Him

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a college student, 19 years old, and I am deeply in love with a girl my own age. Until a few weeks ago the feeling was mutual. Then, through my fault entirely, she became afraid of me. Let me explain the whole story. Her parents have felt that she is too young to "go steady," and have been frightening her by telling her that "going steady" would lead to sex relations before marriage, thus ruining her life.

She developed a perpetual fear of such a possibility. It became almost an obsession with her. Yet the thought of having such "designs" upon her was farthest from my mind, because I respected and admired and loved her so much that I felt I couldn't have touched her, against her will.

However, one night when we were alone, something came over me. You might call it a sort of Dr. Jekyll-Mr. Hyde change. I suddenly found myself acting in such a way as to justify her parents' repeated warnings. She struggled against me and then, as suddenly as the spell had come upon me, it faded—and I realized the selfishness of my attitude. She was crying with fear and I begged her forgiveness and tried to console her.

But in those few minutes I had ruined our love. She no longer trusted me. In her own words, she was "afraid" of me. And while she said she forgave me (as I begged her to), she told me the next day—when I tried to see her—that she didn't want to see me; that she was afraid of me. Again I told her that I was sorry. She replied that, while it hurt her as much as to say it, as it must hurt me to hear it, the only thing she could do was break off our friendship; that she had forgiven me, but that she had lost all trust in me and was just afraid.

Now I am in the position of having lost all that I hold dear and sacred. I am asking for help, Miss Haworth. I love her. I want her back. I need her. Please tell me what I can do to get her back. How can I regain her love and trust? If you will help me I shall be forever grateful to you. D. J. B.

Parents Responsible For Girl's Neuroticism

DEAR D. J. B.: It is scarcely within your power to correct the girl's sick-minded attitude toward the biological facts of life—since she is so beset by parentally inspired panic as to refuse to face those facts, intellectually, and discuss them rationally. Furthermore, you are being unfair to yourself—being unwarrantedly harsh in your self-condemnation—in thinking you are to blame for the incident which, allegedly, destroyed her faith in and love for you.

The persons primarily at fault for that wretched denouement are the girl's parents—for having sown the seeds of fearsome preoccupation with the possibility of illicit sexuality in the girl's mind, which unhealthy speculations she, in turn, transmitted to your mind. What you did, on that occasion which you now so bitterly regret, was unconsciously and involuntarily to reflect—in your unpremeditated actions—a state of affairs which holds continual, malignant sway in the girl's imagination and in her parents' thoughts (or anticipations) directed at her. In other words, you became the instrument of a startling demonstration of the power of thought—which in itself suggests that you are an extraordinarily sensitive individual in whom a really healthy minded girl might well and safely put her trust.

Had the girl's parents conditioned her to expect from beaux only that respect and admiration and love which constitute your essential regard for her; and were she a person schooled from infancy to a casual comprehension of biological phenomena, and to a progressive knowledge of the social values and techniques of chaste self-government in her romantic relationships—your association with her undoubtedly would have been an experience of continuous beauty and spiritual growth for both.

It is the girl's inexpressible misfortune (casting its shadow over your heart, as well) that her parents, in their morbidly ignorant attitude toward sex have sought to wall her off from life, behind high barricades of reason-wrecking fear—instead of preparing her for life by cleanly and courageously giving her the instruction, plus the self-reliance, plus the moral code of behavior, plus the vote of confidence in her strength and decency, which would enable her to meet all experiences without spiritual harm to herself.

As I see the situation, you have exhausted every reasonable tactic in trying to make amends for what happened, and in trying to rebuild the friendship on a more solid foundation of mutual understanding and good faith. It is my belief, furthermore, that you cannot hope—by argument, guarantee or attitude—to compensate for her own and her parents' lack of common sense, mental health and emotional balance.

It is idle to speak of "regaining her trust"—when the chain of events clearly demonstrates that she has never really trusted either you or herself in relation to you. As a matter of fact, her obstinate decision not to see you again, despite forgiving you, is more indicative of self-distrust than distrust of you. The kindest thing you can do for her is to take yourself out of the picture and leave her in such peace as she can muster. Perhaps in time, and by the grace of God, and with the help of his human instrumentalities, she may grow up psychologically, to a more normal attitude toward the sexual facts of life. Just now there is nothing that you—as a dreaded male and rejected acquaintance—can do to help her. M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Shirtwaist Reformed

For midwinter dinner wear many women are searching for a dress that is neither strictly formal nor completely "cover up." The perennial shirtwaist dress in a new guise is the answer to this puzzling problem. Above is a version of this dress glorified for dinner in bronze silk and metal with a femininized lapel and accordion pleated skirt. Moderately formal, this dress is perfect under brown furs for theater and restaurant or a hostess dinner party.

Put Vitamins Into The Diet With Turnips

TURNIPS are just another vegetable to many persons. No doubt they do not rank high in favor in the vegetable line-up because they are not presented in an appetizing way.

The Greeks relished them several thousand years ago, and the French have a gourmet dish—young duck smothered in turnips that have been braised in butter. The mild-flavored white turnips, essentially a summer vegetable, are the best-known variety, but the yellow, stronger-flavored kind that may be stored to last through the winter months also make excellent dishes. Both varieties are a good source of vitamins.

Boiled and mashed turnips are not news. But there are other tempting ways of preparing them—stuffed, scalloped, glazed and French fried. If you want new ways to serve turnips try the following ones:

French Fried Turnips

Cut peeled turnips as for French fried potatoes. Dip them in egg and milk mixture, then in cracker crumbs and deep fry in hot fat until golden brown.

Stuffed Turnips

Pare and boil 4 to 5 large turnips in salted boiling water, drain and cut a slice from top of each. Scoop out pulp from center and mash it with salt, pepper and butter to season; add a little cream, 1 well-beaten egg yolk and enough cracker crumbs to make a smooth, thick paste. Fill the shells, put on tops, brush with beaten egg white and brown in a hot oven.

Scalloped Turnips

Pare and slice thin enough turnips to fill a buttered one-quart baking dish. Arrange slices in layers, sprinkling each layer with salt, pepper and grated cheese, using ½ cup grated cheese. Pour in 1 cup milk or meat gravy; sprinkle with bread crumbs and 1 tablespoon butter if milk is used. Cover and bake in moderate oven, 350 degrees, until turnips are soft.

Reducing Diet Calls for Less Salt, Water

By Ida Jean Kain

The only thing that will keep you on your diet is to have some lost pounds to show for it. Starting with the new year, you should have lost a couple of pounds by now. If not, you may have tripped up on some minor mistake—like taking too much salt.

There are no calories in salt, but, peculiarly enough, it can keep you from losing. The absorption of salt and the retention of water in the tissues seem to be directly related and when you store up water as the fat is lost, your loss in weight cannot be registered on the scales. The rule is not to use any salt except that which is needed for the preparation of food.

This business of storing water is an exasperating phenomenon. The only thing we know about it for sure is: If you stay on your diet long enough, the water balance will adjust itself and the loss will appear on the scales.

Recent experiments point to the use of a high protein diet in the prevention of water retention, so if you are having a hard time losing, see to it that you are getting plenty of protein. Have daily: Two servings of lean meat, fish or fowl—trimming off every particle of the fat; one egg, a glass of skim milk or buttermilk, and a serving of cheese.

Your trouble may be the habit of taking water with the meals—something that has no connection with water retention, but which is a big factor in appetite. Taken at the beginning of the meal, water stimulates the appetite, and taken with the meal or at the end of it, water tends to stretch the stomach and further increase the food capacity.

The Gentler Sex

By Malvina Lindsay

The Fifth Wheel

Her apartment or house is "simply perfect," down to the last antique pin tray or the cathedral chimes in her modernistic foyer.

She has found, after long experimentation, the maid who runs things with proper impersonal precision—and with just enough slips from perfection to afford a conversational topic at parties.

Everything is repaired or replaced at its first sign of deterioration; slip covers come on and off with exact seasonal regularity; walls are redecorated just when they should be, and no interior ever takes on that slightly rundown look of daily living.

Her table is the marvel of her friends; everything served is the best on the market, prepared by the best of all possible recipes and served on the most popular china brand of the day.

Her wardrobe is complete and up to the minute, no occasion ever finding her without the proper dress. She makes shopping a business, watching for all the advantageous sales—and having the immediate funds to "buy wisely."

She entertains "so very nicely"—perfect parties with perfect food and perfect drinks, and no mentally disturbing conversation.

Her children, if any, are fed the right vitamins and the right minerals, take the right naps during the right periods, and have their eyes, ears, noses, throats complexes, etc., checked and rechecked at the right times by the right specialists.

Her weekly visit to the beauty shop is a rite, and she is always perfectly groomed. Her dressing table holds the best brands of face creams, muscle oils and astringents.

She brushes her hair faithfully, does her exercises religiously, checks regularly with her doctor, her dentist, her psychiatrist and whoever else she should check with.

She reads the books, and sees the plays and movies, and listens to the radio programs everybody is talking about.

Her life runs along as smoothly as her husband's purring automobile, every detail apparently falling into a perfect pattern.

None of the world's disorder, suffering and chaos apparently touches her. She has no time for politics, clubs, neighborhood improvement, community projects, social service, war relief, or even for reading the grimmer phases of the news. She has no time to make any service to her country beyond wearing a beautifull, jeweled flag on the lapel of her faultlessly tailored suit. She has no time for anything but her own doll's house and her own little personal concerns, this descendant of the women who worked and struggled in log cabins and farm houses, who endured heat, cold, fatigue, privation, sorrow, loneliness and travail to build the Nation in which she lives so neatly and so perfectly.

Bergson, Nobel Prize-Winner, Dies in Paris

Philosopher Declined Exemption From Anti-Semitic Laws

By the Associated Press

Vichy, France, Jan. 5.—Henri Bergson, 81, foremost French philosopher and winner of the 1928 Nobel Prize for literature, died in Paris yesterday of a pulmonary congestion, it was reported here today.

Bergson, the first Jew offered exemption from a law forbidding Jews to hold educational posts in France, declined the offer and resigned as honorary professor of the College of France last month.

It was learned in Vichy that he was proffered the exemption for his "literary and artistic services to the nation."

His resignation from the college post was said to be a protest against the anti-Semitic law.

The French minister of education, J. Chevalier, sent Bergson's family a message of sorrow at the death of his "master and friend" and called the philosopher one of the "forerunners and builders of the reborn France."

Born in Paris, Bergson's fame came quickly, and at the age of 22 he was a professor of philosophy. His prominence reached its height in 1914. In that year he was chosen a member of the French Academy and in that year also some of his works were put on the Index Expurgatorius by the Pope.

He lectured in the United States in 1913 and became one of the close friends of President Wilson.

At the start of the World War, Bergson forsook his lectures at the College de France and never returned to his classroom.

Secret Service Agents Gather For Parley Today

Nearly 100 Secret Service agents from all sections of the country registered yesterday at the Willard Hotel for the annual conference of Uncle Sam's plainclothesmen which will open officially today.

In a brief address Secret Service Chief Frank J. Wilson congratulated his men on their efficiency and "increase in results" during the past year. He cited particularly their increased ability to handle firearms and the success of the organization's drive against counterfeiting throughout the Nation.

Following his address many of the delegates met in committee gatherings at the Treasury Department.

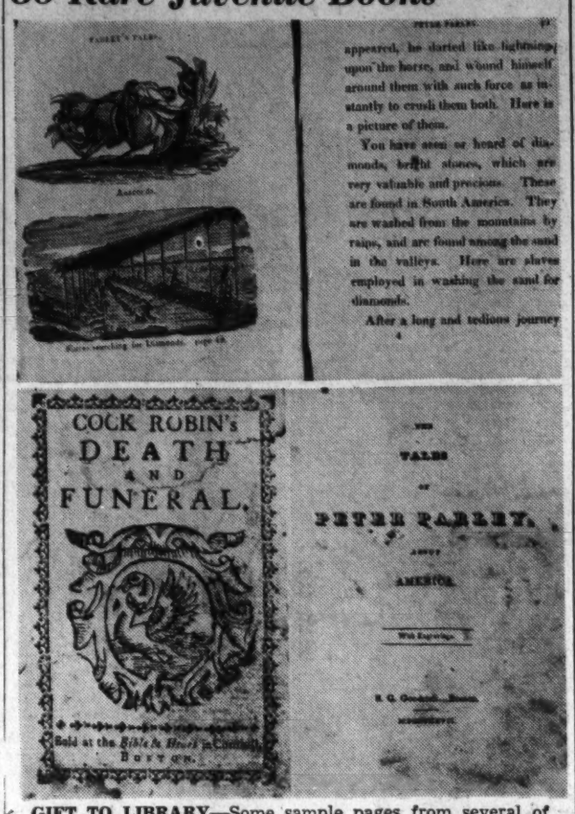
Library of Congress Given 86 Rare Juvenile Books



GIFT TO LIBRARY—Some sample pages from several of the 86 books for juveniles published between 1775 and 1850 which were presented to the Library of Congress by Frank J. Hogan

Eighty-six books for juveniles, published between 1175 and 1850, have been presented to the Library of Congress by Frank J. Hogan, prominent Washington lawyer and a former president of the American Bar Association.

Archibald MacLeish, Librarian of Congress, made the announcement yesterday, describing the gift as an important addition "to the library's already superb collection of American juvenile literature."

Some of the items are believed to be the only ones of their kind. Most valuable, said MacLeish, are ten New England Primers. The earliest of them is an extremely rare Providence edition of 1775, containing the children's prayer, "Now I Lay Me Down to Sleep."

The Hogan copy of the Boston Primer of 1790, bound in its original wooden boards, is the only specimen of this edition known to exist today. Another primer, published in 1799, was edited by "Noah Webster, Jun., Esq."

Only known copy of the earliest American edition of "Cock Robin's Death and Funeral," published 160 years ago, also is in the newly added collection.

There are three known copies of "The Tales of Peter Parley About America" (Boston, 1827) and one of them is included in the Hogan gift.

In making the bestowal, Hogan wrote MacLeish:

"The Library of Congress has many editions of the New England Primer. As our national library, it should have them all. I hope that the ten editions of this historically important little book will aid the Library towards a complete collection. I should particularly like to call your attention to the unique 1790 edition which is included in this gift.

"So, too I am glad to be able to send to the Library the only known copy of the earliest known American edition of 'Cook Robin's Death and Burial' which was printed in Boston about 1780. Our great book friend, Dr. Rosenbach, never saw this edition until I showed it to him some months ago and but for my rule never to sell an item from my book room his offers for it would have tempted me.

"In several instances . . . I have been tempted to hold back a few of the items. But rare early American children's books belong to our National Library, and not to one of us. So here they are."

Radio Answers the Call of Total Defense

With characteristic speed, radio is responding to the call of national defense. Enrolled to serve the public interest and to fortify the Nation's invisible life-lines of communication are: Research, Engineering, Manufacturing, Broadcasting, International Circuits, Ship-and-Shore Stations. The Radio Corporation of America was organized in 1919, as an American-owned, American-controlled radio company. RCA has established a world-wide wireless communications system, independent of foreign interests, and has pioneered in the creation and development of a new art and a new industry. Today, each of its services is equipped and ready for action in the first line of America's total defense on land, sea, and in the air.

WORLD-WIDE COMMUNICATIONS

Vital to defense and commerce, RCA operates 24-hour direct communication service to 43 countries. This service avoids censorship, errors, and delays which might occur at relay points. The Nation is protected against the loss of overseas communications through the cutting of submarine cables in war-time. Supplementing these globe-girdling channels, RCA operates a domestic radiotelegraph system that links 12 key cities in the United States.

MARINE COMMUNICATIONS

Life and property at sea are guarded by modern radio coastal stations and radio-equipped ships. Eighteen hundred American ships are equipped with RCA apparatus. The shore-lines of the United States are fringed with radio beacon transmitters to guide shipping and the fleet in American waters. American ships do not have to depend upon foreign-controlled means of communication to send messages home.

BROADCASTING

RCA pioneered in establishing the first nation-wide network of broadcasting. The National Broadcasting Company, formed in 1926, today serves an American radio audience through 50,000,000 receiving sets. NBC provides these lisfeners with serious and popular music, news and information, drama and education, public forums and religious services. Under the American system of broadcasting, the finest and most extensive variety of programs to be had anywhere in the world is free to the listening public. The richest man cannot buy what the poorest man gets free by radio.

NBC broadcasting service is also maintained internationally, by short wave, and helps to strengthen good-will and cultural and economic relations between the Americas, and with other parts of the world.

An informed public opinion, promoted by a free press and a free system of broadcasting, is a highly important national asset in total defense.

MANUFACTURING

The RCA Manufacturing Company operates five large plants, strategically located at Camden and Harrison, N.J., Indianapolis and Bloomington, Ind., and Hollywood, Calif. Within the year the company has invested millions of dollars in expansion to facilitate production and rapid filling of orders from the Army and Navy. Machinery is geared for national defense in addition to providing for normal requirements of the public.

RESEARCH AND ENGINEERING

Through science and research, the RCA Laboratories are enrolled in national defense. Research in electronics, wave propagation, television, facsimile, acoustics, optics, and in other fields has opened many new services and extended greatly the scope of existing services, both commercial and military.

No longer must an aviator "just look to the ground" to find his way to a target or to his base. He may fly and land "blind" by radio. The electron microscope, a product of RCA Laboratories, is a new means to help protect the national welfare as it opens new horizons for bacteriologist, chemist, physicist and industrialist. In these and many other ways, peace-time radio research has built new bulwarks of defense for our Nation.

INVENTIONS AND THEIR USE

RCA licenses many other manufacturers to use its inventions and patents. By making them widely available, RCA has helped to create an industry as well as an art.

Through this licensing policy the radio industry has access to results of the research of RCA Laboratories. In this way, competition has been stimulated, and numerous sources of supply opened to the public and the Government.

TRAINING

Over 1,100 students are enrolled in the completely equipped schools of the RCA Institutes, Inc., in New York and Chicago. From this enrollment and from graduates of the Institutes, the United States can enlist the services of trained men in all branches of radio, from ship operators to service men. Scientists and engineers associated with RCA present and publish hundreds of scientific papers each year as aids to others interested in radio. For those who follow technical developments of the art, RCA Review, a quarterly journal, prints the latest scientific reports on progress in radio.

EMPLOYEES

Labor relations between RCA and its employees are excellent. Employment in the RCA organization in 1940 increased from 22,000 to 27,000 employees. Principal officers and many employees of RCA are members of the Army and Navy Reserves.

For 21 years the pioneering efforts and services of RCA have safeguarded American preeminence in radio.

RCA continues to serve the public interest and is fully prepared and ready to carry on in the first line of total defense!

Federal Diary

By Jerry Kluttz

He's trying to keep it quiet, but a prominent Democratic member of the House is collecting data on nepotism in Government agencies. The House member, it is understood, will ask for a Congressional investigation if he discovers enough officials who have placed their relatives on Uncle Sam's payroll. The legislator is understood to be in possession of information on several high Federal officials who are said to have used their influence to get their relatives Government jobs. Legislation to prevent more than a certain number of members of a single family from being hired to Federal jobs also is said to be under consideration by the House member.

Oscar L. Chapman, Assistant Secretary of the Interior, is reported to be angling for a better Federal job. His friends wouldn't be surprised if he were appointed an assistant to Federal Security Administrator Paul McNutt and later moved up to succeed McNutt if and when the Federal Security boss is shifted by the President. Chapman has always been interested in the work of social agencies that are under McNutt. He is a former parole officer and worked with the juvenile court in his home State of Colorado. President Roosevelt appointed him to the interdepartmental committee on public health. Secretary of the Interior Harold Ickes passed him over when he selected an undersecretary some months ago, which didn't make Chapman very happy.

It isn't generally known, but the Navy Department and Coast Guard have legal authority to work their employes a five-day week. Moreover, the Navy and Coast Guard are legally required to work their civilian employes an hour more each week than all other departments. The authority was given in the 1940 Navy Expedite Bill in a provision that reads in part: ". . . the regular working hours of the Navy Department and the Coast Guard and their field services shall be eight hours a day or 40 hours a week during the period of the national emergency declared by the President on September 8, 1939."

Navy employes here are working from 8:45 to 4:30 o'clock on Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, and from 8:45 to 4:15 o'clock on Friday, and 9 to 1 o'clock on Saturday. Fifteen minutes were added to the working day of the first four days of the week to make up the extra hour ordered by Congress. The standard work week in all other Federal agencies is 39 hours.

Representative Richard B. Wigglesworth, Massachusetts Republican, is conducting an inquiry into the cost of personnel offices in Federal departments. He is demanding that each personnel director furnish him with the cost of running his office since it was created, and amount of the proposed 1942 budget . . . Andy Kelley, HOLC information assistant, is taking a leave of absence to help run the President's birthday balls and the inauguration . . . Fred Brown, former Comptroller General, is expected to take his place on the Tariff Commission this week. He was confirmed for the office months ago but illness and then the death of his father prevented him from taking the oath of office.

Several months ago the Civil Service Commission ordered 40 General Accounting Office employes under Civil Service who were checking accounts of the Bankhead-Jones Act. Each of the employes took noncompetitive tests and each of them will receive notice this week that the passed . . . D. C. Federation of National Federation of Federal Employes will celebrate Civil Service Week on January 15 at a meeting in the North Interior Building. W. E. Hoffheims is federation president.

National Archives has the largest door of any Federal building. It is 40 feet high and weighs more than six tons. Recently the guard who opens and shuts the door with an electric motor got his finger caught in it. Ouch . . . The Supreme Court has the heaviest door, weighing 11 tons and made of solid bronze . . . George Ortleb, GPO's deputy public printer, will be retired this week. He'll enter private practice here . . . Ever hear of a M-Scope Operator? Neither did the Civil Service Commission when it was ordered to hold an examination for the job. It turned out that an M-Scope operator drives a machine over the proving ground where artillery shells have been fired. A pair of earphones is clamped over his head and when a humming sound is heard it means stop, a dud shell is nearby.

'Grandson' of Famous Washington Elm Moves

INROADS OF PROGRESS—A "grandson" of the Washington Elm at Cambridge, Mass., was moved from the grounds of Nature Magazine's headquarters at 1214 Sixteenth Street yesterday to make way for the construction of the Scott Circle underpass. Pearl Seaman, an employe of the magazine, helps Charles Bradfield to dig around the tree's roots. The tree will be planted on the grounds of the Chevy Chase Woman's Club

Baptists Join In Rice Church Opening Rites

New $40,000 Building To Serve Worshipers Of Chillum Area

Worshipers from practically every Baptist church in the Washington area, including many of the denomination's leaders, yesterday helped open the new $40,000 Luther Rice Memorial Baptist Church in Chillum.

In the edifice at 5315 North Capitol Street, they heard Dr. Rufus W. Weaver extol the spirit of Luther Rice, founder of George Washington University, and Amos Kendall, whose legacy made possible purchase of the site. Both were noted Baptists.

Executive secretary of the District of Columbia Baptist Convention, Dr. Weaver said the new project was another evidence of Baptist progress throughout the Nation's Capitol are assured that the future here was promising, and then declared:

"We must unitedly plant the faith of our fathers in this Capital, where its influence can go out all over the Nation."

Others participating in the services were Dr. Walter O. Lewis, executive secretary of the Baptist World Alliance, whose headquarters are now taking sanctuary here from bomb-battered London; Dr. William S. Abernethy, pastor of Calvary Baptist Church, and George Fraser, president of the D. C. Baptist Convention; the Rev. Mike Elliott, pastor of the new church; the Rev. Charles B. Austin, pastor of West Washington Baptist Church, and W. W. Everett, chairman of the Amos Kendall Fund trustees. Two delegates also attended from each Baptist church here.

The Amos Kendall Fund, established many years ago, aids organization of Baptist missions and Sunday schools. The Luther Rice Church, formerly the Chillum Mission and Sunday School, had its inception in 1938 with a nucleus of 14 Sunday school scholars. First services were held in an old residence near the present building that had been purchased by the Amos Kendall Trustees.

D. C. Episcopal Churches Mark 'Service of Lights'

Candles flickered in choral processions in several Episcopal Churches last night, as the traditional "service of lights" heralded the coming of Epiphany season today.

Among others, services were held at St. Paul's Church, Rock Creek Parish, and Grace Church, Southwest. At the former place, the participating dignitaries included the Very Rev. Noble C. Powell, dean of Washington; Dr. F. J. Bohanan and the Rev. Charles Wood, rector and assistant at St. Paul's; the Rev. Howard Arnold, rector of the Holy Comforter Chapel, and Dr. ZeBarney Phillips, Epiphany Church rector and Senate Chaplain.

The Rev. Meade Bolton MacBryde, rector, arranged the "lights" service at Grace Church, where, as in others, the program opened with the silent assembly of the congregation, choir and clergy in the darkened church. The flickering flame of a small candle typified the dim light from Old Testament prophesy. Several Episcopal congregations have arranged Epiphany Holy Communion rites today. The occasion is also known as Twelfth-Day (12 days after Christmas).

Beer Bottle Fells Boy Going to Church

A beer bottle striking him on the back of the head sent David William, colored, 15, to Casualty Hospital for treatment yesterday.

William told police he had just left his home at 1412 Duncan Street Northeast en route to church yesterday morning when he was knocked unconscious. He said he didn't know what struck him until he was revived by a pedestrian who found the bottle next to him.

The youth was treated at Casualty Hospital for a deep scalp laceration.

Fire Sweeps St. Paul's Parish Hall

15 Flee in Cold As Another Blaze Damages Domicile At 211 D Street

A two-alarm fire caused damage estimated at $200 to the St. Paul's Catholic Church parish hall, Fifteenth and V Streets Northwest, yesterday.

In another blaze that broke out in the cellar of a three-story dwelling at 211 D Street Northwest, 15 persons were driven from their beds into the cold.

Only casualty of the latter was Mrs. Minerva Snider, 78. Mrs. Snider required treatment for shock after she managed to make her way through dense smoke from her room on the third floor.

The fire started at 6 a. m. in a middle room of the basement and quickly spread to the floor above occupied by Joseph Bonnucelli, owner of the building, and his family. Aroused by smoke, Bonnucelli's son, Charles, 22, broke into his father's room to find the bed afire.

Charles awakened other occupants of the building. His brother, Hugo, 25, a fireman of No. 15 Engine Co., who was sleeping in the house at the time, called the Fire Department and then joined Charles in trying to beat out flames in a hallway with blankets.

Firemen said they were unable to determine the cause of the fire. Bonnucelli said the damage was slight.

Firemen saved costumes and properties stored on the second floor of the parish building, which is the headquarters of the Blackfriars Players. Defective wiring or an overheated furnace were given as probably causes of the fire.

The dramatic organization postponed a meeting scheduled for last night. The three-story building was built in 1886.

Horse Turns Press Agent For Skater, 12

The docility of Lady Lou, a horse, deprived the police yesterday of a chance to show their technique with the lariat in an environment of extremest test, the area of Sixteenth Street, during the Sunday traffic rush.

But Lady Lou, having bounced her rider on one of the Rock Creek Park saddlepaths, went and stared into the window of the house at 6630 Sixteenth Street Northwest, and brought to light the fact that good skaters get better by practicing on their shoe soles in the parlors of their homes.

That's what 12-year-old Marjorie Low was up to when the horse, Lady Lou, began alternately staring in the window and munching the grass of the lawn. Marjorie called the police.

The police and two anonymous men, one of whom was said to have been thrown by the horse, came and straightened out that part of it. And then it developed that Marjorie had been in all manner of local skating shows without once getting her picture in the papers.

Whatever else Lady Lou did yesterday, she also made it possible for Marjorie to bow as a skater in the public print and one worth the watching.

Baptist Church Cornerstone Laid In Southeast

Worshipers of Fountain Memorial Baptist Church yesterday realized a long-cherished ambition, as the cornerstone was laid for the new church building at Minnesota Avenue and Naylor Road Southeast.

The Rev. W. Bertram King, pastor of the congregation, was assisted in the rites by George T. Curtis and R. E. Hudgins, members of the church building committee. About 300 members attended. Coins and a 1940 Bible were among the items placed in the cornerstone box.

The new building is expected to be finished in two months, according to the Rev. Mr. King.

Lewis Hotel School Exercises Wednesday

The Lewis Hotel Training School will hold commencement exercises at the school, 2301 Pennsylvania Avenue Northwest, at 8 p. m. Wednesday with C. DeWitt Coffman, publicity director for the Mayflower Hotel, and H. F. Neason, Burlington Hotel manager, as speakers.

Diplomas will be presented by the school president, Clifford Lewis. An informal reception will follow the exercises.

Course in First Aid

An advanced Red Cross first aid course will begin at the District Chapter House at 7:30 p. m. today, the director of instruction, Robert H. Duncan, announced yesterday. The class will meet from 7:30 to 9:30 p. m. each Monday and Friday under the direction of John F. Jackson.

Youth's Ambition Unfulfilled

Wilson Senior Is Third Victim Of District Traffic in Year

Struck as He Pushes Automobile; Girl In Car Is Injured

Death yesterday marked Andrew Dent, jr., 21, a senior at Wilson Teachers' College, as the third traffic victim of the District this year. He died in Emergency Hospital after he was struck down in the 4000 block of Kansas Avenue Northwest Saturday night while pushing the car in which a girl companion was riding. His home was at 1512 Buchanan Street Northwest.

Shortly before Dent's death the second Washington traffic fatality of the year was recorded when Benjamin Duckett, 51, colored, of 609 O'Neill's Court Southwest, died in Casualty Hospital. A total of 17 others were injured in accidents over the week-end.

The driver of the auto striking Dent was listed by police as Harry E. Lightner, 22, of Falls Church, Va. He was arrested and released on $1,000 bond pending the action of the coroner.

Active in Dramatics

Majoring in the arts at college, Dent had done a great deal of painting, writing and dramatic work. He had aided in dramatics work at the Arts Club, the Community Center, the Sylvan Theater and the National Theater. His ambition was to teach children.

Driving was one of his chief interests, and he had crossed the continent twice in his own automobile. He was especially fond of gardening and bird raising.

Five years ago he met a girl at Central High School, Katherine Burrows, now 24, of 1614 Riggs Place Northwest. They had been close companions during his college career. She was in his automobile when he was fatally struck, and was treated at Emergency Hospital for shock. Dent's father, Andrew Dent, is a teller at the Riggs National Bank.

Funeral services for Dent will be held at 10:30 a. m. Wednesday at St. Stephen's and the Incarnation Church, Sixteenth and Newton Streets Northwest. Burial will be in Rock Creek Cemetery.

Alfred D. Warrick, 26, colored, of Fort Washington, Md., was held on $1,000 bond pending his appearance before an inquest today, police said, in hte death of Duckett.

Collision Injures Nine

Nine persons were injured in a two-car collision early yesterday on Fourteenth Street between Maine Avenue and the Highway Bridge.

All the victims were taken to Emergency Hospital and treated for minor lacerations.

Passengers in one of the vehicles, five colored youths from Baltimore, were: Richard Holmes, 25; Harry Brooks, 28; Melvin Carter, 27; John Hoffman, 24, and John Brooks, 23.

Those in the second car were Marie Manatt, 42, of 1332 Belmont Street Northwest; George H. Evans, 26, of 14 T Street Northeast; Thora Evans, 24, of 14 T Street Northeast, and Steven Hugya, 24, of 1215 Fifteenth Street Northwest. Hugya was removed to Gallinger Hospital for observation and treatment.

Four persons were sent to Casualty Hospital when a car driven by Florindo Rossodita, 52, of 516 F Street Northeast, got out of control and crashed into a tree in front of 2830 Bladensburg Road. Treated for lacerations were Rossodita, Ann Hunt, 37, Hillside, Md.; Nancy Panella, 36, of 512 F Street Northeast, and Frank Reccadi, 51, of 516 F Street Northeast.

Harry L. Turpin, 34, of 2016 Tunlaw Road Northest, was taken to Georgetown Hospital after colliding with a parked car in the 1900 block of Thirty-fifth Street Northwest. He was later arrested and charged with reckless driving.

Sergeant Arrested

A Langley Field, Va., Army sergeant was charged with driving while under the influence of intoxicants and hit-and-run last night following a collision at Eleventh and M Streets Northwest.

William T. Bowling, 39, of 200 E Street Northwest, gave chase when a car failed to stop after colliding with his, and he ran Sergt. Robert Esters, 33, to the curb at Fifteenth and M Streets Northwest. Miss Elsie Carber, 18, a passenger in Bowling's car, was treated at Emergency Hospital for slight injuries and dismissed.

Esters was booked at First Precinct Police Station.

Two persons were injured, one seriously, when their automobile crashed into an electric light pole at Wisconsin Avenue and the District line. Bethesda firemen used haeksaws for more than half an hour sawing William T. Cuddy, 1932 Biltmore Street Northwest, from the car.

Cuddy's right leg, caught by the crumpled dashboard of the car, was broken. Miss Margaret Auterback, of Potomac, Md., a passenger, was cut and bruised. Both were taken to Georgetown Hospital by the Bethesda Rescue Squad. The accident impeded traffic on Wisconsin Avenue for more than an hour.

Capital Teams Lose Out in Va. Bridge Playoff

S. Garton Churchill, Silver Spring, Is in Title Winning Line-up

The Bridge Championships of Northern Virginia, first tournament of the new year, was concluded last night at the George Mason Hotel in Alexandria with a match for teams of four, which was won by S. Garton Churchill, of Silver Spring, Md., and Clagett Bowie and Col. Robert Gill, both of Baltimore, with the Boston expert, Cecil Head, as fourth member. The team won 33½ matches, defeating two Washington line-ups by half a board.

A play-off between the tying teams resulted in second place honors for the foursome of Louis Newman, J. B. Stone, Henry Stearman and Warren Jones, who defeated Mr. and Mrs. James H. Lemon, L. R. Watson, jr., and Alvin Roth. The match was played through two sessions without elimination, Newman's team leading in the opening session while the winning foursome trailed along in fourth place.

It was Churchill's second victory in the tournament, as he had won the title for open pairs the day before, playing with John Kunkel, of Washington and Harrisburg, Pa., defeating Leroy Thurtell and Alvin Roth, defending champions, who are both of Washington. Other pairs showing in the open event included W. R. Garrett and Dr. C. C. McDonnell, of this city; Bowie and Head, and Newman and Dr. A. J. Steinberg. The winners scored 177.6 match points to 165.7 points for Thurtell and Roth.

Churchill, who is a member of the Washington Bridge League, is a former New York luminary, and is the outstanding authority of match point play. His book on this subject is the standard treatise for tournament players. He is a member of the Securities and Exchange Commission.

The Amateur Championship, also played Sunday night, was won by Oscar Baum, jr., and Hermann Kraut, of this city. It was the closest pair contest of the entire tournament, the winners defeating Mrs. Weyman Tarplay and Mrs. J. B. Grigsby by a mere half point.

Units' Rental To Be Stable In Arlington

Ring Pledges No Increase in Two Apartment Villages

Residents of two large apartment villages in Arlington County were assured yesterday that no rental increases were being contemplated for 1941.

Gustave Ring, president of the corporations which operate Colonial and Arlington Villages, issued a statement which read:

"It seems opportune at this time to state my intention of maintaining the present rental scale. I am not in sympathy with attempts to take advantage of the local housing shortage developing in conjunction with the national defense program. Barring some drastic and unanticipated change in the national economy, present rentals will not be altered during 1941."

Colonial Village, the first of the large housing projects to be built in Arlington County with FHA loans, has 1,060 units. Arlington Village has 655 apartments.

M. A. Mace, developer of Westover, newest Arlington County apartment village, said no decision had been reached as to whether rents would be increased, but added there was a possibility of an increase when present leases expire in February and March.

Meanwhile, at Buckingham Community, another big apartment village, where rental increases became effective January 1, the citizens' group is preparing to appeal for a public hearing before the State defense commissioner at Richmond.

M. L. Egert, chairman of the rent committee of the Buckingham Civic Association, said purpose of the hearing would be to determine the justificatoin for the rental increases.

Race Track Is Opposed By Baptist

Dr. Abernethy, Calvary Pastor, Condemns Proposal By Sen. Reynolds

Dr. William S. Abernethy, pastor of Calvary Baptist Church, yesterday assailed the proposal of Senator Robert R. Reynolds (Democrat), North Carolina, to restore horse-racing to the District.

While Dr. Abernethy assured that the legislator's plans for providing a District stadium and an auditorium here were fine, and that his proposal for more police is all right, "if they are needed," he added:

"But as for the proposal to have a race track here to keep money from going to Maryland, there are gamblers at every race track. Senator Reynolds' proposal would bring more gamblers with more money for more police to look after—a vicious circle."

Dr. Abernethy's remarks about the proposal were an incidental part of his sermon on "The Secret Springs."

Reynolds, who for several years has authored a bill to authorize establishment of a race track in the District, is slated for chairman of the Senate District Committee.

'Spiritual Defense' Urged at Cathedral

Every man and woman in the United States must give devoted and willing service to the country in spiritual strength if our defense is to be sure, Dr. William Mather Lewis said at the Washington Cathedral evensong rites yesterday.

"The great defense of America is nothing else than spiritual defense," declared the Lafayette College president and former head of George Washington University. "That is the only kind of defense that is sure. Truth and religion always rise to greater strength in such times as these and only through this force will the present evils be overcome."

Director of the Selective Service Board of Pennsylvania, Dr. Lewis, expressed great concern over the physical condition of the draftees. He deplored the fact that "too many of them have to be placed in third classes through lack of physical qualification."

Christianity in Peril, Dr. McCartney Says

In a New Year's message yesterday at Covenant-First Presbyterian Church, Dr. Albert J. McCartney, pastor, said, in part:

"If the British go down, it will not only mean economic and political isolation for us as a nation for a long time to come, but the entire pattern of Christian enterprise in European and missionary lands will undergo inevitable changes that are inimicable to the free genius of the Christian religion."

Dr. McCartney observed that "if the year 1941 does not end the war, it will determine pretty clearly the direction in which it will end."

ROCK CREEK PALE & GOLDEN GINGER ALE SPARKLING WATER

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

In the little stucco office of Clark Griffith at Griffith Stadium tomorrow, the stockholders of the Washington Baseball Club will meet and their actions will be rote. Out of long habit that, over the course of 20 years has become compelling, they will reelect Mr. Griffith president of the Washington club.

POVICH

There will be no other candidate, there never is. The stockholder who would have the temerity to suggest another president would be withered by the general frowning. And of course there could be no other president as long as Griffith chose to take the office. Mr. Griffith, with Vice President William Richardson, own the controlling stock and Richardson's stock is voted as Griffith pleases, that being the type of their relationship.

The stockholders of the Washington club are a tight little family group that never questions Griffith's stewardship. Nor the business management as handled by Edward B. Eynon, jr. Griffith hires and fires ball players, and managers, sells, trades and disposes as he pleases, and there is no complaint. One reason, of course, is that the Washingon club is a profitable sort of going concern, chiefly because of the acumen of Messrs. Griffith and Eynon.

No inconsiderable part in the organization is Eynon who is at once high counselor to Griffith on all matters, shrewd businessman and good-will front of the Washington team. As tactful a gentleman as ever faced an irate fan's demand for his favorite box set, Eynon has assuaged more difficult situations than any .300 hitter who ever worked for the club.

Even before he ascended to the presidency of the Washington team in 1920, Griffith had selected Eynon as his business manager. He had marveled at the man's easy but compelling way with finance when Eynon was chairman of the Washington Liberty Loan drives and Griffith was a three-minute speaker. "I used to see him regulate the flow of hundreds of thousands of dollars in one day," says Griffith of Eynon, "and I said to myself then that if I ever owned a ball club he would be my choice to handle its business affairs."

Griffith graduated to the presidency of the Washington team after eight years as the mere manager, but even as manager he had risked his life savings in the club, buying stock in order to keep the team in operation when the owners showed little desire to put money into the team. On one occasion, Griffith pawned his only real estate holdings, his farm in Montana, to keep the Washington club in the American League.

When Griffith came to Washington in 1912 as manager, it was with the understanding that he was to become a heavy stockholder in the club. The late Ban Johnson, president of the American League, had promised that the league would loan Griffith the money to buy into the Washington team, but for some mysterious reason Johnson went back on his word. Whereupon the two men who had been chiefly instrumental in founding the American League, fell out. Griffith finally engineered a $20,000 loan on his Montana farm to buy a one-tenth interest in the Nats. His job as manager at the time was paying him $7,500 a year.

Griffith's first year in Washington was a terrific success. The Nats, for many years the joke of the league, set a league record by winning 17 games in a row, and finished second. Griffith turned over to the owners $96,000 in profits for the year. When they squawked because he used 89 dozen balls during the season, which represented a bill of $1,400, he vowed that some day he would control the club, which now spends $9,000 a year for balls.

It was seven years later before Griffith made good on the promise to himself that he would be in control of the club, but when, in 1919, he did ascend to the presidency, he was showing his faith in baseball in Washington. It was in 1919 that the Nats had their most dismal year at the gate. They finished seventh and lost money. The directors were in no mood to put more cash into the team, but Griffith still considered Washington a good baseball town. He set about to borrow money enough to put himself in control.

A Washington bank, impressed by the fine balances the team had kept since Griffith joined it as manager, loaned him $100,000. Richardson, a Philadelphia importer, also agreed to risk $100,000 in the venture. Together they gained four-fifths of the club's stock, which they still hold in equal portions.

There has never been any conflict in the relations of Griffith and Richardson. The latter does not pretend to be a baseball man and says of Griffith, "he knows the baseball business and I'm proud to be associated with him." Richardson does not ask to be consulted on deals, but is flattered when he is. He gets his big belt out of being vice president of the club because, perhaps, it allows him to sit on the bench—with the players.

Anyway, that's more or less the setup of the Washington Baseball Club as a business organization, and we just thought you'd like to know a couple of these things.

Bulla Plays Wrong Ball, Now Second; Little 4-Putts

Shute and Goggin Two Strokes Back Of Thomson; Hogan, Heafner in Running

By Henry McLemore,
United Press Sports Writer.

Los Angeles, Jan. 5.—A par 71 round over a rain-soaked course and a two-stroke penalty on burly Johnny Bulla today enabled Jimmy Thompson to take the 54-hole lead in the Los Angeles $10,000 Open Golf championship with a total of 211.

One spot behind was Bulla, who lost his chance to pace the crack field in two final rounds when he played Harold (Jug) McSpaden's ball on the first hole and was fined two shots to give him a two over par seven. This unfortunate mistake actually cost Bulla more than two strokes because it unnerved him and he played raggedly on the first nine, going four over par with a 39.

Hogan Tied at 214

He finished with a 75, nine strokes worse than his brilliant round of yesterday which gave him a two-stroke lead at the half-way mark. Bracketed at 213 were Willie Goggin and Denny Shute. Goggin had today's lowest round, a 68, getting 15 pars and three birdies over the long heavy Riviera Country Club course. Shute, making a comeback after a layoff of nearly a year, shot a 74.

Dangerous at 214 were big Clayton Heafner and little Benny Hogan. Heafner shot a 74 while Hogan pressed Goggin for third-round honors with a 1-under-par 70.

Lawson Little, National Open champion and defending title holder, and Craig Wood were next in line at 215. Little had a chance to hit 69 today but muffed it when he four-putted the eighteenth green from 35 feet to take a 71. Wood had 72.

The chances are the tournament winner will come from the players with scores of 215 or better. Of course, Little picked up six strokes on the field the final day last year but he had to fire an amazing 65 to do it.

Mangrum Slips

Several of the half-way leaders shot themselves out of the tournament today. Lloyd Mangrum, who was only two shots off the pace when today's play started, went to pieces and took a 78. Ed Oliver and Sam Snead removed themselves from serious contention with a 76 and a 75 respectively.

Johnny Dawson continued to pace the amateurs when he had a 74 for a total of 219.

Bulla probably would have escaped the two-stroke penalty if McSpaden who was playing with him had not stopped to put on his rain suit as he walked down the

Hans Strand, Skid Expert, Injured At Bear Mountain

By the Associated Press

Bear Mountain, N. Y., Jan. 5.—Hans Strand, nationally known skier representing the Bear Mountain Sports Association, was injured seriously today in a crash on the newly remodeled 55-meter ski jump during the season's first jumping tournament.

Strand was the first of 71 entrants to glide down the long runway and when he flashed out into space was turned over by a strong wind and landed on his side.

Dr. Thomas McMenamin, who examined Strand, said he was suffering from a brain concussion and other injuries.

D. C. Football Coaches Favor Rule Changes

Hagerty, Bergman, Reinhart Speak for '41 Changes; Unlimited Substitute Ruling Only Cause for Any Dissatisfaction

By Jack Munhall

Football coaches of the three major Washington colleges last night went on record as generally in favor of the three proposed rules changes for 1941.

Jack Hagerty, of Georgetown; Bill Reinhart, of George Washington, and A. J. (Dutch) Bergman, of Catholic University; all welcomed the alterations as an invitation to the coaches to speed up and open up their offenses.

The trio disagreed with only one phase of the proposed changes which, if tradition holds, will be written into the books. That is the one allowing unlimited substitutions and permitting substitutes to immediately communicate with the team. All believed that unlimited substitutions would slow up the game considerably.

Coach a Quarterback?

Reinhart, jokingly, added that probably lots of coaches would be against it because they'll be laid open to most of the criticism that now falls on the quarterback. "Why," said Reinhart, "under that rule you could send a different quarterback into the game on every play and, in effect, the coach himself would be the quarterback."

The proposed changes which the coaches commented on are, in part:

1. Players may be substituted as many times as desired during a game; elimination of the rule prohibiting an incoming substitute from communicating with his team until after the ball has been put into play . . .

2. The ball may be handed forward at any point behind the line of scrimmage to any player and will be treated as though it were a backward pass.

3. Fourth-down forward passes which become incomplete in the opponent's end zone will be treated as though they become incomplete on the field of play instead of being ruled touchbacks. On such plays, the ball will go to the de-

Brooklyn Five Wins ,38 to 31, Over Brewers

Kate Smith's Brooklyn Celtics handed the Washington Brewers a 38-to-31 setback last night before 1,500 fans at Riverside Stadium and by doing so toppled the Brewers out of second place in the American Professional Basketball League.

The visitors forged into the lead at the outset and managed to hold a substantial margin throughout the contest.

By their victory the Celtics avenged an earlier defeat at the hands of the Brewers here. Although last night's game was devoid of any actual fighting as was the case in their last meeting, the play was rough. Three Celtics and a Brewer were ousted from the floor via the personal foul route—Moe Frankel, Kupperberg and Kaplan of the Brooklyn club, and Ben Kramer of Washington.

Mickey Kupperberg and Chick Reiser manufactured the offensive punch for the Celtics. Kupperberg found the cords for 10 points while Reiser tallied 12.

The Brewers made a futile last-period rally with Whitey Wilson leading the way, but the spark was missing as were the local team's shots. Phil Rabin, diminutive high-scoring forward, was the only Brewer able to hit the basket with any consistency. He counted 9 points. The Brewers made 11 of 13 free tosses.

Bollerman, newly acquired Brewer center, and tallest man on the floor, only played a short time. The Brewers failed to utilize him to their best advantage. The short time he was in the game he was not used on the pivot play, a position which undoubtedly would have helped the home club.

In a preliminary game, the Jacobsen's Florists five routed Greenbelt, 33 to 8.

College Court Teams Turn to Conferences

By the Associated Press

New York, Jan. 5.—Having completed most of its early-season roaming around the country, college basketball settles down during this week to conference campaigns.

All major groups, from the Pacific Coast conference to the Eastern Intercollegiate League, begin the battle for championships, taking over the spotlight from the intraleague tussles and the meetings with "independents."

These latter affairs had a big fling last night, however, and wound up by ending such vaunted winning streaks as boasted by Long Island (nine in a row) and Panzer, of New Jersey (44 in a row over a three-year period). On the other hand, Seton Hall, another Jersey school, stretched its string to 32 straight by walloping Illinois Wesleyan, 44-26; Villanova made it ten straight by trouncing Detroit, 49-37, and Iowa State, preseason favorite in the Bix Six campaign, passed its seventh consecutive hurdle by downing Drake, 36-30.

The biggest upset of the Madison Square Garden season here saw Long Island suffer from an attack of "overconfidence-itis" and lose to a fighting Michigan State quintet, 31-26. This left only New York University's hot-and-cold Violets to uphold Pa Knickerbocker's annual reputation. Panzer, unbeaten since December, 1937, dropped a close one, 43-40, to John Marshall.

By conferences, the picture looked something like this:

Eastern Intercollegiate League—Columbia and Dartmouth finished their preconference competition by downing Brown, 49-36, and Rochester, 32-26, respectively, but Princeton's touring Tigers were handed a 34-23 setback by Northwestern. Getting the league race under way, Cornell tangles with Yale and Dartmouth meets Harvard Friday. Columbia entertains Navy and Harvard and Princeton meet Army during the week in nonconference affairs, while Penn opens with Maryland.

In other parts of the East, Ford-

Bruins Beat House of David Five, 48-43

Breaking a 20-20 halftime tie, the Washington Bruins, colored professional basketball team, forged ahead and staved off a determined closing-minute rally by the bearded lads of the House of David for a 48-43 victory yesterday before a crowd of 1,000 at Turner's Arena.

The House of David jumped into an early 10-9 lead, but the trio of Buck Covington, "Shootmore" Brown and Ezra Murdock opened up a whirlwind attack to put the Bruins out in front, 16-10.

Kinihan, the bearded quintet's ace scorer who piled up 16 points, put the Davids back in the game with an almost impossible shot from the side, added two more points from the foul line, and as the whistle blew the Davids had tied it up.

Covington and Briscoe then retaliated with a second-half scoring rampage, aided and abetted by the passing of the lanky Murdock, and put the Bruins out in front 40-26.

Willie Klein Advises Pros To Settle Down

By the Associated Press

Miami Beach, Fla., Jan. 5.—The glory gained from tournament golf is nice, but the smartest thing a young professional can do is build a reputation, land a nice job, and settle down.

You don't hear a lot about Klein nowadays, although tournament veterans say he could keep pace with the best on the circuit.

Klein, a big blond with a stylish swing, is quite content with a summer position at the Wheatley Hills Golf Club, East Williston, Long Island, and his winter job is here.

Started as Caddie

Born within a couple of brassie shots of the Wheatley Hills course, Willie started as a caddie, like most professionals. In 1926 he was teaching golf at West Palm Beach when the veteran Charlie Murray talked him into entering the Miami Open.

"I came down here," Klein recalled, "practiced one day, and then went to win with 289.

"It was possible then to teach for six hours a day, grab a bag of practice balls and get in shape to play tournament golf because all the others were doing the same. But today, with the fast competition and

River Vale Bows, 4 to 2, To N.Y. Rovers

By the Associated Press

New York, Jan. 5.—Led by their fiery little wingman, Ed Dartnell, the New York Rovers, defeated River Vale's Skeeters, 4-2, in a thrill-packed Eastern Amateur Hockey League game at Madison Square Garden today before 11,247 screaming fans.

Dartnell sent the New Yorkers into the lead late in the first period when he took a pass from Joe Patrick in front of the Skeeters' cage and slipped the puck past Goalie Paul Lessard. He talked again shortly before the close of the second session with the assistance of Frank Dotten and Howie Hollinger.

All About New Orleans; Famous for Its Varied Sports Background

Whitney Martin
Associated Press Sports Writer.

New Orleans, Jan. 5.—Concerning New Orleans, which has its French quarter, but does nothing by halves:

The city drips with sports history, even going back to 1814 to find a tieup for a modern sports event. The thirty-fifth annual Jackson Day run is over the 6-mile route Pirate Lafitte led his cuthroats from Spanish Fort to Jackson Square to aid Andrew Jackson in the battle of New Orleans. It's the town which staged three championship prize fights in three days back in 1892, and where Nick Forsley, known as Nick F., made a million as a bookie at the Fair Grounds in 1924, and died broke after trying to play the ponies instead of laying the odds.

It's the spot where Andy Bowen and Jack Burke fought the longest bout on record. It went 110 rounds and lasted 7 hours and 19 minutes. The sissies quit and called it a draw. It's still the home of Abner Powell, who inaugurated the first ladies' day at baseball games and issued the first rain checks. He's nigh on to 80 years old, and he played with John McGraw, Willie Keeler and other greats with the old Baltimore Orioles. He helped pitch the Pelicans to a pennant in 1887. Tony Marullo, the "almost" guy, also is about. He fought seven light-heavy champions—Loughran, Greb, Walker, Latzo, McTigue, Berlenbach and Slattery—and never won a title. Chess historians can tell you all about Paul Morphy, who was born here and had no equal at playing them across the board back in the 1860's.

It's the final resting place of two great race horses—Pan Zareta and Black Gold. The prospective purchase of the Fair Grounds will save their graves, prominent in the infield at the plant. Pan Zareta was famed as a sprinter, and won the love of the turf fans by winning consistently no matter how much lead they piled on him. Black Gold won five Derbies in 1924, including the Kaintucky. It's the place where famous ring figures of the past, including Joe Mandot, Pal Moran and Pete Herman may be seen around and about. Pete, totally blind, runs a tavern, and is cheerful despite his affliction. It's the spot where Dick Burke, former president of the National Boxing Association and fight referee, will pridefully show you the shoes worn by John L. Sullivan in his memorable bout with Jake Kilrain.

It's the city that has seen fight championships change hands in every class but lightheavy, to wit:

Heavyweight—James J. Corbett defeated John L. Sullivan in 1892.

Middleweight—Bob Fitzsimmons defeated Nonpariel Jack Dempsey, 1891.

Welter—Jack Britton defeated Ted (Kid) Lewis.

Junior Welter—Battling Shaw defeated Johnny Jadick, 1933, and Tony Canzoneri defeated Shaw the same year.

Lightweight—Jack McAuliffe defeated Billy, Myer, 1892.

Feather—George Dixon defeated Jack Skelly, 1892.

Bantam—Johnny Coulon defeated John Kendrick, 1910, and Pete Herman defeated Kid Williams, 1917.

Flyweight—Johnny Buff defeated Frankie Mason, 1921.

It's the place where masterpieces are eaten, not hung on a wall. Where dining is an old-world art, and a meal of less than three hours is a hurried snack. It's a place where tourists take a sip of coffee, then grab their cups to keep it from leaping at them. When a spoon will stand up in the coffee, it's just about right. It's a place where a popping paper bag will start a celebration, with nobody asking what for. It's New Orleans, the city which will never grow up.

Mike Jacobs Opens Battle to 'Squelch' N.B.A.'s Title Fights

Conn to Sue, New York 'Czar' Says

Threatens Court Action if Cleveland Promoters Don't Change Bout Billing

By Jack Cuddy.
United Press Sports Writer.

New York, Jan. 5.—Promoter Mike Jacobs tonight fired the opening gun in his campaign "to squelch the practice of advertising phoney title fights in National Boxing Association territory."

Jacobs announced that Light Heavyweight Champion Billy Conn will sue the promoters of the Melio Bettina-Anton Christoforidis bout at Cleveland, January 13, if they persist in advertising this 15-round tilt as "for the light heavyweight championship."

The promoters are Bob Brickman and Ben Goetz, of Cleveland.

"Conn has not given up his world championship," Jacobs said. "He has agreed to defend the title against the winner of the Jimmy Webb-Tommy Tucker challengers' bout, scheduled for Madison Square Garden on February 28.

"We Defy Anyone . . ."

"The fact that Conn signed a private contract with me to challenge Joe Louis for the heavyweight title in June has no bearing now upon his light heavyweight championship in New York or any State. He's still champion, and we defy anyone to advertise otherwise—to obtain money from the public under false pretenses. I'll back his suit to the limit. If those Cleveland promoters continue their championship advertising we'll take them to court right in Cleveland and straighten them out."

Jacobs did not say exactly what kind of suit Conn might file. He said the attorneys would take care of that.

Publicity releases on the Cleveland fight say that it is "for the world's light heavyweight championship." They state also that "President Joe Triner of the National Boxing Association has ruled that a new champion must be created in the arena match."

'Championship Joke'

Incensed at this title angle, Jacobs said that the match was a "championship joke," because Conn has beaten Bettina, of Beacon, N. Y., twice, and because Christoforidis, of Greece, is so light "that he's practically a middleweight."

Jacobs said he hopes the matter comes into court, so that he can find out just who has the legal right to take away a champion's title, "after a boy has won it legitimately in the ring." He said there has been so much of "this phoney title business" going on in National Boxing Association territory, that boxing will soon have as many "champions" as wrestling.

"For the protection of everyone connected with boxing, titles must be won and lost in the ring," he concluded, "and anyone who attempts to fool the public by advertising phoney title matches from now on will run into plenty of trouble."

Cleveland Matchmaker Says He'll Defy Jacobs

Cleveland, Ohio, Jan. 5 (U.P.)—Larry Atkins, matchmaker of the Anton Christoforidis-Melio Bettina fight here January 13, said tonight he would "continue to advertise the match as a light heavyweight title bout." Despite a threatened law suit by Billy Conn.

"This is the first time since Mike Jacobs came into power in 1935 that any promoter has defied him," Atkins said.

Stripp's School For Baseball Starts in Orlando

By the Associated Press

Orlando, Fla., Jan. 5.—Baseball gets off to an early 1941 start here Tuesday with the opening of Joe Stripp's winter school for young diamond hopefuls.

George Barr's school for umpires, operated in conjunction with Stripp's school, will open at the same time.

Stripp expects about 150 aspirants to report and Barr anticipates an enrollment of 70 prospective arbiters.

The first week of Stripp's course will be taken up with general conditioning exercises. The preliminaries will be supervised by Stripp, Lou Hurst, Joe Tinker, Jimmy Jordan and George Andrews. The following Monday, Eddie Miller, Van Lingle Mungo, Don Padgett, Ben Cantwell, Joe Medwick, Johnny Cooney, Dutch Leonard and Bob Weiland will join the staff.

N.B.A. Chief Insists Conn Has No Title

Says Melio Bettina, Christoforidas to Fight For Light-Heavy Crown

By the United Press

Chicago, Jan. 5.—Joe Triner, president of the National Boxing Association, said tonight that Billy Conn is no longer light heavyweight boxing champion and insisted that the Melio Bettina-Anton Christoforidis bout at Cleveland January 13 will be for the division championship.

Triner made the statement in commenting on an announcement by Promoter Mike Jacobs at New York that Conn would sue the promoters of the Bettina-Christoforidis match for advertising it as a title fight because he (Conn) is still division champion.

The N. B. A. no longer considers Conn champion and will recognize the winner of the Cleveland match as the new titlist, Triner said, because:

Says Conn Gave Up Title

1. Conn automatically relinquished his title when he signed to fight Joe Louis for the heavyweight championship in June.

2. Conn's manager, Johnny Ray, announced to the press that Conn had relinquished his title when he agreed to fight Louis.

3. Conn has not defended his title within six months required by N. B. A. rule against idle champions.

Triner said the N. B. A. position on Conn's automatic loss of his light heavyweight title upon signing to fight Louis was based upon the rule issued last month by Gen. John J. Phelan, chairman of the New York Athletic Commission.

He said Phelan held that the Lou Jenkins-Fritzie Zivic bout was not a title match because Jenkins, the lightweight titlist, would have to relinquish his title to fight a championship bout in a class above his own. Zivic held the welterweight title.

"According to the New York rules under which Conn has signed to fight Joe Louis," Triner said, "he automatically relinquished his light-heavyweight title."

Winner Meets Lesnevich

Triner said Ray publicized that Conn had relinquished his title and that the actual surrender of the title was only a matter of a formal announcement.

"The N. B. A. has served notice on Conn by two telegrams calling his attention to the fact that defense of his title was overdue. Neither Conn nor his manager has seen fit to accord the N. B. A. courtesy of a reply to the official inquiry."

In announcing that the N. B. A. would recognize the winner of the Bettina-Christoforidis match as new champion, Triner said the fight contracts signed at Cleveland provide that the winner must meet Gus Lesnevich of New Jersey within 60 days, sharing the purse on an equal basis.

Touchdown Banquet Tonight Makes D.C.College Grid Capital

Harmon, Evashevski Head Notable Array Of Football Talent at Willard Function

This city will be the college football capital of the country today as the outstanding players of 1940 and many of the outstanding coaches of the Nation gather here for the annual Touchdown Club banquet tonight at 8 o'clock at the Willard Hotel.

From all parts of the country such famed football players and officials as Tommy Harmon, Bob Suffridge, Fritz Crisler, Francis Reagan, Forest Evashevski, Earle (Greasy) Neale, Sammy Baugh, Maj. John Griffith, Maj. Swede Larson and many others will converge on Washington for tonight's ceremonies.

TOMMY HARMON

First to arrive this morning will be Suffridge, unanimous All-America guard from Tennessee, who is scheduled to detrain at Union Station at 6:30. Major Griffith, commissioner of athletics of the "Big Ten" Conference, will hop off a pullman about 1:30 p. m., and throughout the day others will arrive by train and by plane.

Awards Highlight Program

Harmon and Evashevski, Michigan's great running-blocking combination, and also Reagan, from Pennsylvania, are to arrive by plane early in the afternoon. But at a late hour last night the times of their scheduled arrivals were not known by Touchdown Club dinner officials.

The banquet program, arranged under the direction of President Max Farrington and General Chairman George Brobeck, will be highlighted by presentation of awards to the star gridmen, including most valuable players of five local colleges.

Recipient of the most-coveted prize will be the willowy-hipped dead-passing Harmon, who has been chosen the outstanding All-American player for 1940. To Harmon, a senior and a unanimous All-American, will go the Walter Camp Memorial Trophy, presented by Chairman Brobeck.

Griffith Main Speaker

Second most important award will spotlight Suffridge, who will receive the Knute Rockne Memorial Trophy as the outstanding All-American linemen for 1940. This presentation will be made by A. J. (Dutch) Bergman, head football coach of Catholic University and former close friend of the late Rockne.

Augie Lio, Georgetown's All-America guard who also was chosen on the United Press All-bowl eleven, will be awarded the Arch McDonald-WJSV Trophy as the outstanding football player in the District of Columbia.

Awards, donated by the Washington Redskins, for the most valuable players of each of the five local college elevens, will be given to Jules Koshlap, Georgetown halfback; Sam Babich, George Washington quarterback; Pete Sachon, Catholic University quarterback; Bob Smith, Maryland center, and Hugo Schulze, American University tackle.

There will be entertainment by stage talent provided through the courtesy of local theaters, and music by Leon Brusiloff and his band.

Maj. John Griffith, commissioner of athletics of the Big Ten Conference, will deliver the main address of the evening on a program which includes speeches by Gus Welch, the old-time Carlisle star; Senator Arthur J. Vandenberg, of Michigan, and a host of others.

The distinguished guest list includes Secretary of Commerce Jesse H. Jones, Senators Carter Glass, Kenneth McKeller, Prentiss M. Brown, Tom Stewart, Tom Connally, Representatives Sam Rayburn, Joseph W. Martin, Fritz Lanham, Fred M. Vinson, Admiral Emory S. Land, chairman, U. S. Maritime Commission; Dr. C. H. Marvin, president, George Washington University; the Very Rev. Arthur A. O'Leary, S. J., president, Georgetown University; Fritz Crisler, University of Michigan football coach; Jack Hagerty, Georgetown coach; Maj. Swede Larson, Navy coach; Earl Neale, Pittsburgh Steeler pros' coach, and Dr. H. C. Byrd, president, University of Maryland.

Luncheon Canceled

A luncheon scheduled today by the University of Michigan Club honoring Harmon and Evashevski at the Hay-Adams House was called off yesterday because of the mix-up in the arrangements for a second East-West charity game on the Pacific Coast.

Hoyas Work At Riverside For G. W. Date

District College Fives Play on Stadium Floor Wednesday at 8:30

Coach Elmer Ripley took his Georgetown University basketball squad to Riverside Stadium last night for an hour's practice before the professional game, hoping to familiarize his players with the court for Wednesday night's encounter with George Washington.

The Hoyas haven't played on the same court twice this season in five starts. They lost the opener in Baltimore, won games here at Tech High and American University, and then cleaned up on the road in Chicago and Buffalo. Thus they haven't had time to get too well acquainted with any one court.

Coach Bill Reinhart's George Washington club has become fairly familiar with Riverside. The Colonials also worked out before a professional game and since have met Oklahoma A. and M., Kansas State and Minnesota in their new home. Only the K. State game having unsatisfactory results, due to the slippery footing. This since has been corrected.

G. U. Home Team

Wednesday's game, first in the two-game series between the local rivals, is Georgetown's home game, and only G. U student ticket books will be honored. The March 5 game, also at Riverside, will be the G. W. student's turn.

George Washington is the logical favorite in the intracity clash to the District fans, because of its larger alumni and because it has been in the spotlight here most of the season.

To the G. W. players and coach, however, the game is rated as a toss-up and they well have reason. The Hoyas have come up with an outstanding center in Bill Bornheimer, have won four out of five games and beat the Colonials by four points late last season.

G. W., bringing the Midwestern teams here for intersectional tilts during the holiday season, and winning four straight over Southern Conference opposition after being admitted to the conference now ranks as one of the outstanding clubs seen here in years due to its sensational play of the past seven games. The only loss was to the Oklahoma Aggies, and that in a game the locals dominated until the last few minutes.

Frosh in Preliminary

One important factor in favor of the Colonials is that they stayed here for practice over the holidays while the Hoyas disbanded. Ripley brought the boys back last Thursday, however, and held two workouts daily. They will practice once a day from now on as school starts this morning.

The varsity game is scheduled for 8:30 p. m. and will be preceded by a freshamn encounter at 7:15 that will bring together two unbeaten and star-stocked elevens. One and possibly two bands will provide entertainment for between intermissions and time outs. The advance sale has been exceptionally good, but ample reserved seats are on hand at the stadium.

Today is an open date on the local college court calendar, while tomorrow Wilson opens the week's home card entertaining a Johns Hopkins squad that has won several early contests. The Teachers boast three victories in five contests. American U. leaves tomorrow morning for Elizabethtown, Pa., and games in successive days with Elizabethtown, Dickinson and Delaware.

Louis to Fight Dorazio if He Beats Burman

By the United Press

New York, Jan. 5.—If Joe Louis beats Red Burman at Madison Square Garden, January 31, he will make his third title defense of the winter against Gus Dorazio, at Philadelphia, about February 17, Promoter Mike Jacobs said tonight.

Louis will arrive in New York from Detroit Thursday to attend the boxing writers' annual dinner that night. On Friday he will go to Greenwood Lake, N. Y., and start training for his tilt with Burman, of Baltimore, Jack Dempsey's protege.

Burman already is conditioning at Mme. Bey's camp, Summit, N. J.

Ambers in Training

Jacobs revealed also that Lou Ambers, former lightweight champion who lost the title on a knockout to Lew Jenkins in May, will launch his comeback, as a welterweight, at the Garden on February 21, against some outstanding welter. Ambers, now training at Stillman's gym, will have a couple of tune-up bouts before then, according to Manager Al Weill.

Jacobs is trying to close for a middleweight title match between Champion Ken Overlin and Billy Soose, of Farrell, Pa., for the Garden on February 7. Soose earned the match by winning an easy ten-round decision over young Tami Mauriello, of the Bronx, at the Garden Friday night.

Overlin's marriage last week may delay the title tilt. His manager, Chris Dundee—who also was married recently—will interrupt his Cuban honeymoon and fly to Washington, D. C., Tuesday to discuss the match with Overlin. Dundee will report to Jacobs at New York Wednesday.

St. Louis Rangers Beat Indianapolis Five, 47-34

St. Louis, Jan. 5 (AP).—The St. Louis Rangers registered their fourth straight basketball triumph today, defeating the Indianapolis Stewart-Warner team, 47 to 34.

The Indianpolis Cagers, behind only 18 to 17 at the half, kept within striking distance in the second half until they abandoned long shot attempts for close-in tries.

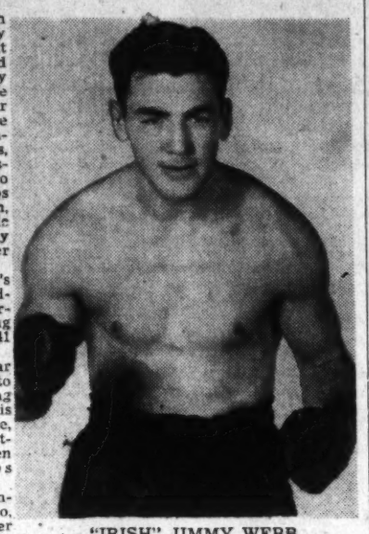
Bouts Tomorrow Open '41 'Parade of Stars'

Webb, Focal Point of Boxing Controversy, Tops Card at Turner's Arena Offering Molnar, Furr, McDowell, Spangler, Banks, Hernandez

When Jimmy Webb, currently one of the parties involved in the bitter controversy between Mike Jacobs and the National Boxing Associations, headlines tomorrow night's all-star fight show at Turner's arena, he'll be setting in motion a winter "parade of stars," Matchmaker Gabe Menendez announced last night.

Webb meets Al Stephany, New York colored light heavyweight, in one of four eight-rounders, including battles between Gene Molnar, of Detroit, and Washington's Phil Furr; Bill McDowell, of Dallas, and Richmond's Joey Spangler; and Pedro Hernandez, of Puerto Rico, and Washington's Billy Banks.

The 22-year-old Irish 175-pounder, a heavy favorite to knock out Stephany, has been selected by Jacobs to meet Tommy Tucker in Madison Square Garden, with the winner fighting Billy Conn for the light heavyweight championship. Trouble there is, the National Boxing Association says Conn has no such title any more. Jacobs says Conn is still champion, and the New York Athletic Commission has officially blessed the Webb-Tucker fight.



"IRISH" JIMMY WEBB

At any rate, Webb's battle tomorrow is scheduled to draw heavy interest in addition to firing Promoter Joe Turner's 1941 opening gun.

On the winter calendar of fights, according to Turner, are bouts involving such headliners as Louis Kid Cocoa, Steve Belloise, Frankie Britt, Bob Montgomery, Billy Speary, Ken Overlin and, perhaps Harry Jeffra.

Menendez last night announced that Gene Buffalo, Philadelphia's 150-pounder colored fighter who was a big drawing card here four years ago, will appear in a headline fight January 13.

He has a tentative agreement that calls for Belloise to meet the winner of tomorrow's Molnar-Furr fight, Menendez said, on January 20 in the arena.

Chris Dundee, manager of Webb and Ken Overlin, is interrupting his honeymoon in Florida to fly to Washington tomorrow, and Menendez said he will discuss with Dundee the possibility of matching Overlin against a well-known middleweight in a non-title fight here soon.

If Steve Mamakos makes a good showing against Tony Zale in Chicago Friday night, Menendez said he hopes to line up a return match between Furr and the Golden Greek.

Meanwhile, Webb, Molnar, McDowell and Hernandez are expected to arrive today for a final workout at 2 p. m. at the Huron gymnasium, 511 Eleventh Street Northwest.

Webb and McDowell are expected to be heavy favorites when they step into the ring tomorrow night, although the latter will be seeking to halt Spangler's comeback march of nine straight victories.

Furr, making his first appearance since being knocked out by Henry Armstrong will be an even shot against the rugged Detroiter. Molnar is said to fight the same kind of a battle that Mamakos fights, and Furr's knockout of Steve was one of the bloodiest bouts ever seen here.

Banks will be favored to stop Hernandez and earn a featured fight with Jeffra or the up and coming Speary, Pennsylvania youngster.

Boston Olympics, Orioles Deadlock In Hockey Match

By the Associated Press

Baltimore, Jan. 5.—The Boston Olympics overcame a 1-goal lead in the third period of an Eastern Amateur League hockey game tonight and tied Baltimore 1—1. Neither team could break the deadlock in an overtime period.

Baltimore led until within six minutes of the third period close, when Goalie Frank Ceryance lost his stick in a scrimmage. Before he could recover it Thompson shot the puck into the net.

The tie put the Orioles within two points of the League-leading Washington team.

Alice Marble, Budge Open Tour Tonight

Tennis Vaudeville Starts in New York's Madison Square Garden

By the Associated Press

New York, Jan. 5.—Sweetness and charm will take the place of competition tomorrow night when the tennis vaudeville company of Alice Marble and Don Budge opens its Nation-wide tour with the usual fanfare at Madison Square Garden.

Alice's first step into the wonderland of the professional game will be made against litttle Ruth Mary Hardwick, the English refugee whom she beat every time they played as amateurs, while Budge's third season as a professional will find him paired opposite the 47-year-old Bill Tilden, whose wind is "gone with the."

Envisions $50,000

Nevertheless, the Garden's capacity of about 16,000 probably will be taxed tomorrow night and the quartet hopes to do similarly well in the 50 or more appearances booked in the United States and Canada during the next four and a half months.

Alice has been guaranteed $25,000, with a percentage of the receipts, and has visions of grossing $50,000, which is somewhat better than she could do singing in New York night clubs and protecting her amateur status this winter.

The latter had reached the point where it wasn't worth protecting. She had conquered all the worlds that were open to her and, in fact, hadn't lost a match since. Wimbledon in 1938. She swept to the Women's National championship at Forest Hills last summer without the loss of a single set.

Tilden in Good Shape

Miss Hardwick will give her as much of a battle as anyone that could be obtained for an opponent. Lithe Little Mary was, until she turned pro, the first ranking woman net star of England. She came to the United States in 1939 for the Wightman Cup matches and the outbreak of the war kept her from returning.

Tilden has been practicing assiduously for his test against Budge and looks exceptionally fit. But the California Redhead, 22 years younger and right at the peak of his game, should have little to fear tomorrow night and nothing at all when the pair begins playing rigorous one-night stands all over the country.

Certainly there is no competitive question such as surrounded Budge's debut for $75,000 two years ago against Ellsworth Vines, or even last winter when he consistently pelted Fred Perry.

Eagles' Coach Protests Hockey Officiating

Declaring that he was "fed up with biased officiating," Coach Redvers Mackenzie, of the Washington Eagles, announced last night that he will direct today a strenuous protest to President Tom Lockhart, jr., of the Eastern Amateur League.

Mackenzie, who has been complaining all season that the league officials were too often inefficient and prejudiced in favor of the home town teams, said he would bandy no words in his letter to President Lockhart.

It is expected that Lockhart will attend tomorrow night's match between the Eagles and the New York Rovers at Riverside Stadium and investigate Mackenzie's charges.

Mackenzie and his players were bitter in their denunciation of the officiating in Atlantic City Saturday night as the Eagles lost to the Sea Gulls, 7-3, and had their league leadership endangered by both the Sea Gulls and the Baltimore Orioles.

"We deserved to lose the game, and we have no complaint there," Mackenzie said, "but these same officials who seldom so much as give us an even break on our own rink seem to lean backwards in favoring home teams elsewhere.

COACH MACKENZIE

"They blow their whistles on the slightest provocation and I honestly don't believe they know what they're doing half the time when they call misconduct penalties. Being the league leaders we naturally expect our share of the bad breaks, but not all of them."

The particular peeves of Mackenzie are (1) that five goals scored here by the Eagles had been called back unjustly, and (2) that the officials have been too severe in their punishments of Washington defenseman Johnny McTeer.

McTeer, who received a third major penalty at Atlantic City Saturday night after rushing to the rescue of teammate Hal Dewey when a spectator attacked him, is now under a one-match ban.

Mackenzie's chief victim in his protests to President Lockhart probably will be Referee Bill Cleary who, he says, sided with River Vale here recently when there was an argument about a goal scored by Washington's Len Burrage, and also with Atlantic City Saturday during that hectic match.

"Cleary's style of officiating is just what I'm going to bat against," Mackenzie said. "I think it's uncalled for, biased and that steps should be taken to remedy it."

Laurel Track to Add to Distance of Famous Selima Stakes

Fillies Race At 1 Mile And 16th

Short Run to Turn At Start Is Erased; 390 Are Eligibles; Race Eagerly Sought

It is a long time until Laurel offers the sixteenth running of the Selima Stakes in October but thoughts of the owners and trainers of 390 fillies just turned 2 years old are turning to the race because its conditions call for another payment on January 15 to keep these 390 fillies eligible.

Keeping fillies eligible for the Selima Stakes costs $100 divided into three payments but it is a good gamble for anyone with a filly of class, for the Selima is the richest stake in the country exclusively for this division.

Last fall Valdina Farm's Valdina Myth charged home on the front end in the Selima and she earned $23,580. This was the only horse Valdina Farm started in Maryland during 1940 yet the victory was sufficient to place Emerson F. Woodward's stable in fifth place among the money-winners for the season in the Old Line State.

Since the inauguration of the Selima Stakes in 1926 no winner has earned less than $20,000 and the prizes have ranged as high as $26,650 which War Beauty picked up through her 1939 triumph.

Distance Longer

There is more interest than ever in this stake, for it will be run at the distance of a mile and a sixteenth for the first time. Previously the race has been decided at a mile.

William Woodward, chairman of the New York Jockey Club and master of the Belair Stud, who was one of those instrumental in getting the Selima on the list of Laurel Stakes, is strong for the added distance in this test for two-year-old fillies.

Woodward not only supports the race by sending representatives to run it whenever he has one worthy of the stake, but annually offers a handsome trophy which must be won three times for permanent possession.

When the subject of extending the Selima distance to a mile and a sixteenth was brought to Mr. Woodward's attention and he was asked his opinion of such a move he said: "Do anything you like with the Selima except make the distance shorter."

Test of Stamina

The mile and a sixteenth distance should prove a true test of the speed and stamina of the young fillies and it is just possible that the race will be even more popular than it has in the past.

At the mile distance, it was necessary to start the fields in front of the stand at the finish line, since Laurel is a mile oval with no chute for eight-furlong races. This made for a very short run to the first turn and it was inevitable that on some occasions horses lacking early speed were shuffled back out of contention before the turn was reached.

Now that the distance has been lengthened out, some of this jamming should be eliminated and the slow beginners will have the additional sixteenth of a mile in which to make up for their lack of early speed.

The 390 fillies now eligible for this year's Selima were made so by payments of $10 at the time of their nominations. An additional $40 must be paid on January 15 to keep them eligible, while another payment of $50 is due on June 16. Starters then pay $250. The Maryland State Fair, Inc., operators of the Laurel track, posts $10,000 in added money for the stake.

Nominators to the race also share in this added money, as well as the owners of the first four horses to finish. The nominator of the winner receives $1,000, nominator of the second filly $500 and nominator of the third horse $250.

fairway after his tee shot. Bulla went ahead and played McSpadden's ball while the Boston professional still was behind the crowd.

Tried to Stop Him

"I saw where Bulla's ball went off the tee," McSpaden said, "and if Johnny had not played so rapidly I would have been able to tell him that he was hitting my ball."

Thomson, whose tremendous distance was a great help to him on the wet course, was out in 34, getting two birdies, one with a long putt and one with a fine pitch and a bogie on the short side when he missed the green.

Thomson had a bogie on the tenth when he trapped his second, and he bogied the fifteenth when he missed the green with his long iron. He birdied the eleventh when he laid his approach stiff to the pin and came home in 37. The field was cut again after today's play and only the low 64 players will shoot for the 10,000 in prize money tomorrow.

They Called Turn at Major League Meeting

Ford Frick (left), president of the National League, and Will Harridge, president of the American League, look over the draft of plans for the coming baseball season at the concluding meeting of the annual gathering of club owners in the Waldorf-Astoria in New York. A. L. Boss Proudly Points To Largest Gate in History

27 Per Cent Increase Noted Over 1939; Flag Race Helped Attendance

By Will Harridge
President of the Aerican League

Chicago, Jan. 5 (AP).—The American League made history in 1940—a season which saw the establishment of the league's all-time attendance record and gave the fans one of the closest and most interesting pennant battles in all baseball history.

During the past season a total of 5,433,791 spectators paid to watch the circuit's teams play—a total which surpassed by almost 180,000 the previous all-time league record of 5,255,439 set in 1924.

This total of 5,433,791 represented an amazing 27 per cent increase over the 1939 league attendance. In actual number, 1,163,189 more fans saw league games in 1940 than in 1939.

Helped Showing

I believe the flag race itself principally was responsible for our attendance showing this past season. Baseball observers, before the season opened, conceded that every team was improved. Few, however, foresaw the possibility of New York failing to win its fifth straight championship, while Detroit's surprising battle to the top spot was one of the year's sports highlights.

The gallant rally of the Yankees, after a bad start, combined with Deroit and Cleveland's bid for first place, created a situation which had tremendous fan appeal. The race was not decided until the third from the last day of the campaign, and at one time the league had plans for a three-team playoff in event of a tie.

Night baseball in our league enjoyed great success. Thirty-five after-dark games draw 634,228 fans in Chicago, Cleveland, Philadelphia and St. Louis.

Times Turbulent

The fine showing made by every league club, both afield and at the gate, was especially remarkable in view of the turbulence of the times. On the problem of our national defense program, all baseball made it clear that the national pasttime would do its parts. Neither the American League nor any club in organized baseball desired any concessions in the draft. Our clubs, players and officials all stand ready to do whatever they can.

Our league—and all organized baseball—believes that many young and talented players will come into the game from Army training camps, where baseball will play its part in recreational activities.

We of the American League look forward to another fine season this year. Increased employment will enable many fans to see their favorite teams in action. Our Washington club will join the list of teams now playing under lights at home. We look for more young stars to place their names alongside those of the Lou Boudreaus, Bob Kennedys and other young players who contributed much to the 1940 campaign. The American League, grateful to its fans for their support this past year, is confident it will merit their approval and support again throughout 1941.

Clarence Hackney, Sr., Golf Professional Dies

Atlantic City, N. J., Jan. 5 (AP).—Clarence W. Hackney, sr., 46, former Canadian Open Golf champion and winner of the New Jersey Open title for four straight years, died last night of a heart ailment while visiting a brother in Morristown, N. J. He had been pro at the Atlantic City Country Club since the age of 16.

Detroit Near Lead

Detroit, Jan. 5 (U.P.).—The Detroit red wings defeated the Montreal Canadiens 3-0 tonight before 9,672 fans at Olympia Stadium to move into a tie for first place in the National Hockey League. The Red Wings, in extending their winning streak to five games, moved abreast of the Toronto Maple Leafs.

Bruins Tie Hawks

Boston, Mass., Jan. 5 (U.P.).—The crippled Boston Bruins held third place in the National Hockey League by coming from behind to gain a 2-2 overtime tie with the Chicago Blackhawks in a rough game before 11,000 fans at Boston Garden tonight.

ham nipped North Carolina 42-41 last night to the accompaniment of "boos" from Madison Square Garden's customers for a late foul called against the Tarheels, and City College of New York handed springfield its fourth straight setback, 44-37.

BIG TEN—John Kotz, with 13 points, helped Wisconsin to a 46-31 win over Nebraska; Northwestern, downing Princeton, ran its preconference campaign record to four wins in five outings; Minnesota mauled Montana 53-38 and Chicago came from behind to trounce Marquette 34-28.

BIG SIX—With Iowa State showing the way, Conference teams turned in a record of 19 wins and 18 losses against nonconference teams. Conference struggle begins with four games this week, chief of which finds those old rivals, Kansas and Oklahoma, tangling on Wednesday.

Chief of the independents in the Midwest, Notre Wame had to go all out to take a 48-47 decision from a Kentucky squad on which ten players were suffering from colds or influenza.

SOUTHERN CONFERENCE—Twelve games this week, with North Carolina opening defense of the crown against Washington and Lee Friday. The Carolinians left Madison Square Garden last night, beaten by a point, but definitely the heroes with the crowd.

In other Dixie doings, independent Virginia whipped Tennessee 41-30.

MISSOURI VALLEY—Oklahoma Aggies, with seven won and two lost in nonconference competition, and Creighton, with six victories and two setbacks, are favored as title race opens. Drake and Washington of St. Louis start conference schedule Monday.

SOUTHWEST CONFERENCE—Texas gets busy right at the start of the conference race, playing three league games during the week—against Rice Tuesday and Arkansas Friday and Saturday.

PACIFIC COAST CONFERENCE—Both the northern and southern divisions get the conference schedule started. In the south, Southern California's Trojans, back from their tour, take on U. C. L. A. Friday. In the north, six games are scheduled during the week, with Washington State playing in four of them.

BIG SEVEN—Three games Friday night start the ball rolling. Utah State meets Brigham Young, Colorado faces Colorado State and Wyoming takes on Denver.

Selections at Tropical Park

Dear Al:

Only two more programs at Tropical and then the bangtails move over to Hialeah to the longest stand of the winter in Florida. The other track has a lot of horses which were not in action over at the Coral Gables course. I hope I can pick a few more winners at Hialeah. Never felt so low about selections. Maybe it's because I've been hanging around with Jimmy Sager, the big cash-and-carry man from Fourteenth and Park Road. He has more friends than I did before I started picking horses. Brothers Davis and Jewell of the Diamond Cab Co. prefer my stories to my selections. But speaking of Sager, I prefer trying to wrestle with horses to some of the problems he has right now. That was a good column on the Fair Grounds written by Shirley Povich. Many of the smaller owners will be glad when Hot Springs opens and gives them some shot at purses. Remember the talk of extending the Charles Town meeting? Well the good weather in Washington held out right through New Year's Day. Jockey Jake (No Boy) Jacobs left for Florida yesterday. He always waits for the Hialeah opening. Tropical Park is too small for him. Arch McDonald, of WJSV, is returning from a visit to Florida where he tackled the bangtails at Tropical. He had plenty of money and a cold when he left and probably will get back without either. For the benefit of listeners to Art Brown, of WOL, he weighed 216 pounds with his coat off night before last. I understand he said I weighed 246 and John Manfuso weighed 236. That's a lot of—weight, if you know what I mean. Watch out for Jockey Don Meade when the horses get over to Hialeah. I believe he has been warming up for a crackdown. Seems strange to look at the race page these days and see nothing about Jockeys Taylor and Dew. Now for the winners. BILL.

First race—Hard Biscuit gets in this with a feather on his back and with that rigging looks like the winner of this sprint event. Breaks from the outside and I'm going to string along. Sobriety has plenty of speed and should be in the thick of contention. Baggrave is a possibility.

Second race—Mill Tower appears to be best of those gathered for this event. The alert apprentice, W. Eads, will do the riding and I'm going to string along. Peep Show is a fair one and may cause some trouble. Walloper for the minor award.

Third race—Red Burr gets a nice figure in company of this sort. Gets a modest weight assignment and deserves a top ranking here. Rest Awhile fits well in a field of this sort and will be a keen contender. Swing Leader has speed and may be a factor from that inside post.

Fourth race—Attracting likes this route and seems as good as anything in a rather open race. Needs only the right ride. I'm still waiting for White Hope to take one and he is dangerous in this field. Betty's Bob for the third money.

Fifth race—No Sir and Mythical King are a close fit in this field. I prefer them in the order named. Devil's Craig has plenty of foot and that inside post position may help.

Sixth race—John's Heir disappointed us in that recent start. However, he is better than that effort and may pop up at a long price. Domkin is in good form and appears second best. Highscope, a recent winner, should be a keen factor.

Seventh race—Tonypandy has shown good form hereabouts and seems on the way to a set of brackets in this company. Mary Schuls will have Meade in the saddle and is a threat. White Hot for a piece of the pay-off.

Eighth race—No Ending gets my call in the day's finale. Fails to race up to works but I have the word that this one is ready for the best. Jack Sting and Quaker Bras.

Best bet—Tonypandy.

Cubs' Billy Herman Working On Farm to Get in Shape

Veteran Second Sacker Has Competition for Job This Season

By the Associated Press

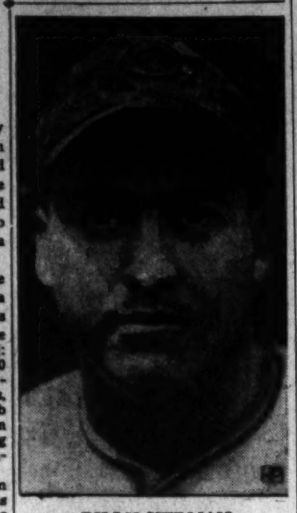
New Albany, Ind., Jan. 5.—Billy Herman, veteran second baseman of the Chicago Cubs, has chucked 20 bothersome pounds doing the chores on his farm this winter and says he figures he'll be in shape to keep off the baseball farms for a good while yet.

Herman, 33, said he was aware that the Cubs were bringing up a rookie in Lou Stringer of Los Angeles who is calculated to give him a run for his job, but added:

"I'm not 'chesty' and I admit 10 years' service with the Cubs is beginning to take effect on my legs, but I'll show Jimmy Wilson (Cub manager) who has rightful claim on second when we start spring training. I'm making my preparations now."

Herman's friends who knew him when, say that now that he has shelved his extra poundage he looks like the Billy who played second for the Louisville Colonels more than a decade ago.

To that, Herman added that another month of general farm work and a bit of hunting ought to put him "in the best shape on arrival for spring training since my early years with the Cubs."



BILLY HERMAN

Meanwhile, he's watching for the R. F. D. carrier who'll bring him his 1941 contract.

Maryland State Golf Group's Dinner-Meeting to Be in District

Old Line Body Designates Capitol For 1st Time; Willard Hotel Is Scene Jan. 17

For the first time in the 20-year history of the Maryland State Golf Association the annual dinner-meeting will be held in Washington, it was announced yesterday by Secretary Emmet Gary. All previous meetings have been held in or near Baltimore.

The Willard Hotel will be the scene on Friday, January 17. The dinner is set for 7 p. m. with the meeting following at 8:30.

The report of the nominating committee was also announced yesterday and the only changes from the 1940 slate are that John M. MacKenzie, of Baltimore, will succeed Francis M. Barker as president and Dr. Robert A. Keilty, slated to become the first president from Washington next year, succeeds MacKenzie as first vice-president.

Nominating Committee

The nominating committee, appointed by Barker is Myron Davy, president of Congressional Country Club; Howard E. Boyce, president, Baltimore C. C. and John G. Thomas, president, Green Spring Valley Hunt Club.

The remainder of the officers will remain intact and no new vice president was appointed to fill the vacancy. Thus three Washingtonians remain, Dr. Keilty, Harry G. Pitt, Manor, vice president and Albert E. Steinem, Woodmont, who retains his post as general counsel.

Other holdover officers are Baltimore vice presidents: Nathan R. Smith, jr., John D. Hospelhorn and Charles S. Catherman, sr., Edgar M. Lucas, vice president and treasurer, and Emmet Gary, secretary.

Following the usual plan of rotating the major tournaments, the State Amateur, Open and Junior will probably return to Baltimore this year with the women's championship coming back to Washington.

Merger to Be Discussed

Several new items will undoubtedly come before the club representatives, however, including a new method of deciding the State team championship, the problem of merging the three local and sectional golf associations and possibly a new angle on the public links situation.

The State golf meeting is one of four important links get-togethers slated for the next month. The Middle Atlantic meets Saturday night at the University Club, the District of Columbia women's executive committee votes on the new handicap changes January 15 at Kenwood and the District Men's Golf Association meets February 3, with the site still undecided.

Grid Coaches Favor 1941 Rule Changes

The three coaches agreed that the second proposed rule seemed the most important in its likelihood of causing any marked change in the game of football, but Bergman welcomed especially the first rule.

"This," he said, "is most important to colleagues with small squads such as Catholic University's. Unlimited substitutions will not only reduce injuries abetted by fatigue but enable undermanned teams to prevent a late crack-up induced by weariness.

"Also, and here is a point I haven't seen mentioned yet, it will enable a coach of a small squad to take more risks in experimenting with his untested players.

"Under the present substitution rule which states that any player removed from the game cannot be re-inserted until the following quarter, you cannot take a chance on playing some boy you're not sure of. He may make a couple of mistakes and cost you the ball game. If this new rule is passed, however, you can put any player in the lineup, observe him for a few plays, decide if he is going to be a hindrance or a help, and then take action."

Hagerty Looks Ahead

Hagerty and Reinhart foresaw in the proposed second rule allowing the ball to be handed forward anywhere behind the line of scrimmage as the forerunner of a rule permitting a forward pass to be thrown anywhere behind the line. Bergman, however, said he believed such a rule never would be passed for the college ranks.

Bergman, long an advocate of allowing the ball to be handed forward anywhere behind the line, thinks the possibilities for a new and trickier attack are tremendous, if this rule goes into effect. In this opinion he found ready supporters in compatriots Hagerty and Reinhart, both of whom indicated that they may have to slightly alter their offense to keep abreast of such a development.

Reinhart scoffed at those who think that this rule would revolutionize the college game and lay too great stress on offense, while under-balancing the defense.

"That's what some said seven or eight years ago when the lateral pass was introduced. But now you hardly ever see the lateral used.

"As long as all the teams play under the same rules means will be devised to meet any new trend in offense or defense. And good teams will always win, other things being equal."

Bergman, enthusiastic whenever he speaks of rule No. 2, believes the colleges will out-do the pros in their application and development of the forward-handled pass. It stands to reason that between 700 and 800 college coaches will work up more ideas on this than can the handful of pro coaches.

Maryland Park Wins in Soccer

Maryland Park won the lone soccer game of the Washington and Suburban League yesterday as they defeated Marlboro, 2 to 1, at the Maryland Park field. It was only the second loss of the season for the home team.

By virtue of their victory, the Maryland Park boys went into a tie with Regal for league honors. The two teams are scheduled to meet Sunday, January 19.

Wins Sixth Straight In Parochial League; Holy Comforter Wins

St. Matthew's took its sixth straight game in the Parochial League at Gonzaga High School yesterday by defeating St. Michael's, 16-7, and remained the only unbeaten team in the tournament.

Holy Comforter smothered St. Thomas by a 30-to-7 score, promising to give St. Matthew's a battle when they meet next Sunday. Holy Comforter has lost only one game and that by the forfeit route. In other games St. Martin's defeated St. Aloysius 25-14, St. James took a trouncing from Holy Name by the score of 29-6. Sacred Heart overcame Blessed Sacrament in a second half rush by the score of 13-6. St. Joseph's upset Immaculate Conception, 19-12.

1,700 Trout Placed In St. Mary's River

Harrisonburg, Va., Jan. 5 (AP).—A total of 1,700 marked trout have been placed in St. Marys River in the George Washington National Forest for the purpose of studying the extent of the movement of these fish.

A two-way fish trap was built on the river, Forest Supervisor M. C. Howard said, and the trout, averagine 11 inches in length, were planted in a 3-mile section of the river above the trap.

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown

Hans Kindler conducts the National Symphony Orchestra Sunday afternoon, in Constitution Hall. Program: Overture to "Proslana Nevesta" (Smetana). Symphony No. 3 in F major (Brahms), "Le Rouet d'Omphale" (Saint-Saens), "Pavane pour une Infante defunte" (Ravle), Excerpts from "Boris Godunov" (Musorgski).

Those to whom Brahms' third symphony is particularly dear found it rightfully placed on the program of yesterday's "Beloved Masterpiece" concert by the National Symphony Orchestra in Constitution Hall. Their affectionate regard for the work must have been intensified by the manner in which Hans Kindler and his consentient musicians set forth its glowing message of confidence in the integrity of the human spirit. The reading had eloquence in a high degree, a warmth of feeling and a clarity of expression that increased one's admiration for the conductor's guiding insight and for the skillful compliance of an orchestra that is steadily gaining in competence and in power.

BROWN

Absolute music, such as this symphony, requires no explanation. Commentators are tireless in their attempts to deduce extra-musical ideas from the score, but they arrive exactly at the point from which they started. William Apthorp, for example, saw in the first movement a relationship between the A flat of the three-note motif and the A natural of the principal theme which "can be explained only on the supposition of some underlying dramatic principle, such as the bringing of two opposing principles —Light and Darkness or Good and Evil, for on purely musical grounds the thing has little sense or meaning." It is precisely on musical grounds that the juxtaposition has meaning, and to shift the viewpoint to some other ground is to be nonsensical.

Dr. Kindler began the concert with Smetana's delightfully comic overture to "Prodana Nevesta," the opera which goes about under the erroneous English title of "The Bartered Bride." Since the plot involves no barter but a cash transaction and the "bride" is a betrothed girl, the title should be "The Sold Fiancee." In its atmosphere of fast and furious fun, the overture is matched only by Mozart's "Le Nozze di Figaro." Sir Donald Tovey has best described the movement of the principal theme "which runs around like a squirrel in a cage, trying to behave like a fugue, but unable to get away from the tonic."

The latter part of the program, a descent from the heights of the Brahms symphony, opened with Saint-Saens' tone-poem, "Omphale's Spinning Wheel," which was performed with finesse in instrumental shadings. There were also delicacies of tone, though of a different kind, in the performance of Ravel's stately pavane for a defunct royal princess of Spain. The concert closed with a stirring exposition of Dr. Kindler's arrangement of three selections from "Boris Godunov."

$3,000 From U. S. Helps Evacuate British Children

A total of approximately $3,000 has been sent from this country to aid evacuation of children from crowded cities of the British Isles to the highlands of Scotland, Corcoran Thom, president of the American Security & Trust Co., announced yesterday.

He is treasurer of the Scottish Clans Evacuation Plan, an organization with the avowed purpose of aiding child victims in Britain's bombed cities. His work as treasurer is carried out from his offices at the American Security & Trust Co.

The Scottish Clans Evacuation Plan was inaugurated in this country a couple of months ago by Mrs. Macneil of Barra at her estate on Sands Point, Long Island. Head of the organization in Inverness is Cameron of Lochiel. Lord Lieutenant of Aberdeenshire.

Flu Takes Mother, Girl Collapses And Dies of Grief

Denver, Jan. 5 (INS).—Services will be held Tuesday for 14-year-old Mary Sinsel, who died of a broken heart.

The golden-haired, blue-eyed girl, who last May won fame by taking fourth place in the national spelling bee at Washington, died yesterday 24 hours after her mother, Mrs. Anna Sinsel, 36, died of influenza.

From Friday on, Mary lay in bed at the home of her grandmother—speaking hardly a word and refusing all nourishment. Then she passed into a coma, and shortly afterwards died quietly in her grandmother's arms.

The grandparents declared her death undoubtedly was due to a broken heart.

Mother and daughter will be buried side by side after double funeral services.

La Follette Sees British Peace Move

Chicago, Jan. 5 (AP).—Philip F. La Follette, former Governor of Wisconsin, declared tonight that "the British do not intend to be pounded to pieces unless we get in this war and get in now."

In a radio speech under auspices of the America First Committee, La Follette declared, "there are already rumblings in Britain from both the right and the left, like those that heralded the collapse of France.

"There is a block of opinion in Britain, and in high places, which has closer ties with Germany than with the United States. Never forget that as late as February, 1939, representatives of British and German industry met at Dusseldorf. There they drew up a trade treaty the substance of which was to 'gang up' and drive American trade out of Central and South America."

B'nai B'rith Appoints Defense Committee

Appointment of a national B'nai B'rith defense committee to assist the national defense program by making available to the Government the manpower and machinery of the 900 B'nai B'rith units throughout the country was announced yesterday.

Maurice Bisgyer, of Washington, secretary of the organization, will serve as secretary of the committee.

U. S. Pension Still Goes to Daughter Of 1812 Veteran

The Veterans' Administration still is paying out pensions for the War of 1812 and the Mexican War of 1848.

The lone recipient of a War of 1812 pension, the Administration reported yesterday, was Esther Ann Hill Morgan, of Independence, Greg., daughter of John Hill, who served as a private with the New York Militia. Mrs. Morgan gets $30 a month.

Pensions were being paid during the fiscal year 1940 to 130 widows of Mexican war veterans, a decline of 38 from a year earlier.

The widows and children of 50,141 Civil War veterans were getting pensions when the year ended, a decrease of 7,774, while 2,381 Civil War veterans were receiving pensions.

The number of patients treated in Veterans' hospitals increased more than 8 per cent in the 1940 fiscal year. The total hospitalized was 238,202.

Pensions and compensation paid to World War veterans, including payments for non-service disabilities, amounted to $187,712,800, an increase of $3,663,418.

'Big 4 Brain Trust' To Be Created By Churchill

London (Monday), Jan. 6 (U.P.).—Prime Minister Churchill has decided to create a "big four brain trust" to direct war production, according to morning newspapers.

Ernest Bevin will be chairman, in charge of the whole field of war output. In his capacity of labor minister he also will be responsible for labor.

Lord Beaverbrook, minister for aircraft production, will be responsible for all air force production. Albert V. Alexander, first lord of the admiralty, will take care of the navy, and Sir Andrew Rae Duncan, supply minister, will handle the army.

Arthur Greenwood, minister without portfolio, whose duties the new committee will take over, will be relegated to a new ministerial post in charge of plans for postwar reconstruction, the newspapers said.

Dr. Oswald Wins Aircraft Award

New York, Jan. 5 (INS).—The annual Lawrence Sperry Award for notable contribution to aeronautics will be given to Dr. W. Bailey Oswald, 36, of the Douglas Aircraft Co., Lester D. Gardner, executive vice president of the Institute Aeronautical Sciences, announced tonight. It will cite his analytical studies in aerodynamics.

Peace Mobilization To Hear 5 Speakers

Five persons will address members of the Washington Peace Mobilization at Odd Fellow's Hall, 419 Seventh Street Northwest, at 8 p. m. today.

Speakers will include Herbert Biberman, of Hollywood; Thelma Dale, of the American Youth Congress; A. J. Isserman, of the National Federation for Constitutional Liberties; Goldie Watson, of the National Negro Congress, and Morris Watson, vice president of the American Newspaper Guild.

Baering Down On the News

By Arthur (Bugs) Baer

It is possible to be neutral in this world or a snuff factory by not breathing.

I still follow my old formula for not aggravating the inevitable. When you are in trouble to your neck don't make waves.

It looks like the next civilization will live so far underground that it will take a mile of string to get the dust off a kite.

One thing that puzzles me about 1941.' It isn't very old, yet Congress is agreeing with President Roosevelt and I can't figure which one is wrong.

My idea of neutrality is a tattooed sailor with a pretty picture on his arm but plenty of muscle underneath.

Steel Makers Reported Still Taking Orders

Wide Plates, Sheets, Bars Virtually Sold Out for 1st Quarter

By the Associated Press

Cleveland, Jan. 5.—Some steel companies are virtually out of the market due to their heavy backlogs of orders, but the majority are still placing orders on books—for delivery when material is available.

The magazine Steel, publishing this appraisal today, observed:

"On several products, particularly wide plates, bars and sheets, producers are virtually sold out for the first quarter. An independent maker of flat-rolled steel formally withdrew from the market on all his products for the first quarter. Though the company was not sold out completely, the action was designed to promote flexibility and enable more efficient allocation of orders on the little still available.

Orders Diversified

"Placing of steel orders both immediately before and after the two holidays showed exceedingly and unexpectedly brisk and widely diversified. For many makers and products December shipments exceeded November. Shipments of plates, bars and merchant pipe may have been the largest for any month for all time."

For 1941, the review forecast:

"Wide plates may be the scarcest finished steel item, partly because of extensive loss of ships. Bars seem destined to be continually brisk due to diverse uses. Shapes will continue active since the defense building program is by no means completed. Alloy steel will stand among the leading descriptions because of the many adaptations to defense. Sheets and strips will have many defense uses, such as roofing for cantonments, and other structures, military kitchen equipment, service automobiles and trucks."

New High and Lows

Tin plate may be more active, wire products should reflect revived farm demand, rails and accessories will be needed to maintain transportation and merchant pipe should be active, the magazine said.

Ingot production last week recovered 1.5½ points to 95½ per cent of practical capacity. The New England district lost 5 points to 85, but all other districts showed gains: Pittsburgh, 20½ to 95½; Chicago, 20 to 99½; Youngstown, 14 to 92; Cleveland, 12 to 84; Buffalo, 15 to 93; Birmingham, 16 to 100; Cincinnati, 14 to 82; St. Louis, 8 to 87½; Detroit, 14 to 90, and eastern Pennsylvania, 13 to 15.

Funeral Services Held in Alexandria For Miss Cochran

Funeral services for Miss Cora Lee Cochran, 77, of Alexandria, were held this afternoon at the Cunningham funeral home, conducted by the Rev. Ernest A. deBordenave, rector of St. Paul's Episcopal Church, and burial was in the family plot at Marshall, Fauquier County, Va.

Miss Cochran, one of the best known residents of Alexandria, died suddenly Friday at her apartment at 100 West Howell Avenue, where she had been moved recently while recuperating from an illness of several months in the Alexandria Hospital.

Miss Cochran was the daughter of the late George B. and Julia S. Newton Cochran, and was born in San Antonio, Tex., but had moved with her family to Alexandria during girlhood. She is survived by five brothers, Dr. Thomas B. Cochran, of Alexandria; John T. Cochran, a past grand master of Masons in Virginia, and Robert S. Cochran, both of The Plains, Va.

Meeting to Promote Racial Understanding

A mass meeting to focus public attention on the necessity for "complete racial understanding" as part of the defense program will be held at 8 p. m. today in the Old Interior Auditorium.

The meeting is sponsored by the Washington Urban League, a branch of a national organization seeking to promote racial amity through Negro and white cooperation in combating unemployment, poor housing, ill health, lack of recreation facilities and delinquency.

Inflation Outlook

By Roger W. Babson

No Immediate Peril in Sight

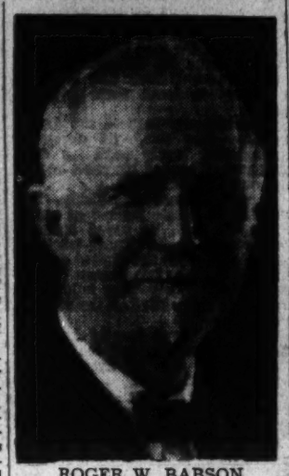
The size of the national debt is making many readers shiver. They wonder if their savings bank accounts are safe. They are concerned over their United States Savings bonds. They are confused over the term "National Income." Some wonder what the relationship is between national income and national debt. Will ultimately national income rise and wipe out the national debt?

Such questions, including inflation, are disturbing too many people. In order that readers may avoid needless worry, I will discuss these subjects.

OUR NATIONAL debt is approaching the present limit of $49,000,000,000. This limit, however, is bound to be raised. Some say a nation's expenses cannot long exceed its income any more than can an individual continue to fall deeper and deeper into debt without becoming insolvent. But, are these cases really similar? Notes of corporations and individuals are usually held by hard-boiled banks. Today, banks are large holders of Government notes and bonds.

Their attitude toward their government, for patriotic and other reasons, is more lenient than toward a corporation or an individual. Insurance companies and individuals also hold quantities of government paper. Until these groups refuse to longer hold these securities or buy new issues, there need be little fear of insolvency.

England is perhaps spending $40,000,000 a day. We have just started to spend. If the war lasts five years, regardless of our participation, we might double our present national debt. However, while our national debt is increasing, private debts are decreasing. Consider also that commercial paper rates are ½ to 1 per cent; commercial bank loans 1 to 3 per cent; savings bank interest is 0 to 2 per cent; mortgage rates are 4 to 5 per cent. Corporation indebtedness is continually being refunded at lower rates. It is costing a corporation, as well as a small businessman, less to maintain working capital today and to remain solvent than ever before.



ROGER W. BABSON

OUR NATIONAL income is running at the rate of 74-75 billion. This is the total income of individuals from all sources. It does not include profits from security sales, real estate, or other business transactions. It is simply income from salaries, wages, rents, dividends, interest, and various services rendered. It does not include corporate income. It has nothing to do with the income of our Government from taxation or other sources. Our Federal taxes are derived from national income. This is why the President is so anxious to see our national income raised to 80, or even 100, billion.

Savings invested in United States "baby" bonds are as safe as any investment can be today. They are the only investment in the world which will not shrink in dollar value. What our dollar may be worth in terms of goods as these bonds mature, no one knows. These bonds, however, purchased at a discount, automatically increase in dollar value, through accumulated interest at 2.9 per cent per year. A $100 bond costs only $75. Ten years hence you will be paid off at par, namely, $100. Any time after the first year you can turn the bond in at most postoffices and get your principal back plus accumulated interest. Yet, even these are not "inflation" proof.

There are many definitions of inflation. My favorite illustration is that of a rubber band. Hold the two ends between the thumb and fingers of each hand so that the middle of the band will be slack and roughly in the shape of a U. This U slack represents unemployment and idle plant capacity. While holding to each end of the rubber band, draw your hands slowly apart. The U will rise and gradually flatten out as the rubber band becomes taut. This tightening of the slack represents the employment of more people and a greater percentage of plant operation.

As people become fully employed, further pressure is exerted upon the inflation band. Factors outside of employment begin to show their influences. These are rises in pay rolls, increases in food costs, greater activity in real estate and stocks. Further tension is added to the band as productive capacities are reached. Then the rubber band continues to stretch until it finally snaps. This is a panic.

I CANNOT SEE any danger from inflation while millions are still unemployed and so much plant capacity is idle. Even in England with the effects of actual warfare being felt daily—where you would suppose that for defense purposes every able-bodied man would be working—there is still plenty of unemployment. In our own country, in spite of vast numbers returning to work, there are still 8,500,000 unemployed. We have not yet taken up our normal unemployment slack of 3,000,000 to 4,000,000. When we do this, I will begin to worry about inflation. We still have a long way to go in providing jobs. The draft, plus enlistments in the Army and Navy, is releasing relatively few jobs for our present unemployed. But some day real inflation will appear on the horizon. Before that happens I will try to warn you all through this column.

Court of Appeals Here to Publish Revised Rules

The United States Court of Appeals here has published revised rules of procedure, effective February 1, to replace the code followed since 1927. Copies will be available to attorneys in a few days.

The justices were aided in the revision by a committee which included G. Bowdoin Craighill, Paul E. Lesh, Louis G. Caldwell, Lawrence Koenigsberger, Duke M. Patrick and Edmund D. Campbell.

The new rules will bring practice in this jurisdiction into harmony with that followed in the other Federal circuits by revising fees and changing from 20 to 30 days the time allowed to file an appeal.

Much cost to litigants is expected to be saved by a provision that selected portions of a record shall be printed for study by the higher court, rather than the whole record.

Hopkins to Leave For London Today

New York, Jan. 5 (INS).—Harry Hopkins, President Roosevelt's personal envoy to Great Britain, will leave for London tomorrow morning at 8:30 aboard the Yankee Clipper, it was learned today. The President has made it clear that Hopkins will not serve as Ambassador to the Court of St. James.

Joseph P. Kennedy, present Ambassador to London, arrived at La Guardia Field tonight by plane from Miami, Fla., declining to answer any questions. He left for his Bronxville, N. Y., home.

Jackie Walsh, Tech Athlete, Reveals 5-Month-Old Marriage

Star Quarterback, Basketball Player's Bride Is Former Henrietta Baardse; Wed August 3

By Bill Burnett

A marriage which he kept a secret for five months, during which he turned in one of the finest jobs of scholastic quarterbacking of the season, yesterday was revealed by Jackie Walsh, McKinley High's brilliant two-letter athlete.

His wife is the former Henrietta (Penny) Baardse, a former schoolmate of Walsh's and the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Baardse, of 2201 Douglas Street Northeast.

JACK WALSH

Walsh, the 18-year-old star who led Tech's gridiron warriors to the play-off of the public high school series where a 7-0 defeat at the hands of Western was suffered, admitted yesterday that he and the former Miss Baardse were wed August 3, 1940, in Ellicott City, Md. Following his graduation this June, they plan to make their home with Walsh's parents at 1908 Newton Street Northeast.

Revelation of the union has been withheld, in young Walsh's words, "for fear there was some high school rule against married fellows competing in athletics." After consulting friends on Tech's teaching staff concerning the ruling, however, Walsh readily gave particulars of his marriage when questioned by The Post.

The 1940 football season saw the 155-pound triple-threater pace his club to six victories, two losses and one tie for one of its most sensational records in years. He personally attended to 26 of the Maroon and Gray's 116 points, passing to several more touchdowns.

In recognition of his efforts, Walsh was given a second-team quarterback berth on The Washington Post All-Metropolitan eleven in addition to positions on the first team of three local All-High selections.

A mainstay on Tech's cage club of 1939-40, Walsh has competed in only one of the school's basketball games to date. In that, however, he amassed 23 points for the individual high-scoring performance of the year.

Jackie and the new Mrs. Walsh have been acquainted for a year and a half. The bride graduated from Tech in June of 1940.

Thomson Here From Consular Post in Reich

Stationed at Dresden, He Is Noncommittal On Conditions Abroad

Alfred R. Thomson, American consul general in Dresden, Germany, is back here where he went to high school but with the State Department's "no interviews" seal on his lips.

THOMSON

Spending a two-month routine vacation here, Thomson would say nothing yesterday other than that unoccupied France "is just as beautiful as ever by way of scenery," that effects of war are felt in French restaurants and that the Germans still drink beer.

Thomson arrived in this country on the S. S. Excambion on December 23 and intends remaining with his family, at the Alban Towers Apartments, until March 3, when he is scheduled to return to Dresden.

He is a graduate of Central High School in the class of 1907 and is the son of the late Dr. Lewis B. Thomson, who long resided at 1821 Newton Street Northwest. The consul general has served in Russia, India, England and other lands.

He said he was "very glad" to return to this side of the Atlantic Ocean.

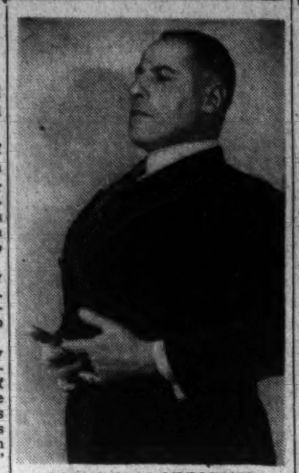
Exhale and Don't Exercise, Is Program Urged on Army

Soldiers Now Wilting On Their Feet, Breath Instructor Charges



GODFREY RODRIGUER

"Physical exercise has destroyed every country in the world," said Godfrey Rodriguer yesterday.

The self-styled professor of breathing is back in Washington with the intent of selling the War Department the idea that this country can have the strongest troops in the world—if Rodriguer is given a chance to teach them how to exhale.

"I want every man in the Army exhaling—like this," he declared. He exhaled loudly until his diaphragm had pushed his chest out to an estimated 54 inches.

Once Rodriguer was sickly. By learning to exhale instead of exercising, he said, he saved himself from certain death. That's what he plans to do with the United States Army if the War Department listens to his plan. "Those poor fellows in the camps are wilting on their feet," he said.

Give him three months keeping the men at exhaling and the United States Army will be unsurpassed, Rodriguer said.

"If they won't listen to me, if they keep passing me from one to another as they have been, I warn you that I'll take my plan to every foreign consul in the city," he continued. "And I'll say to these foreign consuls, 'The leaders of our glorious country have failed to recognize the truth when it's put before them.'"

Mexico Probes Nazi Officials' Activity There

Gestapo Organizer And Ex-Military Chief Of Berlin Watched

By the Associated Press

Mexico City, Jan. 5.—The reported presence of a German secret police organizer and a former military governor of Berlin in Mexico, along with recent pro-Nazi, anti-Jewish manifestations, was said by responsible diplomatic sources today to have prompted a new investigation of Axis aims in Mexico.

These sources said there has been a shake-up in the leadership of Vanguardia Nacionalista, Mexican nationalistic, anti-Semitic political party, which has taken to disseminatnig its ideas at street rallies.

These developments, diplomatic and police sources said, are being watched closely as possible symptoms of further steps to come—perhaps hinging upon the course of the European war.

Names Are Kept Secret

These sources said the former Berlin official was in Mexico ostensibly as a salesman of machine guns and other arms of German manufacture, but that he had negotiated no contracts.

The Gestapo (Nazi secret police) organizer was said to have arrived a few days ago from the Dominican Republic after operating in Panama and Guatemala.

Sources who said they had followed the activities of the two asked that their names not be disclosed. They declared that almost every Japanese passenger vessel arriving at Mexico's Pacific ports recently has disembarked a number of Germans. Twenty-nine were said to have landed from one ship alone.

Objectives Declared 2-Fold

Immediate objective of Nazi-Fascist propaganda in Mexico was said to be two-fold:

To spread a whispering campaign that the United States is about to enter the European war, taking Mexico in against Germany, and

To counteract the effect of Vice President-elect Henry A. Wallace's visit to Mexico by saying Mexico is being bossed from the United States, and that President Manuel Avila Camacho is managing Mexico's affairs according to a blueprint drafted in Washington.

Both these whispering campaigns were said to have met with credulity on the part of some Mexicans.

Contract Bridge

Here is a group of example hands on which you can test your skill at picking good leads. In each case the contract is three no trump, and your partner has bid spades. What card do you lead with each of these hands?

1. ♠ ♡ Q J 10 7 2 ◇ 9 5 3 2 ♣ 7 6 2
2. ♠ 6 2 ♡ 9 7 3 ◇ 8 6 4 2 ♣ 7 5 2
3. ♠ 2 6 2 ♡ Q J 7 4 3 ◇ 7 3 2 ♣ 8 6
4. ♠ Q 6 2 ♡ K Q J 7 3 ◇ 9 4 2 ♣ 7 5

Key to Leads

1. The queen of hearts is a safe lead which offers some chance of taking a trick or two. It is to be preferred to leading a singleton of partner's spades.

2. Any five-card suit is not sufficient reason to lead it in preference to partner's. With this hand the diamonds are too weak to consider playing; lead the six of spades.

3. The fact that you hold the queen of your partner's bid makes for an easy decision with this hand. Do not try the hearts; lead the deuce of spades.

4. Since the heart suit can probably be established in one lead, it is to be preferred to leading partner's suit. As you will probably be able to hold the first trick in hearts at any rate, declarer holding up his ace, you can decide after dummy goes down whether to continue the hearts or switch to spades.

U. S. Accused Of Seeking State Control

Treasury's Efforts To Lift Tax Exemptions Attacked at Conference

New York, Jan. 5 (AP).—Austin J. Tobin, secretary of the Conference on State Defense, declared today that the United States Treasury was seeking "to vest in Washington the supreme power to tax, regardless of the rights or the needs of the States or the municipalities."

In a statement on Treasury proposals to remove tax exemptions from city or State securities, Tobin asserted:

"The real issue is the attempt of the Federal Government to usurp the functions of State and local government and to control their operations."

Tobin said the conference was composed of 1,200 State and municipal officials throughout the country opposed to Federal taxation of the now exempt notes and bonds.

He assailed what he said were "misinforming and misleading" Treasury statements "designed to give the public the impression" that exempt securities were "a source of widespread tax evasion." He added:

"The Treasury's own records, over the 10-year period ending in 1937, show that all estates reported for estate tax purposes averaged only 5 per cent of their principal invested in State and municipal bonds."

He added that "if a statute asserting Federal power to tax future issues of local securities is held Constitutional, it will open the door to similar taxation of securities which have already been issued as tax exempt."

Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau took a step toward removal of tax exemptions early in December when he announced a $500,000,000 National Defense note issue subject to all Federal taxes.

Simultaneously, he said he hoped States and municipalities would help to remove exemptions generally and announced he would seek authorization to make all future Federal securities issues taxable.

Merchants to Aid Birthday Ball Unit

The Committee for the Celebration of the President's Birthday announced yesterday that the Nation's leading retail establishments will cooperate with the 1941 Fight Infantile Paralysis campaign.

Several mercantile councils and associations of stores assured the committee that they would help in the distribution of 300,000 coin boxes for the drive, it was said.

Pros and Cons On British Aid Clash in Forum

Each Side Agrees Propaganda Spread By Other Is Dangerous

Representatives of propaganda groups at odds over the national defense question agreed in a radio forum last night that propaganda is dangerous—the type of propaganda spread by the opposition.

The Committee to Defend America by Aiding the Allies was represented at an uproarious session of Theodore Granik's American Forum of the Air, broadcast from the Willard Hotel, by Clark M. Eichelberger, national director, and Mrs. Irving Berlin, wife of the popular composer.

Sidney Hertzberg, national publicity director of the America First Committee, and Miss Mary W. Hillyer, of the Keep America Out of War Congress, spoke for the opposition.

"The same false prophets and propagandists that kept the United States from cooperating with other nations to prevent war are the same group that would now prevent the United States from defending itself," declared Eichelberger. "The isolationists of yesterday are the defeatists of today and the appeasers of tomorrow."

Urges 24-Hour Schedule

He said American industrial life should be mobilized on a 24-hour basis to provide all possible material aid to Great Britain.

"When William Rhinelander Stewart," said Miss Hillyer, "pays $10 to pluck a gold star from the translucent, if not transparent tights of Gypsy Rose Lee at the Star-Spangled Ball of the Committee to Defend America by Aiding the Allies, we have propaganda of the more obvious kind, as transparent as the cobweb garb of Miss Lee, and therefore hardly dangerous."

But, she added, when the committee causes a flood of telegrams to be sent to President Roosevelt urging "'all aid to Britain' without specifying what "'all aid' means, then 'this is propaganda of the most insidious kind—it is emotional; it is inexact.'"

Mrs. Berlin said some propaganda was dangerous—"propaganda that confuses us and weakens our will; propaganda that is often innocently, part of the German strategy of terror."

The best example of such propaganda, she declared, is Anne Lindberg's book, "The Wave of the Future."

Sees Mrs. Lindbergh in Error

"This sensitive and gentle woman," she said, "has been bewildered and frightened by skillful Nazi propaganda. In this war Mrs. Lindbergh would have us believe that there is a conflict—not between good and evil—but between the old and the new. . . . Democracy is a lot newer than tyranny."

Hertzberg said dangerous propaganda was the type spread by the Aid to the Allies Committee, the actual aim of which has been "to aid the Allies at any cost—war or no war."

He said it was pertinent that no official statements of the William Allen White group contain the phrase "short of war."

"It says," he declared, "we cannot allow the Allies to be defeated—period."

In a lively debate that followed their opening statements, Hertzberg named Robert Sherwood, Herbert Agar and Francis P. Miller as leaders of the White committee who openly advocated a declaration of war against Germany. Eichelberger said they had no leading part in forming the committee's policy, were not even members of the board of directors.

Berlin in Audience

Miss Hillyer called for improvement of economic conditions inside the United States before a full-out armament program, to which Mrs. Berlin replied:

"I can't believe that you don't believe in the defense program. Why the only people who feel that way are the Communists."

Mrs. Berlin's husband was an attentive member of the audience of several hundred who heard the Nation-wide broadcast first hand.

Questioned afterwards on whether his wife wrote speeches as well as he wrote music, he heedfully replied:

"Well, I will say that, believe me, I've never been as proud of myself as I was of her tonight."

THE CAPTAIN WANTS TO SEE YOU.
YESSIR.
PALOOKA, YOU WERE A.W.O.L. AND OFFERED NO EXCUSE.
I GOT NO EXCUSE SIR. RULES IS RULES.
*TO ALL THE OFFICERS AND MEN AT THE VARIOUS CAMPS WHO HAVE WRITTEN REQUESTING JOE TO BE IN THEIR OUTFITS—IT'S TOO LATE. HOWEVER IF THE WAR DEPARTMENT'LL LET HIM, HE'LL COME AND BOX AT YOUR OUTFIT LATER ON. IN THE MEANWHILE—I'M SWAMPED AND CAN'T ANSWER ALL THE MAIL BUT A MILLION THANKS FROM US PALOOKAS.
YOU KNOW WE'RE HUMAN HERE. WHY DIDN'T YOU TELL US WHAT YOU DID FOR THOSE PEOPLE WHO WERE INJURED?
WHO TOLE YOU I MEAN ESCUSE ME SIR. I MEAN—NOW WHO COULDA TOLE THAT?

WINNIE WINKLE — Taking No Chances — BY BRANNER

SO. THIS IS THE FAMOUS BROWN BOWLER RESTAURANT!
YES, IS GOOD TO BE SEEN HERE! ALL PRODUCERS, AGENTS, CASTING DIRECTORS, AND ACTORS ARE COMING HERE!
I MUST SAVING YOUR HELP HERE IS BEING VERY POLITE!
THAT'S BECAUSE THE GIRLS HAVE NEVER SEEN YOU BEFORE AND YOU MIGHT BE A NEW PRODUCER OR CASTING DIRECTOR—THEY'RE ALL TRYING TO GET INTO THE MOVIES, Y'KNOW!

MR. AND MRS. — Jack Sprat and Wife — BY ARTHUR FOLWELL AND ELLISON HOOVER

WHAT'S THAT YOU'RE THROWING AWAY?
THIS TREE WE'VE HAD IN THE YARD SINCE CHRISTMAS
BUT THEY TOLD US THAT TREE WOULD LIVE—IT'S AN EVERGREEN
WELL, IT ISN'T AN EVERGREEN NOW
BUT ARE YOU SURE IT'S DEAD?
TAKE A LOOK AT IT YOURSELF. WHAT DO YOU THINK?
BUT YOU'RE SO IMPETUOUS. YOU'RE ALWAYS THROWING THINGS AWAY
AND YOU'RE ALWAYS KEEPING THINGS THAT ARE NO GOOD

NAPOLEON AND UNCLE ELBY — BY CLIFFORD McBRIDE

Jeanette Nolan, Joan Banks and Richard Widmark, all top-ranking radio actors, have been signed for the major roles in the Columbia network's new daily dramatic show to be known as "The Home of the Brave." You'll be able to hear it over WJSV each week day, starting today.

The continued story, telling of the day-to-day life of modern pioneers in the modern West—there'll be no cowboys and Indians, it seems—is being written by Pauline nad Frederick Gilsdorf, a radio writing team known to network audiences for their creation of "Lorenzo Jones," "Mother o' Mine," "Wings for the Martins," and "The Ghost of Benjamin Sweet" for the Columbia Workshop.

Jeanette Nolan is on the preferred list of radio directors. Despite her youth, she's a radio veteran and has been heard for years on such network shows as "Cavalcade of America" and "Manhattan at Midnight."

Miss Banks you've heard in various network productions ever since 1936. She's had lead parts in "Her Honor Nancy James," "This Day Is Ours" and been on any number of Kate Smith's dramatic productions.

Widmark taught dramatics for a while at Lake Forest University in Illinois and then came to radio after extensive experience in stock. You've heard him in "The Shadow," "Grand Central Station," "Aunt Jenny," and in many Columbia Workshop productions.

The Post Radio Time Table

2 p. m., WJSV, WMAL, WRC and WOL—President Roosevelt addresses the Seventy-seventh Congress, convened in joint session in the House chamber. The speech, expected to last between 30 and 45 minutes, will be rebroadcast by WMAL tonight at 9.

2:45, WJSV—Here's a new serial: The Home of the Brave. Its setting is a "ghost town" of the modern west, deserted some eight years ago when the mines were shut down. Two couples are the central figures.

7:30, WRC—Turnabout is fair play, so Gracie Allen and George Burns play host to Eddie Cantor, returning their visit to his New Year's Day program.

8, WRC—James Melton and Francia White sing with Donald Voorhee's orchestra in this first half-hour of the red network's full Monday evening hour of light classical music. The latter program finds Richard Crooks singing a new theme song, "If I Could Tell You," by Mrs. Idabelle Firestone, who composed the program's previous theme, and copyright by BMI.

9, WMAL—Transcription of President Roosevelt's speech to Congress.

9, WJSV—Alice Faye and Don Ameche play the roles created by Ginger Rogers and James Stewart in "Vivacious Lady."

9:45, WOL—Representative John H. Tolan, of California, chairman of the special committee investigating interstate migration of destitute people, is joined in a discussion of the problem by Federal Security Administrator Paul V. McNutt and Defense Advisory Commission member Chester C. Davis.

10:30, WMAL—Senator Warren R. Austin, Vermont, ranking minority member of the Senate Military Affairs Committee, gives his views on aid to Great Britain, China and Greece.

10:30, WRC—Wisconsin's Philip LaFollette on "Peace or War for the U. S."

TERRY AND THE PIRATES — BY MILTON CANIFF

WONDER OF WONDERS! GREAT IRON BIRDS BATTLED IN THE SKY—AND ONE FELL WOUNDED IN THE RICE FIELDS!
INDEED, WE WITNESSED THE ACT! ALAS, THE FALLEN ONE BORE THE EMBLEM OF CHINA!
THE STRICKEN EAGLE DOWNED AN INVADER BIRD BEFORE HE HIMSELF FELL TO EARTH! BEHOLD, OTHERS PRECEDE US TO THE SCENE OF DESTRUCTION! THEY HAVE TAKEN THE FLYING MAN FROM THE MACHINE!
BUCKY WING! I HAVEN'T SEEN YOU SINCE WE WERE AT COLLEGE IN THE UNITED STATES!
TOO BAD I HAD TO CRACK UP AN EXPENSIVE SHIP TO SEE PRETTY LITTLE HU SHEE—BUT IT'S WORTH IT!
CUDDLE ME CLOSE, HU SHEE! I'M NOT GOING TO LOSE TRACK OF YOU THIS TIME!
AH—TERRY...DON'T YOU THINK WE SHOULD SEE IF WE CAN SALVAGE ANYTHING FROM YOUNG WING'S PLANE?

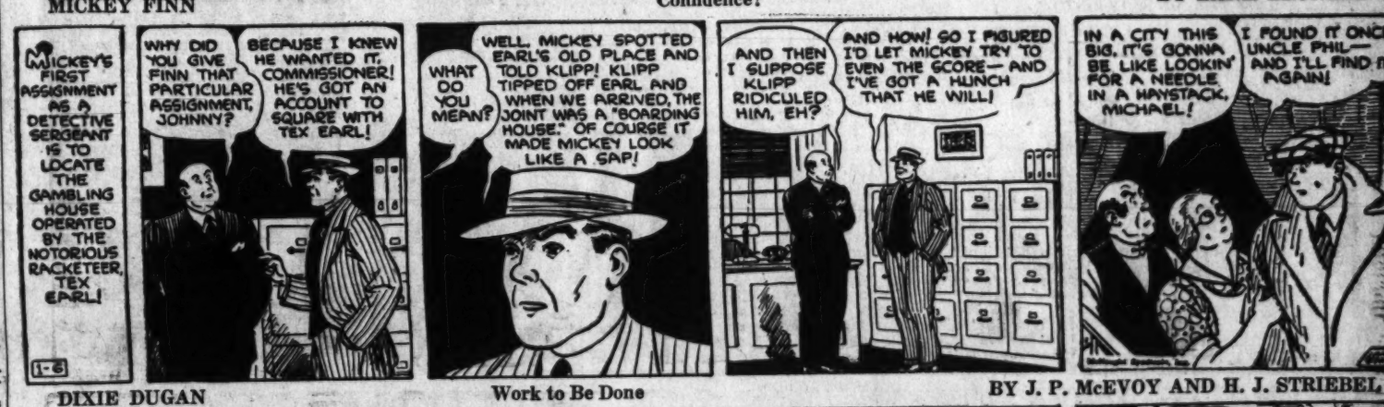
MICKEY FINN — Confidence! — BY LANK LEONARD



MICKEY'S FIRST ASSIGNMENT AS A DETECTIVE SERGEANT IS TO LOCATE THE GAMBLING HOUSE OPERATED BY THE NOTORIOUS RACKETEER, TEX EARL!
WHY DID YOU GIVE FINN THAT PARTICULAR ASSIGNMENT, JOHNNY?
BECAUSE I KNEW HE WANTED IT, COMMISSIONER! HE'S GOT AN ACCOUNT TO SQUARE WITH TEX EARL!
WELL, MICKEY SPOTTED EARL'S OLD PLACE AND TOLD KLIPP! KLIPP TIPPED OFF EARL AND WHEN WE ARRIVED, THE JOINT WAS A "BOARDING HOUSE." OF COURSE IT MADE MICKEY LOOK LIKE A SAP!
WHAT DO YOU MEAN?
AND THEN I SUPPOSE KLIPP RIDICULED HIM, EH?
AND HOW! SO I FIGURED I'D LET MICKEY TRY TO EVEN THE SCORE—AND I'VE GOT A HUNCH THAT HE WILL!

DEL RIO GETS NEW TEXAS BAND. George Ray's nine-musician band from Texas will open in Del Rio's Fiesta Room on Wednesday. This notable Western outfit is an "entertaining orchestra," combining vaudeville stunts with the 1941 brand of dance music. Hailing from just north of the Rio Grande, their Texan novelties will be highly appropriate for the Fiesta Room. Every member of the band doubles on instruments, joins in the novelty stunts. . . Don Martinic's Pan-American orchestra continues in the Tropicana Room. And Herbie Sachs promises there'll soon be a blonde songstress in the Fiesta, a black-eyed warbler in Tropicana . . . And you've only tonight and tomorrow to say good-by to Ray Bradford and his boys who've made so many friends at Del Rio in recent months.

Vic Nini and Kay Howard, clever diversionists at Ciro's Famous Village

Hi Hat's Jimmy Summerville and his Four M's who have just received a 16-week engagement extension, are justifiably delighted. When they wind up on May 1 they'll have been at Hi Hat for a solid seven months, a splendid testimonial to the popularity of the Summerville diversion ideas. They expect to leave for California early in May.

PRIZE SOCIAL-ENTERTAINMENT EVENT will be the night spot debut of Patricia Prochnik at Troika tomorrow eve. Society will turn out en force to hear the warbling of the blonde Patrica who was Washington's No. 1 debutante of last season and whose picture occupies a prominent spot in the February American magazine. Also joining the Troika revue will be Valya Valentinoff, dancer who recently scored at the Capitol Theater, has also been starred at New York's Rainbow Room and Paradise.

OFF TO NASSAU on May 18 will be Arthur Todd, of the King Cole Room, who's due for another season at the fashionable Bahamians Club. Arthur has a better than even chance to play golf with the Duke of Windsor, since in previous Nassau seasons he's golfed often with Lady Malloy-Kies, whose Biarritz home was recently occupied by the Windsors.

"MUSIC WITH A SMILE" by Ray Heatherton's band, newest "name" unit of the Metronome Room, is evoking both smiles and joy at Wardman. Young Massa Heatherton is unique in being both star singer and maestro, has led his band on the three major networks for the bigger ciggie and tooth paste sponsors, also appeared in such topflight musical successes as "Babes in Arms" and "Little Jesse James." His music is of the newest "sweet" genre, both listenable and danceable. Dainty but peppery Judy Clark is the band's femme canary.

Busiest girl in town is violinist Jane Marlow, of Restaurant 823 Fifteenth Street. She plays for luncheon, the afternoon cocktail hour and from 8:30 to 1 a. m., with entirely different programs for each period.

SHARON LYNN and her dancers head the all-new revue at Casino Royal today. There'll also be dancers De Mar and Denise, other vaudeville acts. Jack Schafer, our town's premier "jive" man, has broken out a new song, "The Cat Fell in the Well," supposedly based on the nursery rhyme—but we're sure that Mother Goose is spinning in her sepulchre.

FOR BEST BMI TUNES listen to Paul Kain's group in Mayfair. As leader of the WJSV studio orchestra, Paul has been scanning BMI numbers by the thousand, is partial to the new rumba, "Maracaibo" and "It All Comes Back to Me Now."

ON THE SWEET SIDE. "You're Breaking My Heart All Over Again," newest melodic love of Maestro Milton Davis, of the Rainbow Room, who vows it's bound for the top of the heap . . . "Have Pity on Me," brain baby of Matt Windsor, of the Anchor Room. Matt and Eileen George sing it duo . . . The violin trio of Al Alviti, Paul Inbody and Meyer Ratner, in the Cosmos Room. Especially in waltzes . . . The pretty caroling of "sweetheart numbers" by Helen Malcolm and Peggy Wood at the Silver Fox . . . And you'll love "Mimi," the old Maurice Chevalier hit, as aired by Jean Cathon in La Salle Versailles. . . . Sweetest memory of all is the way Beverly Stull used to play "Hail to the Redskins" pianissimo just for Coach Ray Flaherty, of the Redskins. Used to play it right, for Coach Flaherty isn't being seen around currently.

Talia, siren of the bubble dance, who had the Shoreham in a dither last summer, will head the Blue Room show opening today. There'll also be dancers Columbus and Carroll and those roaring good fellows, the Three Gay Blades, are due to be held over.

ON THE HOT SIDE. Milt Herth's newest, "Scrub Me, Mamma, With a Boogie Beat." Every time he plays it the Neptune Room ringsiders go into frenzies . . . "Fresh as a Daisy," the "Panama Hattie" hit, as polished off by "Ha-Cha" Gardner in the Mayflower Lounge . . . The weird but original version of the "Irish Washerwoman's Jig" dished out by Jimmy Bright, of Bill Strickland's Lotus band . . . For Latin steam listen to "La Cucharaca" as warmed up by Madrillon's Trio Lirico.

PETE MACIAS' Lounge Riviera band is one that isn't limited to BMI tunes in their broadcasting. They're playing over WINX, which uses ASCAP music, on Wednesday and Friday evenings.

SEAFOOD TREATS are those fried oysters with bacon served in the Harrington Tavern. One of the best of typically American dishes, the bacon giving the oysters just the right tang . . . You'll find a similar palate teasing flavor to the panned oysters with Smithfield ham in Dick's Grill.

Hillbilly music and oldtime square dancing will have their innings at Kavakos' Grill tomorrow eve. Swing yo' partners and around you go! . .

Census Found Five Millions Seeking Work

Total of Unemployed Is Believed Lower Than Estimates Said

The Census Bureau estimated yesterday that 5,110,270 persons were without jobs of any kind and looking for work last March.

The figure was obtained by using a 5 per cent cross-section of the population enumerated in each of the 154,000 census districts last April. The bureau said that some variation could be expected in a final tabulation.

The preliminary calculation showed the population included 100,972,196 persons 14 years of age or over, of whom 45,350,430 were employed in private jobs or non-emergency Government work; 5,110,270 had neither public nor private jobs and were looking for work, and 2,380,062 were employed on public emergency projects—WPA, NYA or CCC.

9,000,000 in School

This left 48,131,434 persons aged 14 or over who were not in the labor force. It included: 28,838,484 engaged in housework; 9,070,986 in school; 5,220,096 unable to work; 1,226,374 in institutions; 1,986,348 not seeking work for other reasons, and 1,789,144 whose status concerning employment was undetermined. The bureau said it was believed the majority of the latter group "was not in the labor force."

The large number of undetermined status and other factors made direct comparison of the bureau's figures with estimates of the number of unemployed impossible.

However, its figures for jobseekers, emergency workers and those whose status was not determined totaled 9,279,476. As of January 1, 1940, some estimates of the total number of unemployed were:

From the National Industrial Conference Board (an organization drawing some of its support from corporations), 9,300,000; American Federation of Labor, 10,200,000; Congress of Industrial Organizations, 12,000,000.

Lower Than Estimates

If the Bureau's conclusion be accepted that most of those of undetermined status were not potential workers, the total of unemployed a year ago would be nearly a million below the lowest of these private estimates.

However, the bureau said that considerable correction was probable in the final classification of workers on public emergency jobs, since the total of such workers was 3,377,701, according to Federal Agency records, at the end of March.

Much of the discrepancy, the bureau said, probably resulted from a tendency of relief workers to report themselves as engaged in private or non-emergency Government work, and from uncertainty of the census enumerators on the proper classification. For instance, many of the NYA rolls were listed in the census as students.

The division of the labor force was 39,994,197 males and 12,846,565 females, of these, 36,149,465 males and 11,581,027 females had jobs and 3,844,832 males and 1,265,538 were seeking work. Women predominated among persons outside of the labor force, with 37,511,327 females and 10,620,107 males.

Admiral Leahy, New Ambassador, Arrives at Vichy

Vichy, France, Jan. 5 (AP).—Admiral William D. Leahy, United States Ambassador to France, arrived tonight in the capital of unoccupied France.

The admiral rode in a special salon car which he had boarded at Nimes.

He was met by Maurice Loze, protocol officer of the foreign office, and a group of American officials.

A dispatch from Rabat, Morocco, said Robert D. Murphy, United States Charge d'Affaires at Vichy, lunched yesterday with Gen. Auguste Nogues, former supreme commander of the French defense forces in North Africa, and returned later to Casablanca.

Murphy is touring United States consulates in North Africa.

Fate Is in Public's Hands, Says Irving Berlin of ASCAP Strife

Composer's Wife Will Broadcast On Forum Here

The public will have to decide radio's music war, for it's the public that pays—through the ear—in the battle between the Nation's composers and the radio chains, Irving Berlin said yesterday.

The famous songwriter was at the Willard Hotel last night, holding his wife's hand as the former Ellin Mackay prepared nervously for her first radio broadcast—participation in the American Forum of the Air.

But the small, dark, energetic composer, whose ballads are hummed the world around, left his wife's fretful side for a few minutes to talk calmly and dispassionately about the conflict between the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers (ASCAP) and the broadcasting companies.

With all the other established songwriters who belong to ASCAP, his music has been banned from the air, except for a few independent stations, because the radio chains have refused to pay the price ASCAP demanded for the use of ASCAP-controlled tunes.

It was clear that it cut deeply to have his work of 33 years lie dormant. He has written 750 songs. More than 200 are still being played.

And what will he do? What can he do? What can he do, for example, with his new compositions, now that their greatest outlet is closed. If he had written "God Bless America" last week, the people might never have heard it.

"And I'm a lot better off than most of the boys," he said. "A lot better. A lot of them are dependent for their livelihood on a settlement of the dispute. Six months of this and they'd be in a pretty bad way."

But so, too, he believes, would the radio chains. He is sure the people will not stomach all the unfamiliar tunes they now hear over the air waves, even though some of them are good.

And although he is a founder-member of ASCAP, he called himself "just a guy in the ranks," and said of the ASCAP directors and the radio moguls:

"I have been hoping that the Government would step in and knock their heads together and get a little sense in them."

IRVING BERLIN

Disputants Air Views

By the Associated Press

Warring parties in the Nation's battle of radio music laid down a continuing barrage of statements yesterday.

The National Association of Broadcasters made public a telegraphic survey of 125 radio stations which it said reported "negligible" protests against the radio ban on music controlled by the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers.

From John G. Paine, ASCAP's general manager, came the counter assertion that the broadcasters were "whistling in the dark" and that "if they have not noted any resentment by the public they must be playing ostrich."

Crux of the dispute is the radio industry's refusal to agree to increased charges demanded by ASCAP for use of its music on broadcasts. Broadcast Music, Inc., was set up by the broadcasters to stupply radio with music.

Some orchestra leaders, objecting to a requirement that they indemnify radio stations for any fines sustained by broadcasting ASCAP tunes, withdrew from their sustaining programs.

The Nation's radio audience got a first-hand test of the controversy Saturday night when the "Your Hit Parade" program went on the air limited exclusively to BMI music. The show was presented as the "Nation's ten favorite songs that may be played on the Nation's networks."

Gene Buck, ASCAP president, commented that prior to Saturday night, "the program presented the leading songs of the week, based on careful and accurated surveys by the sponsor. All ASCAP ever got out of the program was $218.50. That's the whole controversy. The program has been changed by the broadcasters from a hit parade to a bit parade . . . "
